JAMES MURPHY SERIOUSLY CUT BY PATRICK DENNY.

Monson, which is usually free from unusual excitements, was considerably stirred up last evening by a cutting affair, in which James Murphy, an overseer in Reynolds' woolen mill, was badly hurt by Patrick Denny, a farm hand in the employ of Peter Hayes. Dr. Rand was called and found the wound to be an ugly one fully 12 inches long, commencing at the left side of the abdomen, below the ribs, and extending clear across the body, in all probability a fatal one. Denny formerly worked in the mill, but was discharged some time ago for refusing to do certain work when ordered to, and for some unaccountable reason has taken a dislike to Murphy, following him about and making threats against him, and yesterday he was heard to say, "If I don't fix one of 'em I will the other," probably meaning Murphy or his wife. About 8 o'clock last evening Murphy started to go up street, and when near Reynolds' "old" mill met Denny, who was coming up the other side of the street. He immediately crossed over and grabbing Murphy by the throat exclaimed: "You're just the man I want to see; I've been looking for you for some time," then made a lunge for him with the knife. Murphy grabbed the knife with both hands, thus staying the blow, otherwise he would probably have been killed outright. Some bystanders at once grabbed Denny, and he was locked up, stating that he was glad he did it, and hoped his victim would die. He was arraigned at the district court in Palmer this morning on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon, and the case continued until the 23d; $5000 bonds were required, which he was unable to procure. The weapon was a common pocket knife, and exceedingly sharp, cutting through a heavy vest, thick woolen shirt and undershirt, and was thrown into the flume of the mill, where it was found by Officer Thompson this morning, covered with blood even after an all nights' soaking in the water. Murphy is a popular and respected citizen about 57 years old. Denny is about 40, and considered somewhat cranky, especially on the labor question.

WARE AND VICINITY.

C. H. Trench starts Monday for a trip to Illinois.

Quite a delegation from Ware are planning to go to Block Island next week.

P. J. Nelligan is concreting the drive way to the town hall entrance on West street.

Fred E. Marsh has bought the house in which he has lived for some years in Eddy court.

The Social Science Club announce an ice cream party in the reception room of the town hall.

The Canadian circle are to send delegates to the state convention to be held August 9, 10 and 11.

James Brown of Ware Center had his shoulder dislocated by falling from a mowing machine.

H. C. Davis, Esq., with his wife and two sisters, are taking a vacation at Chicago and the northwest.

F. Bombard leaves Monday for a three-weeks' vacation, taking a drive to Lake George and vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Bryson and Frank G. Fox started Monday for a trip with a Raymond party to Niagara Falls and Saratoga.

Dr. W. L. Roberts is going on a three-weeks' trip through Maine and New Hampshire in the interest of the Arabian Spavin Cure Co.

The assessors' work is approaching completion. The total valuation of the town is $4,035,000. The rate of taxation is $15 per $1000; fire tax $1.40.

John Dexter, who has been in the employ of the Otis Company for about 22 years, has just returned from a visit to his old home in Manchester, England.

J. J. Kidgell of West Boylston has received the appointment of station agent at Ware on the Central Mass. R. R., and John E. Sheehan is baggage master.

Ex-Representative Crosby, of Enfield, was in town this week, probably for the purpose of "looking after his fences," as it is called in political parlance.

There will be no more preaching services at the Unitarian church until the first Sunday in September. The hour for the Sunday school until that time will be 1030 a. m.

Mrs. M. Conroy, of William street, was before the district court last week for selling liquor without license and fined $50. Her husband is now in jail for a similar offense.

Rev. A. T. Perry held preaching service at District No. 9 school-house in Hardwick last Sunday afternoon. There is some talk of establishing a Sunday school in this district.

Miss Emma V. Hall, principal of the English preparatory school at Honolulu, is on her way home and expected here some time next month, to remain two or three months.

On account of a leak in the main the water was shut off from Main street nearly all day Wednesday. All appreciated the value of good water more than ever when deprived of its use for a day.

Places where fruit, confectionery, etc., have been sold on Sunday were notified by the selectmen that they must not continue doing so, consequently those who did not buy their goods of this kind last Saturday had to borrow or go without on Sunday.

By taking the morning train on the Central Massachusetts R. R. parties of six or more may have a pleasant day's outing, at a small expense, at Wachusett Mountain, Lake Waushacum, or Sterling Camp Ground by making arrangements with A. R. Wells, conductor on trains Nos. 96 and 209. Barges will be in readiness at Oakdale or West Boylston on arrival of trains.

Selectmen Cummings and Sibley, assisted by the officers, made a raid on Arthur Kane's saloon on Water street last Friday evening. Nothing was found in the saloon, but in the residence adjoining a quantity of whisky was seized. Arthur Kane and son, Arthur Kane, Jr., were both arrested and placed under bonds to appear at the district court to answer to a charge of liquor nuisance and resisting the officers.

At the annual meeting of the French Canadian circle, held in Guild's block on Sunday, these officers were elected for 1887–8: President, Henry A. Mongrain; vice president, Henry Bordeau; secretary, Alphonse Dubois; assistant secretary, Albert St. Onge; treasurer, Alphonse Trombly; assistant treasurer, Xavia Dubois; corresponding secretary, J. O. Deslauries; sergeant-at-arms, Magloire Pluffe; investigating committee, Alphonse Gurtin, Moses Sorrell and Joseph Dubois.

It is found that the letters referred to as having been posted on the list in the post office instead of being put in the box were not properly directed, an initial letter being wrong in both cases, so the postmaster could not be to blame. The postmaster says the package with special delivery stamp was not held for the owner, but the owner came in before the package was ready for delivery, the address—where from, etc.—having to be copied, he was in the act of doing it when called for. In the matter of closing the office, the time remains the same as it has been for several years. Mr. Byrnes expresses a desire to accommodate the public in any reasonable way he can. One matter that perhaps is not generally known. The postmaster is allowed 37 minutes from the time the mail bag is locked, to the time the train is advertised to leave. Instead of taking this time but 12 minutes is taken in the morning, 20 minutes at 10 o'clock, and 13 minutes at 5 o'clock, and even with this short time the bag is frequently unlocked to accommodate some late comer.

At a meeting of the school committee the teachers for the public schools were appointed as follows: Mr. S. W. Hallett, principal high school, salary $1200; grammar school re-appointments, assistant high school, Miss Belle Hyde, salary $500; music, Miss Grace Corliss, salary $500; 2d grammar, Miss A. Barker, salary $500; intermediates, 6th grade, Miss L. F. Buffington; 5th grade, Miss G. F. H. Davis; salary of each $400; 5th grade, West St., no appointment; 4th grade, Miss Lena M. Wyllis, Miss C. D. Sibley; 3d and 4th, Miss M. E. Davis; 3d, Miss L. E. Fisk; 2d grade, Miss L. A. Sandford, Miss Collins, Miss O'Brien; 1st grade, Miss E. E. Crowell, Miss C. C. Cutler, Miss Clara Coney, Miss Mary Reilly; salary of each of the four lower grades, $360; district No. 2, Miss A. A. Fenn; 3, Miss Driscoll; 4, Miss Nellie Ruggles; 5, Miss Rich; 6, Miss Gould; 7, Miss Mundell; 8, Miss Mabel Coney; 9, Miss Winslow. It was also voted to reappoint M. L. Harwood, salary same as last year. Voted to construct sidewalk in front of High street school house, also in front of West street school house. Voted to build a school house in district No. 8 at once. Voted to repair the out district school houses in Nos. 2, 5 and 6.

The new bridge over the Frith of Tay, Scotland, replacing the one which went down under the weight of a passenger train eight years ago, has just been completed and trains are running over it. It is two miles long, 77 feet above the water and cost $3,750,000. The cantilever principle has been adopted, the longest span being 245 feet.

The Maine Central railroad has provided all of its conductors with accident cases, containing medicines, bandages, plasters, surgical instruments, etc., suitable for use in times of accident, with books of directions,—an excellent idea which other rail roads should imitate.

The steamship Merrimac, of the Boston and Halifax line, ran ashore soon after midnight when on little Hope Island, Nova Scotia and has gone to pieces. There were over 100 passengers on board, but they were landed safely in boats on the island, which is a huge rock.

Fire broke out in a variety theatre at Hurley, Wis., last Saturday evening, and in a short space of time the entire business part of the town was in flames. Seventeen actors perished in the theatre, 70 buildings were burned, and the financial loss was $450,000.

A new trestle-work bridge on the Illinois Central road fell of its own weight Sunday, killing its experienced builder and one other man. The structure had just been passed upon favorably by the engineer of the state commissioners.

The river is undermining the town of East Atchinnon, Mo. Upward of fifty acres have already been swept away, and the people near the river have been forced to hastily remove their houses or abandon them.

The losses by fires for the month of June were $10,182,100. The total losses for the first six months of 1887 are $62,921,600, nearly $10,000,000 more than for the same period of last year.

Charles Merriam, one of the founders of the well-known Springfield firm of G. & C. Merriam, publishers of Webster's dictionary, died last Saturday, in his 81st year.

For years Philadelphia bakers have been using chrome yellow, a rank poison, to give their buns a rich gold color, and a number of deaths are traced directly to its use.

The Apache Indians in Northern Mexico, are on the war path, and $700 each are offered for their scalps by the Mexican governor.

A valuable vein of gold-bearing quartz has been discovered near Ishpeming, Mich., and Boston capitalists will develop it.

A workman in Fletcher, Mich., was attacked and killed by rats while passing through some woods.

The eighth annual gathering of the New England Chautauqua opened at South Framingham Tuesday.

New Jersey farmers are cutting their hay by moonlight, in order to avoid the intense heat of the day.

Ben. Holladay, the founder of the Overland Pacific express, died at Portland, Ore., last Saturday.

A $10,000 barn as J. S. Barnes's summer residence in Lenox was burned last Saturday.

The brick-layers strike at Chicago is ended, a compromise having been effected.

The engineers and firemen on the Brooklyn elevated railroad are on a strike.

Dr. J. S. Bagg of Springfield committed suicide at Nantucket last Friday.

JOTTINGS FROM THE HUB.

From our Special Correspondent.

BOSTON, July 13th, 1887.

The sale of the Daily Advertiser and Record to ex-Senator Whitin, of Whitinsville, is now said to be off, and each of those papers has come out with an editorial paragraph saying that it has been having some quiet amusement with certain statements in out-of-town papers that it had been sold, but that the trouble with the statements was that they were not true. On the other hand are the facts that it took the Advertiser and Record nearly a week to learn that the sale had not been made, and that the editors of those papers said privately to a Boston newspaper man that the published statements about the sale were correct, even to the price to be paid for the two papers. The original statements of the sale were made on good authority, and it was supposed that the negotiations were clinched. There is nothing to qualify, except that Mr. Whitin has not carried out the bargain. The Advertiser continues to economize by discharging valuable men.

The Concord philosophers have begun to-day their ninth annual session. Their programme is an Aristotle for the forenoon lectures and dramatic poetry for the evening. The term will continue for two weeks, or a little longer, which is about the same as for several years past. It is Prof. W. T. Harris, of Concord, more than any other one man, who keeps up the interest in the school. Several new names appear in the list of lecturers this year.

The little organization (perhaps "clique" would fit the case as well) which set out to crowd Lieut. Gov. Brackett from the state ticket, has already concluded that it would be a bad job and has abandoned the attempt. It is evident that there will be no change in the Republican state ticket this fall. That is, nobody will be crowded off. If an opening up higher should be made for Attorney-General Sherman, doubtless he would accept and there would be one vacancy on the ticket to fill, but there is nothing certain to say about it.

Dr. Barden of Attleboro, the chairman of the Republican state committee, has finished his tour in the western part of the state and now puts in an appearance at the party headquarters two or three times a week. He is a busy man, and has done much already to perfect the party organization. The few prominent Democrats whom I meet about town in the hot season are all agreed that John F. Andrew will be their nominee again, but that Frank K. Foster is no kind of a Democrat for them. Stearns is not mentioned, except by Republicans, as the Demoeratic nominee, and by them he seems to be somewhat feared. But if the Democrats nominate Andrew, there will not be so much apprehension of a close fight.

It is the Prohibitionists who are the most active thus far. One meeting of their state committee has been held already and they have set the ball in motion. Their convention will be in Mechanics hall, Worcester, Sept. 7, and it is already understood that their nominee for governor for the past two years, Mr. Thomas J. Lothrop of Taunton, will not run again. He says that twice is enough to be set up to be knocked down. Among the men mentioned for his place are Dr. Blackmer of Springfield, who was second on the ticket last year, and Deacon Edward Kendall of Cambridge, who has for years been one of the prohibitory wheel horses, and is personally an excellent man. Prohibitory camp meetings will be held under the auspices of the state committee, Aug. 2 and 3 at South Framingham, Aug. 4 at Centennial grove in Essex, and Aug. 5 in Northampton. Among the speakers at the first and last named places will be Mrs. Clara Hoffman of Missouri, ex-Govs. May of Michigan and St. John of Kansas, and Neal Dow of Maine. Rev. A. W. Holt, the state organizer of prohibitory clubs, is charged with the raising of money for these camp meetings, and like work for the whole campaign is put upon Secretary Dyer, who is to use circulars or personal solicitation. The trouble with the prohibitionists is that they are very earnest, but have not means to contribute liberally.

Worcester county law business, as received in the attorney-general's office, shows the effect of the late no license law in the city of Worcester. Of the 23 cases which have been appealed on exceptions, 21 of them are liquor appeals, and some of them go back as far as last December. When the new liquor laws get to working smoothly, I expect to see more convictions, or, at least, more rum holes stopped than ever before. The new "common nuisance" law will be a terror to liquor sellers, when the temperance people once become familiar with its extraordinary power.

A meeting of the trustees of the state agricultural college was held yesterday in the state house, and President Goodell, in reply to a vote of the entire body, agreed to withdraw his resignation for six months. He expects to renew it Jan. 1, but the trustees are very desirous to retain him. At no time has the college been stronger. One of the trustees from western Massachusetts, who is familiar with the system of the president, told me yesterday that Mr. Goodell increased the strength of the college 50 per cent. He has tact to get along well with the students, and he secures the coöperation of all the members of the college. A large class is already sure to enter. The trustees made the regular appropriations for the six months up to their next meeting in January.

It is expected that a meeting will be held in a few days of the executive committee of the board of agriculture, or of the entire board, to elect a secretary. There is an embarrassing number of candidates. Many men think they are just qualified for the place, but the trouble is to persuade enough of the board to elect them. Messrs. Cushman of Lakeville, Barnes of Goshen, Wood of Newton and Potter of Worcester are all said to be hoping the lightning will strike them, and others are equally anxious. Everybody seems to think the office is a desirable berth. It needs a good worker, a good speaker and a thoroughly practical man.

Old residents of Honolulu who are living in the city say that the revolution in the Hawaiian kingdom is a fortunate solution of the troubles. Ex-Prime Minister Gibson is a rascal, and King Kalakaua is weak as well as corrupt. The revolutionists are the best stuff there is in the island, men of high character and force, who would not endure the king's vices any longer. They will hold a tight rein over him and hope to enjoy better times. LANDON.

Corns as big as hen's eggs have been known to quickly disappear forom people's feet by wearing a pair of Cocobolo or Siamang soft, easy shoes, such as are sold $2.25 by Broadhurst Bros., Central Shoe Store, 376 Main street, Springfield, Mass.

They are looking for you everywhere. Drafts of air in unexpected places, going from hot rooms to cool ones, carelessness in changing clothing:—In short anything which ends in a "common cold in the head." Unless arrested this kind of cold becomes seated in the mucus membrane of the head. Then it is Catarrh. In any and all its stages this disease always yields to Ely's Cream Balm. Safe, agreeable, certain. Price fifty cents. 2w16

YOU NEED NOT BE A MILLIONAIRE

To be interested in mining stocks and in receipt of dividends on mining stocks. At last a successful mining enterprise has planned that its stockholders shall be among the people, rather than the few who usually absorb the stock of promising mining enterprises. The Tortilita Gold and Silver Mining Co., of the famous Pinal County, Arizona, has put its shares at $2 each that any investor, anywhere, may participate in its success. An order for even one share from the humblest buyer will have the company's respectful attention. Jos. H. Reall, president of the National Agricultural Society, is president of the Mining Co. and his associates are also men of standing and character in the country. Address the company at 57 Broadway, New York, for shares or for information relating thereto.

for the care of the sick. How to cure disease, its symptoms and causes, and other information of great value will be found in old Dr. Kaufmann's great book; 100 pages, fine colored plates. Send three 2 cent stamps to pay postage to A. P. Ordway & Co., Boston, Mass., and receive a copy free. 2w15

The best medical writers claim that the successful remedy for nasal catarrh must be non-irritating, easy of application, and one that will, by its own action, reach all the remote sores and ulcerated surfaces. The history of the efforts to treat catarrh during the past few years obliges us to admit that only one remedy has completely met these conditions, and that is Ely's Cream Balm. This safe and pleasant remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has ever done, and both physicians and patients freely concede this fact. The more distressing symptoms quickly yield to it.

A GENEROUS FIRM.

We are informed that the proprietors, Messrs. A. P. Ordway & Co., recently sent three dozen of their reliable medicine, Sulphur Bitters, to the Catholic Home for the Aged, which is highly appreciated by the directors and inmates. "As ye sow, so shall ye reap."—Editor Catholic Union. 2w15

Some Things Learned by Experience,

That a tablespoonful of salt thrown on a coal fire that is low, will cause it to burn up quickly. That you can clean oil cloth with milk and water; while soap and brush will ruin it. That the skin of a boiled egg is the best remedy you can apply to a boil. That you can't cure Rheumatism or Neuralgia without taking Menard's Rheumatic Bullets. That you can buy them of LeGro & Lynde for $1.00 per bottle. eow7

Good Results in Every Case.

D. A. Bradford, wholesale paper dealer of Chattanooga, Tenn., writes that he was seriously afflicted with a severe cold that settled on his lungs: had tried many remedies without benefit. Being induced to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, did so and was entirely cured by use of a few bottles. Since which time he has used it in his family for all coughs and colds with best results. This is the experience of thousands whose lives have been saved by this Wonderful Discovery. A Good Appetite

Is essential to good health; and at this season it is often lost, owing to the poverty or impurity of the blood, and the weakening effect of the changing season. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine for creating an appetite, toning the digestion, and giving strength to the whole system.

"When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was dizzy in the morning, had a headache, and no appetite; but now I can hardly get enough cooked to eat." EMMA SHEPARD, 1 Coral street, Worcester, Mass.

"I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla for dyspepsia, which I have had for the last nine or ten years, suffering terribly. It has now entirely cured me." Mrs. A. NORTON, Chicopee, Mass.

"I must say Hood's Sarsaparilla is the best medicine I ever used. Last spring I had no appetite, and the least work I did fatigued me ever so much. I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, and soon felt as if I could do as much in a day as I had formerly done in a week. My appetite is voracious." Mrs. M. V. BAYARD, Atlantic City, N. J.

they came by where I was sittin'—they all knew it was little Charley's place—the men took off their hats and the women had their handkerchiefs to their faces. I allers knowd they was very fond of him, but it seemed as though they had lost an only child. There was six little boys, all the same size, and they took 'im up, and we all follered up the side of the mountain. It was a mild day, and the sun shinin' bright. We crossed Devil's Run and came to a place of level ground where there was some large pine trees. It was just over the cliff, a little ways from the road, say 100 feet, and in plain sight of where he stood wavin' his lantern backward and forward, slowly across the track when he said, 'You and me is pards, isn't we?'

After all, it was harder on Mary than on me. In three months' time I took her there, too. I staid on the line a while after that, but I couldn't never go back to my house agin, and whenever I was goin' by and saw those two heaps of fresh earth it worked on me so I couldn't stand it.

As I was tellin', I sometimes think I'd like to go back there and see the place once more, but seems as if I was afeerd. I don't believe in ghosts, but on a dark night I'd see my little Charley waving his light as he did that night when it cost him his life.

FIDGETTY HUSBANDS.

I would solemnly warn all women about to marry to ascertain beforehand that the contemplated husband is not what is called a fidget. A leaning toward intemperance may be greatly mitigated in a husband by one's keeping the cellar key and not allowing him any pocket money; but a fanaticism for being always before the time it is difficult to repress and impossible to extirpate. Better that a bridegroom should not be at the church door until after the rubrical hour, and your marriage be postponed for a day, than that he should prove himself a fidget by presenting himself at the altar before the clergyman or yourself is ready for him. Your self-love may suggest that such haste is only the result of his eager devotion; but do not deceive yourselves young women—he would have been at the church equally early if it had been to bury you. Tompkins himself is in many respects an excellent husband, and I do believe he is very fond of me; but it is timeliness first and feelings afterward with him I know. When business calls him on a journey, only one eye drops a tear at part with his wife and offspring; the other is fixed on the clock to see that the cab is sent for in time to catch the train. That "catching the train" is the thought that makes him thin and keeps him so. Much of his time is of necessity consumed in travelling, but not nearly so much as he spends in preparation for his journeys. The day previous to an expedition is mainly occupied in packing his carpet bag and writing out his direction labels. He leaves over night, as in a will, the most elaborate directions for the proceedings of the next morning, with a codicil, appointing that he shall be called half an hour earlier than he at first considered soon enough. This last command is wholly superfluous, since he always wakes of himself long before the appointed hour and proceeds to ring the house up. Previous to this he has kept me from my rest since earliest dawn by perpetually getting out of bed to see whether it is going to be fine. Upon this depends the momentous question: "Shall he take his waterproof coat or not?" If he does, it should be strapped up at once with the other things already lying on the hall table ready for departure; not a moment is to be lost. His toilet is hasty enough, but not speedy; for in his eager desire on retiring to rest to have everything ready for the morning, he has generally packed up his brushes and comb, or some other indispensable thing, which has to be disentombed from his portmanteau. He generally shaves over night; but, if not, I tremble for his throat, since I know with what imprudent rapidity he is performing that operation in his dressing-room.—From Holiday Tasks, by James Payne.

WOMAN'S GLORY.

French ladies have thrown fashion overboard in the matter of coiffure They dress their hair how they like, but there is a marked tendency to discard chignons and false hair. False hair has been proved to be unhealthy. It causes headache, heat, and prevents the perspiration of the head. The best way to obtain an abundance of hair is to cut it frequently, and, above all, to give it plenty of air and light. Some high born ladies, whose deed in matters of fashion is law, have adopted these principles, and wear their hair short and dressed according to the mode of the beginning of the century practiced by Mme. Talien, Mme. Recamier and the reime Hortense. For evening dress the hair is set off with ribbons, diamond lace and galons in precious stones or paillettes. Other ladies are returning to the Sevigne coiffure, which goes admirably with stamped velvet, brocade or damask dresses. The Archduchess Marie Christine has invented a coiffure in imitation of some eighteenth century fashions. The hair is divided into three portions, the first is brushed over the forehead in a series of short curls; it is surmounted by a roll which leads up to the touffe in the form of a crown. This coiffure suits the strong features of the future Queen of Spain, who, like Marie Antoinette, has a nose busque.

When Cleveland was up in the woods his line got caught.

Dan, what shall I do?

Pull gently on it.

Dan, it won't come away.

Give it a jerk.

The President did so.

Grover, Grover, you horrid thing! you've torn my overskirt from the waist clear down the back!

The voice was Mrs. Cleveland's.

The President now swears that the next time he goes fishing there will be no women in the party.—Stockton (Col.) Prodigal.

Lovers are prone to self-depreciation. Said he tenderly, as they sat looking at the stars:

I do not understand what you can see in me that you love me.

That is what everybody says, gurgled the ingenious maiden.

Then the silence became so deep that you could hear the stars twinkling.—Courier.

At the Beautiful Gate.

I listened, this morn, to the story,
How, of old, by the Beautiful Gate,
One smitten of God was placed daily
For the alms of the people to wait.

As I listened, before me in vision
The temple in majesty grew,
And a glad throng of worshippers pressing
With light steps the shining gate through.

I saw the pale face of the stricken
Looking wistfully up to the throng;
As he heard, through the wide-open portal,
The temple's sweet music and song.

Not for him were the palms and the lilies
Inside the temple that shone;
His part was to worship in sorrow,
Poor, helpless, outside and alone.

But e'en while he waited, a blessing
Unthought of—unhoped for, drew nigh,
As he asked an alms, weary and hopeless,
From two who were passing him by.

His humble petition asked only
His daily bread's sorrowful dole;
He received—not of gold or of silver,
But Jesus Christ maketh thee whole.

I thought how we oft, in our sorrow,
Sit weary and lonely to wait
For alms, from a world passing by us,
Outside of the Beautiful Gate.

When the Holy, who healeth the stricken,
Stands waiting to bid us arise,
And led by Him, enter the temple
Which He has prepared in the skies.

TORNADOES AND SETTLEMENT.

The apparent increase in tornadoes of late years is no doubt to be explained by the fact that as the formerly uninhabited regions which lay in the track of these storms become settled, human habitations are brought within the range of destructive action. But though this may explain the matter it does not solve the problem, which is becoming more difficult every year. Villages and small towns which lie across the paths of these storms suffer greatly, and as settlement becomes thicker the damage done yearly mounts up to more formidable figures, while the loss of life becomes continually a more important and serious factor. It is true that use is second nature, and that man can get accustomed to anything. Where towns have been built within the flood lines of rivers, the people always prefer taking their chances of being drowned out every winter to seeking permanent security on a higher level. In India, where 20,000 lives are lost annually through poisonous snakes and man-eating tigers, the natives never think of seeking relief from these evils. It has always been so, they appear to hold, and why should they kick against the inevitable?

Nevertheless, the destruction wrought by a tornado is so widespread, violent and complete that even with the help of cyclone cellars it must be specially difficult to get used to these visitations. A storm that will cut a swath a quarter of a mile broad through forests, fields and houses, leveling and grinding to pieces everything it encounters, carrying the wreck for miles and depositing it at great distances, killing almost every human being in its path, destroying, with a thoroughness inevitably suggesting conscious malignity, even the smallest articles, can never be regarded with equanimity. The people of Quito have the largest experience of earthquakes of any denizens of this planet, but they do not become accustomed to them in the sense of ceasing to fear them. On the contrary, though the tremble may occur half a dozen times a day, an unusually sharp rock will send the folks flying into the public squares. But tornadoes are worse than earthquakes, for whereas the latter seldom do any serious damage, the former always inflicts the greatest destruction possible, not only upon edifices and trees but upon the very earth itself, stripping it sometimes of soil for many roods together and depriving it of production for long periods.

It is an interesting question whether settlements built along the line of tornado development can be maintained. The evils to which they are exposed are too vague and general. At any time a whole small town may be destroyed, a series of farms may be annihilated, miles of timber may be levelled, considerable areas may be rendered uninhabitable, the labor of years may be consumed, in a few minutes, leaving nothing to show but chaos. The energy and perseverance of man are great. Witness the indomitable perseverence with which the Labrador fishermen cling to their inhospitable and deadly coasts. But even the Labrador existence is less exacting than that of the tornado-haunted regions. The cyclone-cellar may be developed to the highest pitch of convenience and security; the loss of human life may be reduced to the minimum; but nothing can diminish the destructive fury of the revolving hurricane, or protect buildings and property against it. Still it would be rash to predict with any confidence on the subject. The slopes of Vesuvius continue to bear vineyards and hamlets, notwithstanding the records of past lava floods. The avalanche and the land-slide fail to depopulate their vicinage. Man always seeks to believe that the evil which has occurred will occur no more, or at least not to him; and on the strength of such hopes he may persist in defying the tornado of the West, trusting to his cyclone-cellar for escape at the worst, and to his luck for evasion generally.—N. Y. Tribune.

The theory that consumption is contagious has been much laughed at, but some striking confirmatory evidence has been gathered by the British medical association, which has been inquiring into the experiences of physicians in this direction. Only about 100 out of 1000 doctors who replied ventured to declare their disbelief in the contagion theory, though more than half of them were unprepared to express an opinion either way. But 261 declared positively that they had known cases where the disease was communicated from one person to another, and in a large number of cases where it was known there was no hereditary taint in the family of the person catching the disease. The great majority of these victims were the husbands or wives of consumptives, and many others had been nurses of the sick persons. Two or three instances are given where the disease had thus been communicated to three, four and five persons, one after another. The medical association does not venture to assert that this data absolutely proves the contagiousness of tuberculosis; it is, however, a strong evidence in favor of the belief that the bacilli or germs discovered by Koch are the cause and not the result of the disease.

DO SOMETHING.

A man who kept quite a number of men employed in different ways, so that largely they could not be under his immediate control, complains, in the Industrial Gazette, that the worst trouble that he had was to secure men upon whom he could rely to do something. He would tell them plainly enough what he wanted and then start out. If anything should turn up different from what they expected the larger part of his men would come back without having accomplished anything.

As an illustration, he had a man with a team hauling bridge lumber quite a distance from one of his saw mills to a railroad shipping point. By securing a reasonably early start, the team could make a good load every day. One afternoon, as he was returning with a load, and had got perhaps half-way home, in coming down a hill through a strip of timber, one of the hind wheels struck a stump and, by some means, broke the axle of the wagon. The man always carried an ax and an extra chain or two, especially to guard against accidents. He was in timber where, with very little trouble, he could have arranged something that would have enabled him to have taken his load into the town. He might have been a little longer than usual. Instead of this, he pulled his load to one side of the road, unhitched his team, and mounting one of the horses rode into the town. His employer did not happen to be at home, so nothing was done until the next morning, when he borrowed another wagon, rode out, rigged a pole under the broken axle, and brought the wagon to town to the shop. Another day was lost in getting the wagon repaired. At least a full day lost more than was necessary, simply because he could not see that it was his business to do something. 'I could,' said he, 'have stood a heavier loss with better grace if the man had only tried to do something rather than spend his time doing nothing. He could at least have shown a disposition to do the best he could.' There are plenty of men who see a thing, routine work, done every day, and yet if they were told to do the same thing, would ask to be shown how. They learn nothing from observation. They may see lumber piled up every day, or see and even help put up machinery, load a car with certain materials; yet ask one of them to go ahead and do by themselves just what they have been helping do, and they will want to be shown how. They are incapable or indifferent of learning by observation, or even helping. With some this is simply the result of thoughtlessness. They do not stop to think that they are failing to work as they should to their employers' interests. So the day's work, or time rather, is put in, it is a small matter whether the work accomplished is in any way profitable to the employer or not.

THE DIMENSIONS OF HEAVEN.

The following paragraph, entitled "The Dimensions of Heaven," is from Lewis' Penny Readings. "And he measured the city with a reed, 12,000 furlongs. The length and breadth and heighth of it are equal."—Rev. xxi: 15. Twelve thousand furlongs equals 7,920,000 feet, which, being cubed, is 496,793,688,000,000,000,000 cubic feet. Reserving half of this space for the throne and court of heaven, and half of the balance for streets, we have the remainder of 124,168,272,000,000,000,000 cubic feet. Divide this by 4006, the cubical feet in a room 16 feet square, and there will be 300,321,843,750,000,000 rooms. We will now suppose the world did and always will contain 990,000,000 inhabitants, and that a generation last 33⅓ years, making in all 2,070,000,000,000 every century, and that the world will stand 100,000,000 years, or 1000 centuries, making in all 2,070,000,000,000,000 inhabitants. Then suppose there were 100 worlds equal to this in the number of inhabitants and duration of years making a total of 2,979,100,000,000,000,000,000 persons, and there would be more than a hundred rooms sixteen feet square for each person.

Gus De Smith went to the station of the I. & G. N. R. R. the other evening, and on entering a car and finding the seats all occupied, said in a low tone: Why, this car is not going! Of course, these words caused a general stampede, and Gus took the best seat. The train soon moved off in in the midst of great indignation. Gus was questioned: "You said this car was not going? Well, it was not then, replied Gus, but it is now.—Texas Siftings.

Shakespeare seems to have been very well up in most of the slang phrases of the present day. In Henry VIII, we have too thin; in King John come off, and you are too green and fresh; in A Winter's Tale What? Never? and, although he does not exactly use the expression rats! we have in Hamlet, A rat! a rat! which is pretty near it. John Bunyan used the phrase, it is a cold day, in connection with adversity. —Courier.

Excited Fisherman—There is not a bit of fishing around here! Every brook has a sign warning people off. What do you mean by luring anglers here with the promise of fine fishing?

Hotel man—I did not say anything about fine fishing. If you will read my advertisement carefully, you will see that what I said was Fishing unapproachable.—Burlington Free Press.

I wish I could wear a Coney Island bathing suit, said a Niagara street young man to his cousin last evening, as they sat on the piazza and perspired. What does a Coney Island bathing suit consist of, George? demurely asked the maiden. Oh, he replied, a little cotton to put in your ears. Then they looked at the pale moon until it was time to change the subject.—Buffalo Courier.

Those who wish to paint the town red on Sundays must use water-colors.—Life.

AN IRISHMAN'S BULL.

We are surrounded by difficulties and dangers, said Pat, from the cradle to the grave, and the only wonder is that we ever live long enough after leaving the one to reach the other. The greatest danger lies in allowing the seeds of disease to be sown in our system. If you feel dull and drowsy, have frequent headaches, bad taste in the mouth, coated tongue, poor appetite, you are suffering from a torpid liver. Take Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" if you would destroy those seeds and avoid reaping a harvest of suffering and death.

Chaplain Hall to the Front.

THE WRITER OF THE FOLLOWING LETTER IS ABOVE REPROACH AT HOME.

I want to tell you in a few words how I got rid of the nightmare of my life.

I once resided for several years in the Lake District of Michigan, where I contracted Malaria. A vigorous constitution enabled me to resist for a time the encroachments of the disease, but continued exposure to the early morning fogs and to the night damps so fastened the disease on me that I almost despaired of ever getting rid of it. For it eventually developed into a chronic type of intermittent malarial fever, with all its distressing symptoms. This continued for eight years. In this long period of course I suffered all the well-know peculiarities of many successive attacks; the chill, the fever, the disturbance of the stomach and all the functions of digestion, the heavy headaches, the painful limbs and back, and the characteristic sensitiveness to changes in the weather, which impart to the chronic sufferer from malaria something of the powers of a barometer. My appetite came and went, but obeyed no natural rule. Sometimes I had a morbid craving for food, and then found myself unable to eat the most tempting and delicate dishes, until for lack of proper nourishment I was transformed from a vigorous, active man into a weak, fagged-out being to whom the very thought of exertion was unwelcome. In addition to malaria I was evidently the victim of indigestion.

As for medicinal treatment all was done that apparently could be done. I used all the accepted remedies, including quinine, but all failed to give more than transient relief. My experience satisfies me that quinine is not a true tonic nor a safe medicine for those who habitually depend upon it. It seldom or never works a radical cure and often, if not generally, produces results which are in themselves diseases.

Now I come to the real cure and to the end of my story. In the summer of 1886 I first heard of KASKINE. I was struck with its being called the "new quinine" and the high claims made for it. I didn't believe a syllable of them. Neither would you in my place. Still there was a chance, and to a chronically sick man any chance is worth taking. "It can't hurt me," I said, "I'll try it." I did try it. To my astonishment and gratification I soon began to improve. Clearly I was getting better. As I continued with KASKINE I seemed to feel the malaria going out of me and health coming back. It was a genuine, scientific healing—not one poison temporarily disguising another. The uric acid with which my system was charged was presently expelled, and my stiffened joints became pliant as before I was ever in the Michigan fogs and miasmas. The indigestion also disappeared, my bowels grew regular, my head clear, my nerves steady, and restful sleep returned. I am now permanently well; have never had any return of malaria—nor any sign of it. Results so real cannot be disputed, and I may fairly attribute them to Kaskine, because, after beginning with it, I took no other medicine.

DAVID J. NORTON,
State Street, Albany, N. Y.

P. S.—I read the letter of my friend Rev. J. L. Hall, Chaplain of the Albany Penitentiary, and fully accept his statements as harmonizing with my own knowledge of the medicinal properties of Kaskine.

Other letters of a similar character from prominent individuals, which stamp Kaskine as a remedy of undoubted merit, will be sent on application.

A Friend in Need

With what alacrity SANFORD'S GINGER responds to the cry of distress. No cramp or pain has ever made a demand upon it for relief or cure that has not met with instant response.

It is a delicious combination of Imported Ginger, Choice Aromatics, and French Brandy, totally unlike and vastly suderior to all other "gingers," pain cures and nauseating nostrums.

Unripe food, impure water, unhealthy climate-unwholesome food, Malaria, Epidemic and Contagious Diseases, Cholera Morbus, Cramps, Pains, Indigestion, Colds, Chills, Simple Fevers, Exhaustion, Nervousness or Loss of Sleep, that beset the traveler or household at this season, are nothing to those protected by SANFORD'S GINGER.

Now.

Rise! for the day is passing,
And you lie dremming on;
The others have buckled their armor,
And forth to the fight are gone;
A place in the ranks awaits you,
Each man has some part to play;
The past and the future are nothing
In the face of the stern to-day.

Rise from your dreams of the future—
Of gaining some hard-fought field;
Of storming some airy fortress,
Or bidding some giant yield.
Your future has deeds of glory,
Of honor, God grant it may!
But your arm will never be stronger,
Or the need so great as to day.

Rise! if the past detain you,
Her sunshine and forms forget;
No chains so unworthy to hold
As those of a vain regret;
Sad or bright, she is lifeless forever;
Cast her phantom arms away,
Nor look back save to learn the lesson
Of a nobler strife to-day.

Rise! for the day is passing;
The low sound that you scarcely hear
Is the enemy marching to battle,
Arise! for the foe is here!
Stay not to sharpen our weapons,
Or the hour will strike at last,
When from dreams of a coming battle,
You may wake to find it past!

—Adelaide A. Proctor.

OF NO AVAIL.

One of the most perfect of June's 'rare days' was drawing to a close; the sun, just sinking below the distant horizon, cast its last rays upon the blossoming earth—rays which seemed to linger lovingly upon the neighboring mountain-tops, and to clothe in mellow light the river below.

'One might travel the world over and fail to find a lovelier view. More color, perhaps, but less tone.'

A robin, which had been hopping about on the grass, startled at this sound, removed to a tree about fifty yards distant, and then surveyed the speaker.

'Yes,' continued the tall figure reclining on the grass, 'there is something here that I have found missing in all other sunsets. What is it—breadth, variety, color, form? I give it up! It must be that I am in favor of my native skies.'

Here he relapsed into silence, whereupon the robin, emboldened, again drew near, and even ventured to hop on the dusty leather bag which our soliloquizer had thrown beside him.

A sound of hoofs broke the pleasant stillness, distant at first, but nearer and nearer, faster and faster they came, until curiosity getting the better of laziness, our home-loving friend lifted his head from the clover where it had been reposing, anxious to see who might be riding at such a devil-may-care pace, disregarding the charming sunset.

To his surprise he saw coming along the road, within a few rods of him, a young lady mounted on a small black horse, and the first glance showed him that brute force had superseded science, and that it was not at all the young lady's fault that the landscape was neglected,—in short, the small black horse was running away.

It was but the work of a moment for him to vault over the fence and catch the bridle rein; it was done without an instant's hesitation, with the decision of a man used to emergencies and capable of meeting them.

He watched the train as it thundered past; then, wondering what kind of a young lady it was, who had never once screamed or made any fuss whatever, he turned with curiosity to look at her.

It was a very much frightened young girl, notwithstanding the absence of screams, that he saw, and compassion immediately took the place of curiosity, as, without a word, he lifted her carefully from the saddle, and deposited her gently upon the ground.

'Oh, it was horrible! How can I ever thank you?' she exclaimed.

'Don't try,' he returned. 'I hope you will not suffer from your fright.' Then, as she covered her face with her hands and shuddered, he added, cheerfully, trying to divert her mind, 'Where did you come across such a peculiar piece of horse flesh? Look at him now, eating peacefully, as though nothing had happened.

Then the girl jumped up impulsively, rushed to her horse, threw both arms about his neck, and burst into tears.

'Oh, Toby, I am sorry—so sorry! But it was not your fault. You could not help it. You couldn't do anything else but run when that dreadful wagon upset. Oh,' turning to her preserver, 'just think how frightened poor Toby must have been to run away with me!'

'Yes;' of course, he returned, gravely. 'You were in no danger whatever, but poor Toby has been nearly frightened to death, and I would suggest that he be immediately taken home, given something to quiet his nerves, and put to bed.'

The subject of this satirical remark, who had been caressing his mistress in his own peculiar fashion, glanced complacently at the speaker, and, regardless of his irony, quietly returned to his clover patch.

But his mistress,—the words produced more effect upon her; they caused her to turn and survey her new acquaintance with surprise and even interest. The face she gazed upon was an impressive one, redeemed from positive ugliness by the dark, brilliant eyes. Far from handsome, but better than that; strong, manly, and with marvellous power of attraction, which is much more dangerous to the peace of a woman than the most regular and classic features. The face of a man who had suffered, of one who had courage, and who had fought the battle of life bravely.

'I do not know how to thank you,' she began again as their eyes met; 'but you will come home with me and see papa?' And her voice trembled slightly.

'I shall see you safe home, certainly. Will you mount again?'

'No, thank you; I live just beyond there.'

So he took the bridle of the now complacent and evidently repentant Toby; and side by side, and silently, they approached the young lady's home.

As they entered the avenue leading to the house the man paused, looked curiously around; then as he continued his walk, an incomprehensible expression came into his eyes. His thoughts went back to his youth. Just such a perfect evening as this, twenty years ago, he had walked the same avenue with another companion. Then he thought himself in paradise; the world was bright and beautiful; life blessed with the love of his chosen one, and radiant with brilliant prospects, was before him. Now—ah, how miserable a man may be and still love on!

Lost in thought, he heaved a deep sigh, a sigh almost like a sob.

'I am afraid something is troubling you,' timidly remarked Miss Dyne.

And the voice recalled him to himself.

He came back from dreamland with a start and a laugh,—a short, hard, bitter laugh, a reckless look coming into his handsome eyes, but he did not speak.

Just then a curve in the road brought them nearer the house and an elderly gentleman hastened to meet them.

'My child, what has happened? We have been quite anxious. Your brother is just starting to meet you.'

'Why, papa—now, don't be alarmed—but Toby ran away with me, and this gentleman stopped him—and saved my life.'

This last in a low, hushed voice.

'Your daughter magnifies my services,' said the gentleman. 'The horse would have stopped soon, anyway; and she was in no danger of being unseated.'

Mr. Dyne shuddered.

'My dear sir,' he exclaimed, heartily, grasping his hand, 'I cannot begin to thank you; but what is the matter?" he added, in a surprised tone; for the stranger had gradually grown whiter and whiter, and leaned against a tree for support.

'Nothing of any consequence,' he returned, 'only this fiery pet of your daughter's stepped a little heavily on my foot during our tussle, and it has since been giving me some rather severe twinges.'

'Let me help you to the veranda. Here, John!'—to a groom who approached. 'Take Toby. Anna, call your mother!'

And the old gentleman took the stranger by the arm, and led him toward the house.

Anna and her mother soon appeared, and found Mr. Dyne expostulating with him about his departure.

'You must not go to-night, at least; it would be madness. Why, Mr'——.'

'Wellesley,' assisted the gentleman.

'Mr. Wellesley,' continued Mr. Dyne, 'you might cripple yourself for life by such rashness. Why,'—turning to his wife—'he actually insists on going this evening!'

'Oh, no, Mr. Wellesley! You had better stay,' said Mrs. Dyne; quietly adding, as she noticed his palor, 'he will, I know. Have a room prepared, Anna, and send John to assist him.'

'You are all very kind. I believe I will accept your hospitality, if ——'

But here he put an end to all objections by fainting completely away.

The Dyne family were at breakfast; but one of the party seemed to have very little desire for any.

'Papa, who is he?' she asked.

'Well, dear, he is a gentleman, and his name is Wellesley. Now you know all I do.'

'I knew that before,' returned Anna, disconsolately.

'Without doubt, in time he will turn out to be the inevitable count, and walk off with our teaspoons; so don't despair at so early a stage in the proceedings, my sweet sister,' drawled Clinton Dyne.

'Clinton, how can you?' said Anna, indignantly, when her father interposed.

'Though I talked very little with Mr. Wellesley last evening, I am convinced that he is a gentleman in every sense of the word. He is strangely reticent about his life, it is true, but there is an air of uprightness about him that makes me trust him.'

'Of course you are welcome to trust whom you like in your own house, but ten to one you will find that he is a scamp. How badly was he hurt, anyway?'

'His ankle was slightly sprained, but walking has aggravated it so much that Doctor Jones says it will be at least three weeks before he will be able to walk without a crutch.'

'Good heavens! Are we to have three weeks of the count's company? Let us hope he will prove to be amusing. Anna, you will have ample time to accomplish his conversion. I advise you to begin with the teaspoons.'

And Clinton ran through the window to the lawn, thus making his escape.

'Clinton does not mean what he says, I know, but he is very provoking,' said Anna, apologetically. I think as papa does about Mr. Wellesley, and I am sure you will, too, mamma, when you converse with him.'

'Well, my dear, he cannot do us any harm, and we may possibly do him some good; I will confess to being prejudiced in his favor.'

And before a week had elapsed even Clinton was obliged to own that he shared with the rest of the family a feeling of deep interest and friendship for their guest.

Every one knows the difference one stranger makes in a household; pleasant conversations occur, and intcresting topics are discussed, which never would be if only the family were present. Then, too, the presence of a guest causes all disagreeable subjects to be avoided, and when the visitor, as in this case, is a person of sound understanding, possessing culture increased by advantage of travel, having the faculty of interesting and entertaining without appearing to do so, he is a God-send.

Then Mr. Wellesley made himself so thoroughly at home, and seemed so comfortable and at ease with himself, as only a well-bred person can, that it seemed as if a kindred spirit had entered that happy household.

After the first few days Mrs. Dyne had insisted upon his coming down stairs, and had made him very comfortable in the garden, where hammocks and rocking-chairs defied one to be otherwise. And here behold him, this bright, beautiful morning, the very picture of indolence.

At a little distance Anna had been writing a letter. As she folded it, she glanced toward him.

'I wonder if you have any idea of what you look like now?' she said, impulsively.

He slowly turned his dark eyes upon her.

'Tell me,' he said, indifferently.

'Of a picture I saw while abroad, at a gallery in Florence. It was called "Dreaming," and was as much like you this minute as though you sat for it. Your face has always puzzled me. I have had a tantalizing idea that I had seen you before; now all is clear. It must be your resemblance to that picture.'

She paused; the letter was sealed and stamped.

'Now thank me. I consider it a very pretty compliment to say that you are like a picture.'

Then she observed his changed face.

'Don't!—don't, child! You do not know what you are doing!' he exclaimed, all traces of indifference gone, a sad, agonized expression coming into his eyes.

The girl's sweet lips trembled, and the lovely blue eyes filled with tears. He forgot his own grief for a moment in pity for hers.

'Never mind, Anna, dear. Never mind me. I have had a hard life, and chance words may sometimes strike a place not yet quite healed, and cause the wound to bleed afresh.'

And taking up his crutch he walked into the house.

When Anna next met him at the tea-table, he was himself again, amusing and fascinating them all. He still remained as much of a mystery as ever, never alluding to his past life, his business, or himself in any way whatever. That he had traveled much they had gathered, but that was all.

At about eleven o'clock, the usual hour for the breaking up of their pleasant circle, he sat down at the piano, struck a few chords, and began in a rich tenor an old Italian serenade. His listeners were spell-bound, and when he had finished loaded him with reproaches for not having favored them before.

'Just to think how many times you have called for my poor songs, and all the time you were able to do better!' said Anna.

'Do not wrong me by supposing that I have purposely concealed my poor talent from you. At one time I gave a great deal of attention to music, but lately have not had an opportunity.'

'We will forgive you on one condition—that you allow us to call upon you at pleasure,' said Mrs. Dyne.

After this, music occupied no small part of their time, and the tenor was the leading spirit.

Thus the days sped on, and Mr. Wellesley had become quite one of the family. He was sometimes moody and seemed almost desperate, yet he made such an effort to throw off and cast aside such feelings, that it seemed pathetic.

In three weeks' time Mrs. Dyne had grown to love him almost as her son; Mr. Dyne and Clinton to heartily admire and cordially like him. Anna—poor Anna!—was at the tea-table, when Mr. Wellesley rather suddenly announced his intended departure. Mr. Dyne happened to glance at his daughter, and what he saw in her face sent a chill to his very heart.

That evening, after the ladies had retired, he and Mr. Wellesley were taking a farewell smoke. Suddenly, after a little silence, the latter said, 'Mr. Dyne, for three weeks I have enjoyed your hospitality, and have been happier here than I ever imagined I could be anywhere again. Will you listen to the story of my life!'

'Certainly, sir,' the elder gentleman courteously said.

'It may occasion you some surprise to know that I am the only son of Mr. Wellesley, from whom you purchased this place, but it will explain my familiarity with the locality, which has puzzled you. My twentieth year my parents desired me to spend in travel, in order to complete my education, and then the fact burst suddenly upom me that I could not go—that is, I could not go and leave Miss Marion Benton here. To be separated from her would be a living death, and I explained matters to my parents. But Marion was the daughter of a country schoolmaster, and I then and there learned that my future had been settled for me by my over-zealous parents, and that I was to marry the daughter of an intimate friend of my father's, rich as Crœsus, ugly as Medusa. To make a long story short, I chose my own way, and Marian and I were married with her father's consent, and departed for France. Here for two years we lived an ideal life. Thank God, I have it to look back upon. I had always a tendency toward art, and my wife had great talent; so we took a studio, and with hard work I made a comfortable living. Then Marian grew ill, our physician advised a trip to Italy, but it was useless. From that time my good fortune deserted me.

'Imagine seeing your wife fading away before your very eyes, having no power to relieve her sufferings, no money to provide the luxuries which she needed. In my misery, when all else failed I wrote to my parents telling them all, and begging—yes, begging, for a portion of what ought to be mine.

'But my letters were returned unopened, and I found myself cursing those who had brought me into the world. My darling never lost her courage, but bore her sufferings in a most patient and lovely manner, dreading to leave me, yet weary with sufferings. Finally, the end came, and in my arms she breathed her last. Excitement had hitherto kept me up, and now I sank unconscious at her side. For three weeks I hovered between life and death, and when I awoke again to consciousness of my surroundings, the sisters who had through mistaken kindness nursed me back to life told me of her burial. They also told me of the sale of my last remaining treasure, a picture of myself, painted by her dear hand, which, by the way, your daughter saw at Florence. Thanking them, yet with bitterness in my heart, I bade farewell to that silent grave under the Italian skies, and for eighteen years have lived a wandering, Bohemian life. I have traveled over all countries, earning my way now by singing or playing, now by painting a picture, but when I lie down to rest such a feeling of desolation comes over me, such a wretched heartache, that at times I have to fight to keep myself from self-destruction. The thought that such an act might keep me eternally from her has held my hand more than once. Not a year has passed that I have not visited that sacred grave, praying that I may soon lie by her side.

'About six months ago I accidentally saw an advertisement for any person who could give a clue to my whereabouts. My father had died without any will, and all was mine. To claim it I came this way, and as soon as matters are settled shall depart again, for my old wandering life suits me best.'

'My dear friend,' exclaimed Mr. Dyne, 'you have told me a sad story, and you have my heartfelt sympathy.

'And I cannot express my gratitude to you for all your kindness to me, a stranger,' returned Mr. Wellesley.

So ended the interview, and the next morning after a brief but affectionate farewell to the family, our traveler departed.

* * * * * * *

'A gentleman to see you, sir." And the servant handed Mr. Wellesley a card.

'Show him up,' said that gentleman, and in a moment he was shaking hands warmly with Mr. Dyne.

After some conversation, Mr. Wellesley remarked, 'Well, the estate is mine, all is settled, and to-morrow I leave for France. I should like to have seen your wife and daughter, to bid them a final farewell, but only found myself at leisure this morning. I trust they are well?'

'My wife is very well,' said Mr. Dyne, gravely.

He paused, while Mr. Wellesley glanced at him inquiringly.

Then he continued: 'Mr. Wellesley, you are not like most men, and I know you will not misunderstand what I am about to say. While you were at my house you won my daughter's love—unknown to yourself, of that I am sure, else I would not be here. Let me finish,' as the other was about to interrupt. 'You are not a young man, you are not happy, you have nothing to look forward to but death. My only daughter's life depends upon you. No word of this has ever passed her lips, but I know, and her mother knows, the cause of her illness. The physicians talk of a decline, but we, her parents, know that it is the never-ceasing longing for one upon whom she has bestowed the undying, affectionate love of her pure young heart. What you feel now for one long dead, she feels for you. The longing, the heartache that you, a strong man, find it hard to bear, is killing a delicate young girl. Wait,' he said, as Mr. Wellesley began to speak; 'I have nearly finished. From the history of your life, I understand that it is merely waiting for the grave, and a desire to keep your life so pure as to be sure of meeting your beloved beyond it. Would it not be the noble part to save and make happy the life which it lies in your hands to make or mar? Would it not be basely selfish to leave that young life to wither and die, while you wander through life indulging in melancholy? Your angel wife would tell you—yes. Think of what I have said; remember, no earthly soul dreams of my errand to you, and pity a father who has forgotten all pride in the desire to save his daughter's life.'

He was gone, and Mr. Wellesley was once more alone.

For an hour he sat motionless, his face buried in his hands.

Then, lifting his head, he muttered, 'For years I have loved her, and given no other woman a thought; I prided myself on my constancy to her. I worshiped her memory; and am I to sacrifice all these sacred feelings and link myself with a girl who has foolishly given her love unsought? My God! I cannot! Yet he said I was selfish. This trial proves that I am. Would it not be murder if I went my way and left her to die, since there is no reason that I should not save her except the violence that action would do my own feelings? If I were sure of making her happy—oh, my wife, guide me aright!'

And his head again dropped upon his hands.

Half an hour after he arose, a determined look about his mouth, the dark circles beneath his eyes being the only trace of the struggle through which he had passed. His decision was made, and twenty minutes later a telegram was on its way to Roseville, announcing his arrival there next day.

* * * * * * *

Six months later, we behold Arthur Wellesley seated before the cheerful fire in the cosy library at Evergreens. There is a sad, weary expression about his eyes, and a set, rather desperate look about his mouth; but this quickly changes to a forced cheerfulness, which is more mournful yet to contemplate, as his young wife enters.

She was beautiful, certainly, in the most delicate way imaginable, and she advanced quickly and laid her hand lovingly upon her husband's shoulder.

'Why, Arthur, I did not know you were at home! I should have been down long ago!'

'I have only been in about fifteen minutes, dear, and see what I have brought you!' handing her a letter, and speaking like one just awaking.

'Thanks. Oh, it is from Ned!'

And she went to the window, broke the seal, and after perusing returned to her husband's side.

'Let me see what your cousin has to say,' he remarked, carelessly, holding out his hand as if to take the letter.

'No!' she exclaimed, suddenly snatching it from his reach.

He looked a little surprised, but only remarked quietly, 'Of course not, my dear, if you don't wish it. Why, what is the matter?' he added, for tears had gathered in her eyes, and a grieved expression was on her sweet face.

She hesitated, then sinking on her knees beside him, began impetuously, 'Arthur, you do not love me. A man who cared an atom for me would command me to show him that letter, and you—you pass my refusal by as of no consequence. For a long time the knowledge has been growing upon me, and it is breaking my heart! You humor my every whim, you sacrifice everything to give me pleasure, you bestow upon me everything—oh, my husband—except the one thing I want and need—your love!'

And she wept bitterly.

'Anna, what are you saying? I do love you. Your happiness is my sole object in life. Would you have me a tyrant? It would be a strange way of showing my love to compel you to do that which you would rather not. As for the letter, I have perfect confidence in you, and you in return should trust me. I told you the entire truth before our marriage; you are the only being on earth I have any affection for, and I would sacrifice anything to see you happy. Anna, do not ruin both our lives; try to take things as they are, and not wish for impossibilities!'

He was terribly in earnest as he pleaded with her—as he tried to make her see things as he did. But it was of no avail. Instinctively she knew that she was but second in his love, though first on earth, and her sensitive organization rebelled against it.

Always delicate, the knowledge preyed upon her, and three months later a weary, disappointed man sat alone in the same room.

His great sacrifice had been in vain; that afternoon he had laid his girl-wife in her last resting-place, and now he was wondering why God had permitted him to make such a failure of his life.

Since the episode of the letter, her one burst of unsatisfied longing over the subject had never been spoken of. They lived in perfect harmony and affection, never an unkind word or action on either side; but she knew that his heart was in his dead wife's grave, and he had the bitter knowledge that she was aware of it, and that the knowledge was killing her.

Nothing could be done, and she faded away, her last breath uttering words of devotion and love to her husband. And he—well, he loved her as he might a dea friend, and now that she was gone, he missed her; but far worse was the fact that he had lost everything.

His own love, lying under the bright skies of sunny Italy, had been deserted; he had not now even the satisfaction of being constant to her, and all his attempts to save and make happy one devoted to him had been useless. The man was wretched indeed.

'Nothing awaits me now but death,' he exclaimed, 'and God grant that it may come soon!'

CUTTING AND ARRANGING FOOD.

It pays to be nice about it. Never use any but the bread knife to slice bread, and if possible cut no more than actually needed. It is a good plan to follow the modern fashion of "slice as wanted," though this may savor of stinginess to our country mothers. A lot of bread to dry is not economical. It does not add to the attractiveness of the table, especially if a lot of crumbs are allowed to remain, hence we say, cut just enough.

See to it also, that your knife is sharp or your slices will be ragged and irregular. Evenly cut slices, not too thick or too thin, are more tempting.

In cutting a pie that is to grace the table before serving, it is well to bring a geometrical fitness to bear. The eye, and a little trained carefulness will generally do it. A chicken pie so cut that some pieces are a third larger than others is not illustrative of this carefulness. In the cutting of pies, as all others things, it is a good plan to do it well. A pie that is carefully, neatly trimmed around the edge in making, looks nicer upon the table or plate, and slips upon the knife better.

Perhaps all housekeepers are not as careful to have a cake knife as one for bread, but I consider it quite essential. Only yesterday I ate a piece of cake I am sure was cut with a knife used in peeling onions just before, and it did not add to the flavor of the cake. And again, cut cake into regular blocks; calculate a little before beginning, you will have a nicer looking dish for your table.

We have not quite become accustomed to "cut as you go" in cake, but I am not sure but the day is fast approaching.

Sauces for tea in a glass dish with glass preserve plates beside, adds to the tea table. It may be less conventional but surely has a cheerful look, especially if the berry spoon rests near.

The butter plate also receives less attention in many homes than it should. Glass is, I think, preferable, and should have a good cover. Two covered butter dishes are within the means of almost every family. They should never be used for anything but butter, and alternate often. A tidy butter dish will sometimes redeem a poorly set table and really there seems little reason why we should ever have a poorly set table, yet such is the positive fact, notwithstanding many costly luxuries are upon it.—*L. The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, JULY 22, 1887.

MR. BLAINE is reported to be in rather poor health, in consequence of too much shaking up from coach riding.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND is back at Washington again, after a pleasant visit among old friends and scenes of his boyhood.

JUDGE GARDNER of the Massachusetts supreme court lies in a precarious condition in London, from a stroke of paralysis, with little chance of recovery.

PASTEUR'S treatment of hydrophobia by inoculation is unqualifiedly commended by a committee of British physicians who have been personally investigating a large number of cases which he has treated.

RHODE ISLANDERS, some of them at least, talk as though constitutional prohibition don't prohibit; but out in Iowa friends of temperance say that it does, and point to 55 empty county jails as conclusive proof of the fact.

THE engineers on the Brooklyn elevated railroad who struck in such great haste can repent at leisure, having given up the contest, while most of their places have been filled. The engineers do not often slip up in this fashion, and will learn something from this experience.

THE State has collapsed—not our old commonwealth, but the Republican organ of that name. Our people get all the politics they care for in the regular newspapers, and a paper must have something besides that for its foundation stone to win success.

TWO CENT letter postage bids fair to do for the post office department what three cent postage could not,—make the department self-sustaining. This is a big country for letters to be carried from one end to the other for two cents, but some of us may live to see it done for a penny.

GEN. H. S. BRIGGS, general appraiser in the Boston custom house, has been retired in order that his Democratic assistant might be promoted. The general was colonel of the first Berkshire regiment that went to the war, a brave officer, and an efficient official, but civil service reform is taking a vacation while the administration strengthens its cords in the Old Bay State.

LAST year's reports of starvation in Labrador are repeated again this year, authentic accounts representing that thousands of people on the coast of that country are in a starving condition, some having been driven insane by their sufferings. It would seem to be about time that the inhabitants were removed to some country where existence is not quite so difficult.

THE hottest kind of a hot wave settled over the country last Saturday, continuing until Monday, the thermometer ranging from 98 to 113 in the shade. Hundreds of people were prostrated, and at least two or three hundred died from the effects of the heat, Chicago alone reporting the deaths of 135 adults and 263 babies less than a year old. New England escaped the worst of the heat, but it was warm enough so that the drop in temperature Monday night was highly appreciated. It is many years since the heat has been equalled in the West.

FIRES.—Fire broke out last Saturday noon in the basement of Levison's store in Bill's Main street block, Springfield, and it took the department several hours to subdue it. Loss about $45,000.——The New England ship yard at Bath, Me., had a $100,000 fire last Friday. At Montreal the same day 400 men were thrown out of employment by the burning of a sugar refinery, at a loss of $600,000.——The large warehouse of the Metropolitan Storage Company on 38th street, New York, was burned Saturday morning, at a loss of $1,000,000. The large Senter House at Centre Harbor, N. H., was burned the same day.——The Cotocheset House at Osterville, Cape Cod, was burned Sunday morning. It was filled with summer boarders, but all escaped.—The Standard Oil Works near Bayonne, N. J., had a $750,000 fire early Wednesday morning.

A shocking accident occurred at St. Thomas, Ont., last Friday evening, an excursion train on the Grand Trunk road running into a freight train on the Michigan Central. The engine crashed into some oil cars, which at once took fire, and many of the passengers were more or less burned before they could escape. Thirteen were killed or burned to death, and over 100 are said to have been injured.

The people of Fairmount, Ind., are somewhat vigorous in their opposition to saloons. There has never been one in the place, and a building which had been rented for that purpose was blown up by dynamite last Friday night.

A gang of Italian laborers were struck by an express train on the Erie railroad, between Hohokus and Allendale, N. J., yesterday, and eleven of them killed outright, five others being badly injured.

Waupaca, Wis., was damaged to the extent of about $100,000 by a cyclone Sunday night, and Cumberland county, Pa., suffered a good deal from a heavy storm the same afternoon.

Rev. E. L. Houghton, of Springfield, preached at St. Paul's church last Saturday.

Clark & Hastings have had their mammoth refrigerator filled with ice again this week.

"When shall we have the electric lights?" is a query often asked, and as often unanswered.

The hearing in the Tenneyville brook matter before the board of health has been postponed.

J. A. Palmer is agent of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals in Hampden county.

The American express office has been moved to its new quarters in the southeast corner of the depot.

Prof. Doane, of Winchendon, gives a private exhibition on the organ of St. Paul's church this evening.

G. W. Lyman has been given the contract to build a 36 by 60 carriage house and stable for Dr. Wilbur, at Blanchardville.

The Sunday school of St. Paul's church joined the Universalist Sunday school of Monson in a picnic to State Line Tuesday.

There will be no change in the teachers of the village schools for the fall term, except that in the high school already noted.

G. M. Atkins & Co. have been awarded the contract for building the canal around the Belchertown reservoir, the price being $700.

Rev. T. J. Sullivan, of St. Thomas's Catholic church, has been spending the week at Holy Cross college in Worcester, in annual retreat.

The selectmen meet at the court room next Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock to listen to any complaints against the location of electric light poles in the town.

Only 196 dogs have been licensed so far, and the dog warrant has been placed in Officer Northrop's hands, so the owners of unlicensed canines will need to look out.

A horse belonging to J. K. Knox ran away on South Main street last Saturday, throwing Mr. Knox and a woman from the vehicle and bruising them considerably. The wagon was badly damaged.

A carload of "fresh air fund" children from New York, who had been spending two weeks in Vermont, passed through Palmer on their way home last Friday evening, and another carload last evening.

Talma and Loman Brown, brothers, and over 80 years old, have been complained of for abusing their cattle, and have been visited by the long named society's agent, but on a promise to do better, no prosecution has been made.

The champion runner among the New London Northern brakemen is Hayes. His recent trial spurt from the passenger station to the freight house, with the Block Island train for pacemaker, is said to have put all former records out of sight.

The Ladies' Social Union of St. Paul's church will hold a sociable on the lawn of Mrs. Maria Lawrence next Wednesday afternoon and evening, with supper from six to eight. Should the weather be stormy the social will be postponed to the next fair day.

A class is being formed in this village to take a course of Prof. Loisette's Marvelous Memory Discovery, by which any book can be learned in one reading, and the memory on all matters greatly strengthened. The system is highly recommended by well known scholars.

Michael Welch, the 14-years-old boy who so mysteriously disappeared about a year ago, and for whom the ponds and rivers were dragged, in the belief that he had been foully dealt with, has at last turned up in New Britain, Ct., safe and sound, and working in the mill.

Sumner Blodgett has found his present quarters much too small for his florist business, and is building a 20 by 90 feet greenhouse on Dewey's hill, above the carpet mill road, and will also move his present greenhouse to that location, thus getting three times the room he formerly had. He will heat it by hot water circulation.

The samples of beer taken from Caryl Bros. last week and sent to Boston for analysis showed 2.93. 3, and 3.14 per cent of alcohol, while samples taken from the same lot only showed 2.60, 2.61 and 2.80 by the Springfield chemist's tests. The latter was in the chemist's hands two hours after seizure, while the former was nearly 24 hours on its way.

These changes in real estate and other property have been made within a week through D. F. Holden's agency. Lyman Snow's farm for Mrs. Davis's property near the wire mill, George Dalrymple's Wales and Brimfield stage line for Joseph Langlois's business and stock of goods at Three Rivers, Mrs. C. Kelliher's place in Thorndike to Patrick Lynch.

A. D. Thomas, a farmer living near Parksville, borrowed a neighbor's horse to use on a mowing machine recently, and in some way the animal kicked aginst the knife, cutting the cords on both legs, and necessitating killing it. The horse was valued at $200. Although a hard working man, Mr. Thomas seems to have his full share of misfortune, having lost another horse and four cows recently.

At the fire district meeting last April it was voted, and a committee appointed to confer with the New England insurance exchange, relative to locating the jumper on Main street and thereby securing a reduction in the insurance rates. As yet nothing seems to have been done in that direction, although if the jumper was so located a reduction of 15 per cent in insurance rates is assured.

A valuable horse belonging to John Kinnevan was missing from the pasture a few mornings ago, and a search revealed the animal in the highway some distance from home with a wound in each leg, where a knife or some other sharp instrument had been thrust through between the cord and the bone, and partially cutting the cord of one leg. The animal is a fine sorrel, a famous roadster and good worker, for which $300 has been refused, though now probably ruined. Mr. Kinnevan is at a loss to know why any one should wish to injure him in this way.

These civil cases have been entered for trial in the district court: F. M. Shaw vs. Eugene Shorley, for an action of contract; Gardner for plaintiff, Sawyer for defendant. Edward Goodes vs. D. J. Sullivan, for action of contract; Gardner for plaintiff, defendant defaulted. Luther A. Abbey vs. H. A. Northrop, action of tort; Taft & Kenefick for plaintiff, Gardner for defendant. F. L. Pierce vs. J. L. Weeks, for action of contract; Taft & Kenefick for plaintiff, Gardner for defendant. F. M. Connor vs. George F. Wright, for an alleged illegal liquor seizure. Taft & Kenefick for plaintiff, Gardner for defendant.

At the probate court held in Springfield Wednesday administration was granted in the estates of—Bridget McCarthy, late of Holland, Patrick McCarthy administrator; Edmund Pratt, late of Longmeadow, James S. Pratt administrator; Dickerson A. Calkins, late of Monson, Charles M. Calkins administrator; Freeborn W. Moulton, late of Monson, Daniel M. Moulton administrator. The will of Julia R. Anderson, late of Monson, Horace Squier executor, was proved, and an inventory filed in the estate of Freeborn W. Moulton, late of Monson, personal $83. An affidavit of notice of appointment was issued in the estate of Laura Squier, late of Monson, and permission to sell real estate was granted in the estate of Emelius B. Murdock, late of Palmer.

Two extra cars were added to the boat train Wednesday, for the Congregational Sunday school picnic to Amherst. The school arrived at the college campus a few minutes past nine, where there were settees and tables ready for use. The day was excellent. The list of buildings was then read to the party and pointed out, with the time when each might be visited. The base ball spirit was manfest exceedingly early in the day, Julian Tuthill and Fred Sistare taking their teams, each including a minister, to the "Blake Field" for sports. The clergy kept the party peaceful, and at 12 o'clock 28 runs were accorded to Tuthill's side against 17 to Sistare's. Late in the afternoon two loads were taken to the Agricultural college, which was at its best, the grounds being in fine condition. From old age to young every one reported a good time, and were pleased with the instruction and beauty afforded by the trip.

There is one job printer who, probably, will not visit Palmer again very soon. He came last week and by offering to do work for "half what any one else would," secured a number of orders. He came this week to deliver his work, and it was about what could be expected from one who would furnish and print a ream of paper at a lower price than the paper alone could be bought for. It was about half done. One firm refused to take their work, while another gave him $2 to shut up, get out and take his work with him, and of the several jobs left not one has been found free from errors. If the man who did the jobs ever knew anything about the printing business, he certainly did not show it on work done for this town. Gentlemen, you can't get prices much below those of your home office when quality of work is considered. If you only want to pay half price for printing, you must expect to get half price work.

THOSE LIQUOR CASES.

Justice Robinson rendered decisions Monday in the matters of liquors seized at various places. The beer taken from John Feeney was ordered forfeited, being above the percentage allowed by law, but the rum was ordered returned, it being claimed by other parties, and the evidence sustaining the claim. The beer seized from Mrs. Dunn, of Three Rivers, was ordered forfeited, but the whiskey taken from the place of Michael Roche, of Thorndike, was returned, it being claimed by Cornelius Harrington, a tenant of Roche's. The liquors taken from E. P. Stone of the Converse House were ordered forfeited and a good deal of amusement was had over the testimony in the case. The liquors were in a small wooden case, to which a brass hotel check was attached, the case being marked E. F. Rogers. When the officers seized it a man appeared who claimed it as his property, announcing that his name was Rogers. The officers were a little suspicious and asked him what his initials were, which, strange to say, he was unable to give, so the officers concluded to keep the case. The liquors were finally claimed by G. F. Hewitt, of Worcester, but his claim was not allowed, and he was assessed the costs of the case, from which he appealed.

ABOUT GETTING TO THE DEPOT.

Now that the convenient opening in the fence separating the railroad station from the village has been closed, so that people in the business part of the place can reach the station only by a long detour, there is fresh interest in the question, made famous by Tweed, "What are you going to do about it?" Fortunately the Legislature came to the relief of the town in this matter, in April, by passing an act obliging the Boston & Albany road to provide better access to its station, and it would seem to be in order to petition the railroad commissioners to give a hearing in the matter, as provided in the act, which reads as follows:

AN ACT TO PROVIDE BETTER ACCESS TO THE STATION OF THE BOSTON AND ALBANY RAILROAD COMPANY IN THE TOWN OF PALMER.

Section 1. The Boston and Albany Railroad Company shall construct and maintain a footway or other additional approach to its station in the town of Palmer, for the accommodation of persons traveling on foot between said station and Main street in said town. The board of railroad commissioners, after hearing all persons in interest, shall order and determine the location and manner of the construction thereof, but no such footway or other approach to said station shall cross the tracks of said company at grade.

Sec. 2. The cost of the construction of said footway or other approach shall be borne by said company.

Sec. 3. This act shall take effect upon its passage.

VICTORIOUS AGAIN.

The Unions of Worcester came to Palmer feeling sure of the game last Saturday, but were done up 15 to 12 in a loosely played game on both sides. The Worcesters played a much better game in the field than the home team, but they couldnt hit Rooney's pitching, while Sugrue took in every thing behind the bat. The Palmers gained a good lead in the third inning, when they made nine runs by good batting. Kenare made a fine double play at third base by jumping and catching a high ball, and Betts at short made a good catch of a hot liner with two men out and three men on bases. The score:

Innings.....	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Palmers.....	1	2	9	1	0	0	0	2	0	—15
Worcesters.....	0	3	0	4	1	0	3	0	1	—12

There was a good deal of betting on the game, certain Palmer "sports" going back on the home team and backing the Worcesters, and one of them came from the grounds nearly $40 poorer in consequence. The Palmers play well together as a whole, but the crowd would relish a little less "chin" to the umpire from certain ones. To-morrow they play the Thorndikes on the home grounds, the game being called at 4 o'clock. Other games have been arranged as follows: July 30, Rockets of Ludlow at Palmer; August 6, probably Hampdens at Palmer; August 13, Monsons at Palmer.

A FEW ASSESSORS' FIGURES.

The assessors have at last finished their labors, and find that the total valuation of the town is $2,610,804, an increase of $29,691 over last year. The real estate is valued at $1,765,687, and the personal at $815,117. There are 1430 polls, a gain of 59, of which 7 are women. The total tax to be raised is $43,055.93, and the rate is $15.40 per $1000. These persons pay $50 and over:

ILLEGAL INSURANCE.

Probably no town in the state contains a more insured class of citizens than Palmer. The village supports some twenty or more protective organizations, besides which two life insurance agents have done a good business here for a year or more. And yet every new agent will find more or less risks if he tries. This was the case with J. R. George, the president of the "Odd Fellows' Mutual Aid and Accident Association" of Pipua, O., who was soliciting insurance in this place a few days ago. He secured a number of policy takers, and left for Warren. One man, however, did not exactly like the looks of the thing, and forwarded a prospectus of the concern to Insurance Commissioner Merrill, receiving a reply that the company had not and could not be admitted to do business in this state under existing laws. The association requires no medical examination, and will insure any Odd Fellow under 55 years of age "who is in good standing in his lodge, who has not sustained bodily injury and is not suffering from disease or infirmity which would render him liable to retard recovery from, or be aggravated by personal injury," who will comply with the regulations, by-laws and forms of the association on payment of the membership fee and one assessment at the time of making application; but the representative of the association did not require the membership fee under 30 days, giving a receipt for the amount of one assessment in advance, and if the member wishes to continue his membership he must forward the fee. The cost of the membership fee is $2 on $1000 and the annual dues are $1 on $1000. The weekly benefit $5 on $1000, and one-half of the amount of the policy is payable upon the loss of a hand or foot. The members are divided into three classes, the rate of assessment on $1000 being from 50 cents to $1.10, from 75 cents to $1.35, and from $1 to $1.60, respectively.

THORNDIKE.

Miss Lizzie Foley is at home for a short time.

Miss Bessie Edwards, of Orange, is visiting friends here.

D. J. Mahony of Kansas City was in the village last Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs, of Orange, spent Sunday with Mrs. Breard.

Mr. L. M. Ham, of Saco, Me., has been spending a few days with C. L. Plummer.

Ed. Bond, of Springfield, has been spending a few days with his uncle, A. M. Bond.

Charles Page, who for the past 12 years has been in the stove and hardware business with A. M. Bond, is soon to remove to Springfield.

The Hampdens failed to put in an appearance for last Saturday's ball game with the Thorndikes, so a game was arranged with the second nine, and resulted in the defeat of the latter by the score of 10 to 9. The Thorndikes are soon to have new suits, and expect to play the Palmers at Palmer to-morrow afternoon.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

Dentist Fred Buffington and wife of Springfield are boarding at the Collins House.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. McIntyre of Springfield have been visiting at Station Agent Stebbins's.

The Christian Endeavor delegates came back from Saratoga with glowing accounts of what they saw and heard there.

Dr. Spear's family from Kentucky are at their summer home on the mountain. The Dr. came with them but returned to Kentucky Monday. He preached at Grace church last Sunday.

Grist mill base ball stock has risen at least a hundred per cent since last Saturday, when the second game was played with the Papermakers, and the meal bags won by a score of 35 to 28, with only eight innings played by the grist mills on account of the darkness. At the end of the second inning the score stood 11 to 3 in favor of the papermakers, but the man who remarked that it was just like playing alone found that he had his hands full a little later on. Two of the grist mill men have chosen sides and a game will be played the 23d, if pleasant, that is expected to lay out all the rest.

WILBRAHAM.

C. C. Beebe has returned to Colorado.

Dr. Steele is spending a part of his vacation in Vermont.

BRIMFIELD.

Miss Bertha L. Noyes, of Haverhill, is in town visiting her friends on Prospect Hill.

Rev. W. K. Pierce of the Second church is having a vacation and visiting his friends in Needham. The church will be closed during his absence.

Wednesday of this week John Plympton cut his leg quite seriously while cradling grain. Dr. Sawin carefully dressed the wound, and probably Mr. Plympton will soon be about again.

The base ball game of last Saturday resulted in a score of 13 for the East Brimfields and 26 for the Brimfields. It took three hours to play the game. Umpire, Herbert Shaw, of Wales.

The assessors have finished their work and report the valuation of the town to be $480,340, of which $387,600 is real estate and $92,740 personal. There are 300 polls. The tax to be assessed is $7551.92, and the rate $14 per $1000. These persons pay $50 and over: J. T. Brown, $56; M. H. Baker, 68; J. H. Brown, 64; O. F. Brown, 54, L. Booth, 61; E. B. Brown, 66; Dr. Chamberlain, 52; A. & B. W. Charles, 116; Mrs. S. F. Converse, 157; J. F. Converse, 75; H. S. Lee and A. L. Converse, trustees, 250; G. A. I. Dunham, 52; J. C. Dix, 50; R. Alexander, 66; John Wilber, 61; A. W. Crossman, 80; Snell auger company, 109; M. E. Shattuck, 60.

BELCHERTOWN.

Louis Chandler of Springfield was in town for a few days the first of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Barton expect to spend next week in Boston and that vicinity.

Senator M. P. Walker sailed for Europe Tuesday on the Alaska. He will not remain abroad long.

Mrs. R. W. Stratton and Prof. Cowles of Amherst, and Oliver Walker of Northampton were in town Tuesday.

Mr. Boyd, son of Rev. Pliny Boyd of Granby, supplied the pulpit of the Congregational church last Sunday.

Postmaster W. E. Bridgeman and wife have taken a trip to Nantucket this week. They will probably return Saturday.

The rain which followed that of Sunday night has been very refreshing, as well as the little let up to the extreme heat.

Some of the trees at "Westview" that were set out last winter show signs of decay. The hot dry weather has been too severe for them.

Mrs. Samuel McCoy, after a long and severe illness, died at her home in town Wednesday. Her funeral was attended Friday afternoon at her late residence.

Mr. and Mrs. William Chapman of West Springfield and Miss M. D. Chapin of Chicopee were in town Tuesday. Miss Chapin will remain for a part of the vacation period.

During the thunder storm of last Saturday night the lightning struck the house occupied by John Doherty and family, south of the village. The bolt struck and shattered the chimney and passed down a rafter, entering a room in the upper part of the house where two of the children were asleep, stunning them so that considerable effort was needed to resuscitate them. Fortunately the house was not fired, and no one was seriously harmed.

WEST WARREN.

William A. Benson has bought the Mary A. Whipple property on Summer street.

Rev. Father David Moyes of St. Thomas' church has returned from his trip to Europe.

Rev. B. F. Kingsley, pastor of the Methodist church, is seriously ill with a stomach difficulty.

Mrs. Kennedy and her son left for New York Wednesday morning, and sailed for Paris Thursday.

Burrill's musical and comedy company gave an entertainment in Washington Hall Thursday night.

Jerre Haley was seriously injured last Friday by being thrown from a wagon on the Brimfield road.

D. Peltier, the newly-elected president of the St. Jean Baptiste society, was fined $100 and costs last Monday by Trial Justice Tyler, for illegal liquor selling.

The large iron kettle in the Warren Cotton Mills dye house, used for boiling cotton, exploded about 7 o'clock Tuesday night. The tank contained about 1750 lbs. of cotton, which was strewn all over the room, and was blown with such force as to break out 28 windows, while some of it was thrown clear across the river. A brick partition was partly torn down, and the outside wall forced out near the roof. The tank itself was driven through the floor over head, and knocked a hole through the roof. The damage will not exceed $250, as but very little of the cotton will be lost, and the brick work and floor timbers can be easily replaced. The watchman at the boiler house and a man employed in the dye house had been in and examined the tank a few minutes before the explosion, and pronounced it all right. Some of the papers have had it that there was a narrow escape of the loss of many lives. This is rendered impossible, for the steam is not let on until after everybody has left the building at night.

BONDSVILLE.

Patrick Sullivan, who was so badly scalded last week, is recovering.

The new house of John Brown on Prospect street is nearly finished.

Michael Slattery has completed his large new barn on the road to Forest Lake.

Several of the friends and relatives of Wilbur Holdridge met at his home last Friday evening, and with gifts and kind wishes made the anniversary of his wedding day a very pleasant occasion.

The work of excavating for the Central Massachusetts road in this vicinity is nearly finished, and the gangs of Italians are expected to leave soon. Twelve of them have been engaged by T. D. Potter to work in a brick yard in Connecticut.

The ladies of the Methodist Society will hold a lawn party at the home of Mrs. F. A. Packard to-morrow afternoon and evening, a good supper and plenty of ice cream are on the programme, and a pleasant entertainment and general good time promised the young folk.

Saloon keeper Maurice Moriarty, who has, among other devices, sought to dispose of his wares by illegal gaming, came to grief Tuesday morning. He was arrested and brought before Judge Robinson, who fined him $50 and costs, and sentenced him to three months in the house of correction. Moriarty, thinking the sentence too heavy for simply breaking the law, appealed to the superior court, and is under bonds to appear at Springfield September next.

The people feel to congratulate themselves at the way in which temperance work has thus far been advanced. Facts begin to show that no license does prohibit, if the authorities have the moral courage and backbone to enforce the laws, and the citizens sustain the acts of their agents. What's the matter with the Belcher's side of our village? "They say" there's plenty of rum there and no one to mole.

The following is the decree in the recent equity case of Charles F. Aldrich, et als vs Sarah E. Aldrich, Judge Dewey remarking that he reluctantly made the order but could see no other way:

And it having been made to appear that said alleged deed was by one Henry E. Aldrich, husband of said Sarah E., improperly altered and changed after it was executed and before it was recorded, which alterations or changes were to the prejudice of the plaintiffs in said bill and were void in law, but constitute a cloud on the title of said plaintiffs to an undivided portion of said premises. It is further ordered and decreed that said record of said deed be corrected and amended by striking out the name "Sarah" wherever it occurs therein and inserting instead thereof the name "Henry" and by changing the word "her" to "his" in the two places where it occurs, and by changing the word "fifteenth" to the word "tenth" and the word "seventy" to the words "sixty-eight" in the testimonium clause of said alleged deed as recorded, and by changing the figures "fifteen" to the figures "10" and the figures "10" to the figures "68" in the certificate of acknowledgement of said deed as it appears on said record. So that as thus amended said record shall appear to be and shall be of a deed from said McKinstry to said Henry E. Aldrich, by heirs and assigns acknowledged January 10, 1868, and the amendment of said record shall be made by recording his decree in said register in due form and by writing on margin of the record of said alleged deed these words: "This record is amended by order of court," and adding thereto a reference to the book and page in said registry where this decree shall be recorded; and henceforth between the said parties and each and all of them and all persons claiming or holding under them or any of them and as to all of the persons, it shall be deemed, taken and held to all interests and purposes that said Henry E. Aldrich was seized fee and owner of said premises at the time of his death, namely December 4, 1886, as against said deed as recorded and all rights of any part thereunder, except so far as any part of said premises may have been conveyed to one John A. Orcutt by deed dated December 20, 1886, and recorded in book 323 page 24. But nothing herein contained shall be to the prejudice of any other right, title, claim or interest that said Sarah E. may have in and to said premises as described in said bill, except under and by virtue of said alleged deed and said record thereof."

JOTTINGS FROM THE HUB.

From our Special Correspondent.

BOSTON, July 20th, 1887.

The advance of the summer season finds the trees on Boston common looking much the worse for the introduction of English sparrows. Perhaps the rich people who are enjoying themselves at Nahant, Nantasket, Manchester, and other resorts by the sea or in the mountains do not care how much the trees are stripped, but the dwellers in town mind it appreciably. A close observer of our singing birds tells me that we have now in Boston only the English sparrow and the robin redbreast. The blue-birds, chipping sparrow and other species of our small song birds are all gone, and the presence of worms shows their absence. This same observer says that the efforts of the Audubon society to prevent the slaughter of birds so that their plumage may be used as bonnet ornaments have been remarkably successful in this state. Whereas a year or two ago, it was a rare thing to see a woman's bonnet which was not bedecked with the trophies of slaughtered birds, now it is comparatively rare to observe them. One may see the wings of teal or other shore birds, but these birds are shot for the table, and if the hunter wishes to save their plumage for the milliner, there is not so much objection to that. The object of the recent agitation has been to preserve from destruction our small singing birds, and it has been successful to the point of stopping the use of their bodies, in whole or in part, for millinery purposes. It is expected that the songsters will increase now through our country towns, for the boys and sportsmen will not have so much temptation to kill them. Very likely in a few years the fashion will swing back toward feathers again, but now that the spirit of humanity has been aroused on behalf of the birds, it is not likely that they will ever be slaughtered as recklessly as they were before.

The Audubon society began in January the publication (through the office of Forest and Stream) of a little monthly magazine whose object is to save the birds. From the numbers of it I have seen, it is amply worth to many country boys the small sum charged for it on account of the large amount of information it contains about our common birds. One feature of it is that it reprints, though in plain color, and on a reduced scale, the careful pictures of our American birds which, in their natural colors and almost life size, are the marvel of the Audubon volumes.

In the July number (just out) is a letter from Florida with a pitiful account of the slaughter of birds there for use by the milliner's agents. Thousands of them are killed, and that implies thousands more of the little birds left to starve to death in their nests. It is a disgrace to any being in the shape of man that he will do such cruel acts.

I suspect that Prof. W. T. Harris of the Concord school of philosophy will be more popular with the non-philosophizing people in consequence of what he said at the school to-day. It was in the discussion following the lecture of Prof. Luigi Ferri of the University of Rome upon "Aristotle and Montesquien's 'Spirit of the Laws'." He said that the supreme practical triumph of philosophy in the history of the world was in the constitution of the United States. Well, you may ask, how does that have any practical connection with philosophy? Prof. Harris traced it something like this: Aristotle recognized the truth that for every particular thing there must be a particular class to which it belongs, and for every general there must be a universal, and he said there were three functions in government like it—the majesty of the sovereign, the law-making to-day, and the law-applying tribunal. With Montesquien these same three things became the executive, the legislative, and the judicial functions. These were in the British constitution, which Montesquien praises much, but they were not distinct, as the king shared all three. Then came our constitution-makers, who went one step further and gave us our separate executive, legislative and judicial departments—or the divine reason manifested in the human, as it is called—and the supreme practical step of philosophy was reached.

The philosophic turn in the thought is very interesting. The law-making body represents the universal. It legislates for no man, or class, but for everybody. Then comes the law-applying tribunal, which has to decide whether the law does or does not apply to a particular individual. If it does apply, it turns the criminal over to the executive, who inflicts the penalty, even though the person who carries out the law may have the utmost sorrow for the fate of the offender. Prof. Harris, by the way, said that the Montesquien, De Tocqueville and Buckle are of no permanent value, because they get mixed up in their masses of facts and do not see the underlying principles as Aristotle did. Buckle, he said, wrote history backward.

The chief interest in our state politics now centers in the meeting of the Republican state committee July 27 to select the time and place of the state convention, and to choose a presiding officer and a chairman of the committee on resolutions. I expect that there will be a sharp internal contest over the make-up of that committee. The question is whether it shall have a majority of Republicans who believe in submitting a prohibition amendment to the people, or whether that plank shall be dropped out this year. To do the latter would be to go backward, but there are many men in the party who believe that last year's step was bad policy, and they will oppose it this year, no matter what the composition of the committee.

The death of Uriel Crocker, of the old and honored book-publishing firm of Crocker & Brewster, will be heard of with regret by all familiar with the Boston of his day. The firm sign hung on Washington street for 57 years, and in 1875 they were bought out by H. O. Houghton & Co., which, after several changes, now stands as Houghton, Mifflin & Co.

Boston's pride in its base ball nine is increasing and, despite occasional reverses, its friends hope yet to see it stand at the top by the close of the season.

A GREAT MINING ENTERPRISE.

One of the most promising enterprises organized here recently, is the Tortilita Gold and Silver Mining Company with a capital of $1,000,000, in shares of $2 each. Its property comprises twelve developed mines and a mill in Pinal County, Arizona, a district known for its rich and generous deposits of ore. The mines cover a territory three miles long and there are over 250 acres of ore deposits. Over $150,000 in bullion was taken out in the prospecting and development work. Two of the mines which are now being worked, apparently contain an inexhaustible supply of ore averaging over $150 per ton. They have been worked to the water level where the ore concentrates in a solid body 42½ feet wide which has been tested thirty feet below, thus demonstrating their permanency. This is believed to be one of the largest and richest bodies of ore on this continent. Mr. Jos. H. Reall is the president of the company, whose offices are 57 Broadway, New York City. Dividends will commence to be paid monthly Sept. 1. Prospectus will be sent on application.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhoea, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the perscription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists broughout the world. Price 25c. a bottle. 1y21

ASTONISHING SUCCESS.

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing consumption, severe coughs, croup, asthma, pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle, as 80,000 dozen bottles were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask you druggist about it. Sample bottles to try, sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in the United States and Canada. 47eow

PECULIAR

To itself in many important particulars, Hood's Sarsaparilla is different from and superior to and other medicine.

Peculiar in combination, proportion and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom.

Peculiar in its medicinal merit, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown.

Peculiar in strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One hundred doses one dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Peculiar in its "good name at home"—there is more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers.

Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad; no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time. Be sure to get

SULPHUR BITTERS

THE BEST AND PUREST MEDICINE EVER MADE.

It will drive the Humor from your system, and make your skin clean and smooth. Those Pimples and Blotches which mar your beauty are caused by impure blood, and can be removed in a short time, if you are wise and use the great blood purifier, SULPHUR BITTERS.

What makes you tremble so? Your nerves are all unstrung, and need a gentle, soothing tonic to assist nature to repair the damage which your excesses have caused.

DON'T GIVE UP!

Sulphur Bitters is NOT a cheap rum or poor whisky drink, to be taken by the glass, like other preparations, which stimulate only to destroy. Why suffer with Boils? Why rave with that terrible headache? Why lay and toss on that bed of pain with rheumatism?

If you have failed to receive any benefit from other medicines or doctors, do not despair. Use Sulphur Bitters. They will cure you when all others fail. No person can remain long sick who uses SULPHUR BITTERS.

The dose is small—only a teaspoonful. It is the best and cheapest medicine. Try it, and you will be satisfied. Get it of your druggist. Don't wait, get it at once. If you are suffering from Kidney Disease, and wish to live to old age, use Sulphur Bitters. They never fail to cure. SULPHUR BITTERS.

Midsummer Madness.

"Bring hither, bring hither my red bandbox;
Bring hither my bandbox green,
And my bandbox brown from London town,
And my box of silver sheen.

"And it's oh for my trunk of leather tough,
And my trunk of oak-ribbed zinc;
And my trunk so tough of canvass stuff,
That will bulge but will not shrink.

"Oh, pile them high with robes I wear,
Till their lids they overflow;
My lord he will stare, and eke he will swear,
But in they will have to go."

"Oh, waly, waly, my ladye fair,
Now whither and will ye flee?"
"To Mount Saint Bushall of Worri-Ancair
On Conyile—by-the-sea."

They have seized her boxes one and all,
In the Tavern Lafitte de Kidd,
And loudly for help the porters call,
As they stack them up in the entry and hall,
And pile them high aginst bulkhead and wall;
But wherever they stow them great and small,
Far out of her reach they are slid.

Her room is a cell a fathom long,
Her bed is a thing of fears;
Where all night long the noiseless song
Of the wingless bird she hears.

And her lord he lies in a hallway lone,
On a sleep-destroying cot,
Where she hears him groan in a wrathful tone—
"It's (hush) It's ('sh! hush!) hot!"

And all this time in their home in town,
A mansion of cold gray stone,
There are peaceful glooms in seventeen rooms,
Where the burglar sleeps alone.

A SOUR—LEMON.

Somehow, as the shadows slowly
Spread their wings o'er nature still,
Somehow, once, my arm slipped round her,

"I'm no lemon, sir, I think!"

FLORIDA BUZZARDS.

While a party was out fishing at Lochloosa, a short time since, a large alligator was shot, which sank to the bottom and remained there until it died. When the carcass came to the surface the buzzards soon discovered it, and they swarmed about it in large numbers. The breeze kept the lake in such a ripple, however, that they could not keep a foothold on the body of the 'gator, as it turned and floated with every wave. The Florida buzzard is a shrewd bird, and his reasoning powers are much greater than he has ever gained credit for. Baffled by the wind and waves, and hungry from fruitless efforts to anchor the 'gator, the birds held a consultation. As a result, two of them flew at the 'gator, and fastening their talons on the body, they spread their wings, sail fashion, and pushed the carcass to the shore of the lake, where the flock made a hearty meal. The buzzard is not a pretty bird, nor is he known in song and story like the American eagle. His name brings up the suggestion of bad odors, and he is never made a pet of or shown that kindness and consideration accorded to more favored birds. But when it comes down to good, hard mule sense and practical and calculating ingenuity he can discount all his kin, notwithstanding his well-known reputation for dullness and stupidity. The Florida buzzard is entitled to the chromo.—Palatka News.

THE TELEPHONE EAR.

One of the most curious things arising from the use of the telephone is the development of the "telephone ear." At any lecture, where the speaker can only be heard with difficulty, it will be seen that every listener will turn the ear he uses at the telephone. This would seem to prove that the telephone quickens rather than dulls the hearing. Yet you tell a person the other ear is not good and he will get indignant. Here in the Central office, where a single ear is on a constant strain, we do not notice that the other ear suffers from the disuse. Persons have an idea that the shock they get sometimes when they have the trumpet at their ear and the operator carelessly rings them up, injures the tympanum because the ear buzzes for a moment or two. That may be so, but I have never heard of it being so in fact.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

How Time Flew.—The brisk, lively housekeeper is described aptly in a new novel of western life, 'Zury.' 'She was called a "come gals kind of a woman" by neighbors, partly in ridicule of her enthusiasm and partly in admiration of her energy. It was told of her that she would get up before light on Monday, "fly around," uncover the fire, hang on the kettle and call up the ladder to the loft: "Come, gals! Dew start up'n start in! To-day's Monday, to-morrow's Tuesday, 'n' next day's Wednesday, 'n' then comes Thursday, Friday 'n Saturday—the hull week gone 'n' nothin' done."'

Longest Rivers in the World.—The eight longest rivers in the world, according to the calculations of Maj.-Gen. A. von Tiblo, are as follows: Missouri-Mississippi, 4194 miles; Nile, 4020; Yang-tse-Kiang, 3158; Amazon, 3063; Yenesei-Scanga, 2950; Amoor, 2950; Congo, 2883; Mackenzie, 2868. The length of the Missouri-Mississippi is taken from the report of Messrs. Humphreys and Abbott. Kloders estimates it at 3,658 miles.—Public Opinion.

Madame was diverting herself by propounding to a caller the venerable conundrum, "Why is a sewing-machine like a kiss?" THE LADIES AND THE LOBSTERS.

Two young ladies stood on the Manahuset wharf at New London the other day, and watched a half dozen veteran fisherman engaged in unloading a lobster schooner. The lobsters were taken out in a skein, put in a larger basket, weighed, and then dropped in safes until needed. The questions put by the ladies were really very interesting and, as "Looker-on" kept a log-book, they can be given verbatim:

"Dear, dear, what do you call those green things?"

"Those, my child, those are New York oysters," said the hardy mariner.

"Do you send them to New York, sir?"

"Yes, some of them go to New York and some to Boston."

"Do they ever bite and cling to you?"

"My child, they will cling to you like a spring overcoat in December, if they ever got a hold."

"Won't you please allow one of them to get a hold, so that we may see how they bite?".

"I would like to oblige you, my daughter, but to tell you the honest truth I would prefer to be kicked by an elephant than to allow one of these little varmits a chance to wrestle you. Why, they would hold on better than John McMahon in his best days."

"But why is it you throw them into the water again after they are weighed and picked?"

"They are thrown into the locker to become ripe."

"Is that so, dear, dear; I never imagined that it was necessary for a fish to become ripe. I wish you would give me one for a pet, it would just match my new dress. Good-bye, sir, I wish you would send one up to my hotel. I want it for a pet. Good-bye, sir; so glad to have met you."

The hardy mariner went below and whistled "Nancy Lee" much to his own gratification, and the lobsters wriggled on and the air was as calm as it was before the ladies made their appearance.—Boston Record.

Dr. Felix Oswald says that consumption is more easily cured than any other chronic disease. The population living at an elevation of 4000 feet above the sea level have been shown to be quite free from consumption. What the doctor calls "indigestion of respiration" is bred by humid climates and stagnant air. He believes in the theory of the German Dr. Koch, that parasites are a phrase of the disease, but maintains that their appearance does not amount to a death sentence. "Cease to feed the lungs with azotic gases, he says, and Dr. Koch's animalcula will starve and disappear. He claims that all except the last stages of consumption can be subdued by outdoor exercise. He condems the night air superstitions, and recommends mountain excursions, even to the extent of a three-months' tour under the disadvantages of insufficient clothing and protracted fasts, as certain to effect a cure in a majority of cases. He points out malnutrition of the lungs as one of the primary causes of consumption, and suggests fatty substances and sweet cream as the best lung food. A vocal effort, he says, does not injure the respiratory organs; on the contrary it strengthens them, and he thinks the consumptives should envy cattle drivers, whose business gives them a plausible pretext for yelling. Too many clothes he considers harmful, whereby the perspiration is forced back upon the body, and the lungs have to do double work.

Advice to Young Housekeepers.—The young housekeeper should avoid the temptation to spend money too freely upon her house. It is a hard struggle sometimes not to buy this or that trifle that would add to the beauty and comfort of the little home, but while the refusal to acquire it often causes a sharp pang, its purchase may result in regrets of a more serious character. An excellent rule for people of limited means is to buy nothing for which they are unable to pay cash. Anticipating money is a sorry business. With judgment and economy the housekeeper can generally save a small sum from her weekly allowance. A quarter here, a half dollar there, a dime perhaps in another place, may seem almost too unimportant to lay aside, but the aggregate proves very useful occasionally. "Despise not the day of small things," is a motto that should be learned and put in practice by every housekeeper. Such saving should be put away for any additions to her household belongings that she may desire to make, and not thrown into the general fund. No one has a right to say what shall be done with such sums if not she who has earned them by her economy as truly as does her husband his savings by his labor.—Harper's Bazar.

The Woman Who Laughs.—For a good, everyday household angel give us the woman who laughs. Her biscuits may not be always just right, and she may occasionally burn her bread and forget to replace dislocated buttons, but for solid comfort all day and every day she is a very paragon. Home is not a battlefield, nor life one long, unending row. The trick of always seeing the bright side, or, if the matter has no bright side, of shining up the dark one, is a very important faculty—one of the things no woman should be without. We are not all born with the sunshine in our hearts, as the Irish prettily phrase it, but we can cultivate a cheerful sense of humor if we only try.—Rural New Yorker.

In Business for Herself.—Dry Goods Dealer (to saleswoman)—I was very sorry, Miss Satinette, to receive your resignation. Aren't you satisfied with your place here? Miss Satinette—Ye-es, sir; but I've had the offer of a better one. Dry Goods Dealer—Well, if it is a question of salary, Miss Satinette, I would be willing—— Miss Satinette—It is not a question of salary, sir. Young Mr. Highcollar, of the furnishing department, made me an advantageous offer last evening which I accepted. I'm to be the junior member of the firm.—New York Sun.

"Some said, 'John, print it,' others said, 'Not so.' Some said, 'It might do good,' others said. 'No.'" If the discoverer of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy had shared the senseless prejudices of a certain class of physicians he would have refused to print the good news, to proclaim to the world the glorious tidings that an infallible remedy for that most loathsome disease, catarrh, had been discovered. But he advertised liberally and the result has justified him in the course he pursued. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy never fails. All druggists.

ENGINEER BAXTER.

HE TELLS THE STORY OF A TEN YEARS' FIGHT.

About the year 1876 I was superintending some work on Harlem Flats. The ground was composed of earth that had been dumped on the soft and spongy shores of the Harlem River, and was full of decaying vegetable matter. From frequent visits I contracted dumb ague—the worst and most persistent form of malarial fever, the most perplexing to deal with and the hardest to break up. When dumb ague once gets hold of a man it sticks to him like his skin or the color of his eyes.

Well, my physician prescribed quinine; very large doses of it—fifteen grains at a dose, if I remember right. It is sufficiently to the purpose to say that in a general way I kept on taking quinine in this liberal style for ten years. Not every day, of course, but as the disease troubled me more or less; yet I may be said to have been under the influence of quinine all that time.

After this steady dosing with quinine for several months I began to feel the bad effects of it. My hearing grew dull. Then memory got to be uncertain on special points, and I caught myself forgetting things which I never forgot before.

Another peculiarity of my ailment was this: I had one "well" week and one "sick" week, as other malaria patients have sick and well DAYS.

During the ten years I speak of I used to take quinine raw—that is, I poured it in whisky and drank the mixture. I did this so often that the drugg'st knew my habit, and, as I entered his store he would often greet me with the remark:

"I know what you want, you want some quinine and whisky."

About a year ago I saw Kaskine advertised, and said to my wife: "I am going to buy a bottle of that stuff." Believe in it? Bless you no. Why should I? But it was a chance. I got it and began taking it according to directions. I commenced feeling better almost immediately. In a few days the worst symptoms abated, and in less than three months I was cured! Not a sign of malaria was left, and the indigestion and dyspepsia went with it. This is now nearly a year ago, and I have had no relapse, and don't expect any. My nervous system got back its tone, and to-day I am as good as new.

What I think of Kaskine you may infer from this condensed statement of the facts in my case.

C. BAXTER.

A Friend in Need

With what alacrity SANFORD'S GINGER responds to the cry of distress. No cramp or pain has ever made a demand upon it for relief or cure that has not met with instant response.

It is a delicious combination of Imported Ginger, Choice Aromatics, and French Brandy, totally unlike and vastly suderior to all other "gingers," pain cures and nauseating nostrums.

Unripe food, impure water, unhealthy climate-unwholesome food, Malaria, Epidemic and Contagious Diseases, Cholera Morbus, Cramps, Pains, Indigestion, Colds, Chills, Simple Fevers, Exhaustion, Nervousness or Loss of Sleep, that beset the traveler or household at this season, are nothing to those protected by SANFORD'S GINGER.

Avoid cheap and dangerous imitations said to be "the same," or "as good," or "cheaper" than Sanford's Ginger.

Meadow Talk.

A bumble-bee, yellow as gold,
Sat perched on a red clover-top,
When a grass-hopper, wiry and old,
Came along with a skip and a hop.
"Good morrow!" cried he, "Mr. Bumble-Bee!
You seem to have come to a stop."

"We people that work,"
Said the bee with a jerk,
Find a benefit sometimes in stopping;
Only insects like you,
Who have nothing to do,
Can keep up a perpetual hopping."

The grasshopper paused on his way,
And thoughtfully hunched up his knees;
"Why trouble this sunshiny day," Quoth he, "with reflections like these?
I follow the trade for which I was made;
We all can't be wise bumble-bees."

"There is a time to be sad,
And a time to be glad;
A time both for working and stopping;
For men to make money,
For you to make honey,
And for me to do nothing but hopping.

St. Nicholas.

JIM POULDER'S MISTAKE.

A pleasant, balmy day in May. The windows of the railway car were open. There was a breeze stirring; and though a cloud of dust was blown in, it was also blown out, with the exception of a tired portion which stopped to rest on the clothes of the passengers, or burrowed for its own safety in their ears or nostrils. There were only two vacant seats in the car, and at Pankehap station two persons came in to fill them. One of these was an old man—on a second look, he was probably not over 50—with iron-gray hair, partly covered with a slouched felt hat, and clad in a new suit of gray stuff that seemed to have been made for some one else. With him was a young and very pretty girl, whose dress was of ordinary stuff, but well-fitting, and who was well-gloved and well-shod.

The observer would set down the two for a well-to-do farmer and his daughter, who were traveling for business or pleasure. The man looked around. The two vacant seats were on the opposite side of the car. In one of them sat a young, well-dressed, and apparently self-satisfied gentleman, and the space by his side was occupied by a handbag of crocodile leather and a spring overcoat. In the other was another young man, not quite so extravagantly dressed, though neatly clad, and not as handsome as the first, though he had an open and intelligent countenance. The farmer looked around, and, motioning his daughter to the vacant seat, said: "There's a place for you, Lucy." Then, turning to the young man with his satchel, he asked: "Seat engaged?"

The young man looked up, curled his lip superciliously, and said: "Man to fill it 'll be here presently, I dare say."

"Ah!" said the farmer, coolly removing the gripsack and overcoat, and placing them on the young man's lap, "then I'll occupy it until he comes." And he seated himself accordingly, while the young man glared at him.

The one on the other side looked amused; and then, rising, said: "You had better exchange seats with me, sir, and then the young lady and yourself will be together."

"Thank you," was the farmer's reply; and the exchange was quietly effected.

The two young men were evidently acquainted; for the courteous one said to the other, in a low voice: "Jim Poulder, you made a mistake there."

"I never make mistakes, Frank Bolling," replied the other. "I dare say you'll make your fortune one of these days by being polite to the granger population; but my fortune is already made."

The first speaker said nothing more, but dragging a newspaper from his pocket, opened it and ran his eyes over its columns.

Poulder yawned a little, and at last said: "This is too dull for yours faithfully, James Poulder. I'll go into the smoking-car and take a whiff. Have a snifter?" he inquired, producing a pocket-flask.

"No, thank you, replied Bolling. "That stuff is rather too fiery for me."

"Here goes alone, then. That's as fine brandy as ever crossed the ocean. Day-day! Keep an eye to my traps, will you? and don't give up my seat to every country yokel who asks it."

The elegant young gentleman shook himself, and made his way forward to the car especially provided for fumigation.

When he had gone the old man leaned over the arm of his seat and addressed Bolling.

"Excuse me, sir. but didn't your friend who has left say that his name was James Poulder?"

"That is his name, sir," replied the young man; "but he is not exactly a friend of mine, though we live in the same place, and I know him very well."

"May I enquire where he is from?"

"Yes, sir; Careysburg."

"Son of Peter B. Poulder, the great pork packer there, isn't he?"

"Yes, sir."

"His father should deal with him. It would be quite in his line."

"Oh, papa!" said a sweet, reproachful voice, as those near who heard the colloquy tittered.

"It is a fact, Lucy," rejoined the farmer.

The old man, who was evidently intelligent, entered into a general conversation with the younger, and soon showed that he was quite well informed. Bolling was glad of a conference so entertaining, especially when, as his eyes were bent in that direction, he saw the young lady was an interested, and he hoped, a pleased listener. There was something very sweet in the expression of her countenance—an unmistakable impress of modesty and innocence on her features. They chatted away, and the elder, so dexterously that the younger never perceived it, drew out of the other his position, prospects and intentions.

Bolling was frank by nature, and the questions of his interlocutor, who was as ingenious as the other was ingenuous, were craftily put. The sharp granger soon learned that Frank Bolling had been engaged for some time in the study of law; but that his father, having met with reverses, and having two younger daughters to educate, the young man determed to make his burden less, and had set out to support himself, abandoned his law studies, and taken a situation as salesman at a country store in Griffton, a thriving town about five miles from the main line.

"I get but a beggarly pay, of course," said Frank, gaily. "I am only a raw hand; but I have a promise that, when I am better qualified, my wages will be increased."

"You are rather a singular person," said the old man bluffly. "Most young men would have talked of their salary."

"I rather prefer the old style of English," said Bolling. "I am to be a hireling; and the compensation of a hireling is called wages. But wages or salary—the terms are indifferent to me."

"My place is within a mile of Griffton," said the old man. "I have a notion that I knew your father once. Wasn't he at Harvard in his time?"

"Yes, sir, and so was I. We are alumni of the same school."

"I wonder if he remembers his old chum there—one George Carter—George St. Leger Carter, as they have it on the rolls?"

"Yes, sir; I've heard him speak of him often, though the two have drifted apart since then. Judge Carter, you mean. He lives at Griffton. Do you know him?"

"Um! ye-es! After a fashion."

"Papa!" whispered the young girl; but Bolling's quick ear caught her words; "I know the judge better than you do."

"Be quiet, Puss, will you?" replied her father, in the same tone.

"I am told," resumed the young man, "that he has left the bench, and though quite weathy, has gone back to the bar. I have letters for him which my father, recalling their youthful friendship, insisted on giving me; but I shall not present them."

"Why not? He might be of service to you?"

"Scarcely, sir. You see, I am to be a salesman in a country store, I had better accommodate myself to my position. The judge, even if he remembered old college friendships, wouldn't be likely to consider me a welcome addition to his family circle as a visitor. He is rich; and then he is said to have a very handsome and accomplished daughter, who would, no doubt, look down on me. I have my bread and butter to earn, and had better confine myself to it."

"Possibly you are right. But how came your father to lose his money? I thought he inherited a fine fortune."

"Yes, sir; but he was drawn into incurring responsibility for a relative. He is not ruined by any means, but is merely hampered, and thinks he will pull through in time with a little economy and prudence; and I have no doubt he will. But I am only in his way, or I would have remained."

"Have you ever thought of trying farming?"

"No, sir. I have no capital and know nothing of it."

"Do you know more of selling groceries and dry goods?"

"Not a bit more; but, you see, I am paid something there while I learn."

"Your friend, or your acquaintance, as you call him, goes to Griffton, too—does he?"

"Yes, sir; but he goes there in a different capacity. I believe he represents his father in some transaction about property with the judge, and is to remain there some days as a guest, until the affair is closed. Possibly, as his father wants him to marry, he may be on a tour of observation, and take in the judge's daughter. Though that is impertinent of me, for he has said nothing on the subject."

"Do you think he is so irresistible as to be able to pick and choose at his pleasure?" inquired the girl, looking quizzically over her father's shoulder.

"He can be very fascinating when he chooses, I am told," replied Bolling; "and as he is handsome, an only son, and his father worth millions, he is at least what elderly ladies call a 'good catch.'"

"He puts up his fascination along with his courtesy, I suppose, and leaves both at home when he travels," said the girl.

"Lucy! Lucy!" cried her father, "some thoughts had better be left unspoken."

The conversation turned into other channels. But the old farmer still pursued his queries in the most artful way. There is a strong thirst for information in the rural mind, but in this instance it seemed to be personal.

At length the elegant Jim Poulder came back from the smoking-car, with a strong nicotine aroma shedding itself from his person. He brought something more with him. His voice had that thickness which told of the draining of his pocket-flask. He was jolly and confidential.

"Sorry, old fellow," he said, to have left you so long. Been bored to death for want of company, haven't you?"

"Oh, no! I have enjoyed a very pleasant conversation with our genial neighbor over the way."

"Genial! Well, of all the queer chaps for picking up low acquaintances, you beat 'em, and give 'em six in the game."

"S'sh! They'll hear you."

"Let 'em, who cares? Going to stop at the Junction?"

"No; there is a one-horse sort of connection train, I learn, and I shall push on to Griffton at once."

"I shan't. I'll lie over a day. I'm sort of worn out, and I'll come over to-morrow as fresh as a daisy. Hope you'll have a good time among the cheese and candles. I intend to look in on you before I leave, and see how 'doth the little busy bee improve each shining hour.'"

"Thank you; you're very kind."

The brakeman craned his neck in the door, and uttered some sounds, apparently "Grittin Juxsh'n," which the experienced ear understood to be Griffton Junction, and the travelers for that point left the cars. Poulder made his way, with his luggage, to the little hotel there, while the farmer and daughter, followed by Bolling, made theirs to the single car, with a little superannuated engine attached, which stood waiting. There were no other passengers, and the three had the car to themselves.

"Come over here, Mr. Bolling, said the old man, after the car had been in motion a while, "I want to talk with you a bit. Turn down that seat. That will do. You said you had a letter for Judge Carter, and didn't intend to deliver it?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did it never occur to you, young man, that it was your duty to obey a father's orders?"

"I trust, sir, that I'm usually obedient. It was not a positive order. I shall write to him and explain."

"I tell you that you should deliver that letter to its proper owner. You are only a trustee in the case. I am Judge Carter, and this is my daughter, Lucy. Hand over the paper to the court."

"I beg pardon, but I—"

"You want identification. Here, conductor! Tell this young gentleman who I am."

"Judge Carter," responded the functionary, a little curious to know what it was all about.

"Thank you, Rhillips. That'll do. Now sir."

Bolling, not a little astonished, took the letter from his pocket-book.

"If you'll permit me," said the judge, as he opened the letter and glanced over its contents. "He gives you a good character, and wants me to look after you a little. Ah, how time flies! Lucy, this young fellow's father and I had such good times in the old days. How long did you read law, Bolling?"

"A little over two years, sir."

"Like it?"

"Very much, indeed, sir."

"Whom did you read with?"

"Spence & Sullivan."

"Grand men. Sullivan put you through the office business, I fancy; that's his way. Now, I've been putting you through an exhaustive examination, which is my way, and I think you will do. Let old Bragg find another salesman. He's not dying for you, and I can get him a substitute. I have two students in my office. What they are there for is their own business, but they'll never make a great success at the bar unless they change their ways. I want a clerk to manage my office, and to boss around while I am off on circuit. I'll give you a living salary—not too much, and you can read law meanwhile. You ought to be able to pass in a year. If you turn out as I hope you will, why, when you get your sheepskin, we'll see what can be done. What do you say to it?"

"Say to it, sir. What can I say but yes, and thank you for the offer?"

"Very well, that's settled. Here we are, and there's our carriage. Give your checks to John there, and he'll bring your luggage to the house, along with ours. Show your gallantry, and hand Lucy into the carriage. Jump in. I'll drive."

The next day James Poulder, Esq., made his appearance at the Carters' in a state of elegance, only matched by that of Captain Cuttle's famous watch—never equalled, and rarely excelled. He was ushered into the drawing-room and received by a young lady, whose style suited even his fastidious taste, and whose features had a dim familiarity. When the judge came in, the young man's recognition of the farmer in the cars was complete. He stammered out an apology, but the old man relieved him.

"It could hardly have been expected that you should have known us," said the judge. "Let all that pass. You are quite welcome. As we have two hours before dinner, we'll go to the office to look over the papers together. Miss Carter will excuse you meanwhile."

In the office Poulder found Bolling, who was busy on a declaration.

"Why, Frank, I thought you were going into the grocery business."

"I've changed my mind." replied Frank, resuming his work.

James Poulder stayed his week out, and then took the cars to Careysburg.

Frank Bolling did not make the same trip until two years after. Then he went to visit his father, who had got over his pecuniary troubles, and to see his sisters. He had been admitted to the bar meanwhile, and Judge Carter, whose favorable impression time had confirmed, had taken him into partnership. He had gone into another partnership just before he left. He was in high spirits that trip. He was not alone. Miss Lucy Carter, that had been, Mrs. Francis Bolling then, was his traveling companion.—Independent.

BUTLER AND RANDALL.

When Gen. B. F. Butler was a member of Congress, he and Mr. Randall were frequently pitted against each other, but they, as a rule, preserved good temper and cordial personal feeling for one another. At one point of the famous deadlock over the Civil Rights bill, when Randall was managing the Democratic side, as usual, Butler, who favored holding a session on Sunday, went over to Randall's desk to arrange for it. Randall would not agree to the proposition.

'Bad as I am, I have some respect for God's day,' said he, 'and I don't think it proper to hold a session of Congress on that day.'

'Oh, pshaw!' replied Butler; 'don't the Bible say that it is lawful to pull your ox or ass out of a pit on the Sabbath day? You have 73 asses on your side of the house that I want to get out of this ditch to-morrow, and I think I am engaged in a holy work.'

'Don't do it, Butler,' pleaded Randall. 'I have some respect for you that I don't want to lose. I expect some day to meet you in a better world.'

'You'll be there, as you are here,' retorted Butler, as quick as thought, 'a member of the lower House.'—American Magazine.

DON'T JUDGE FROM APPEARANCES.

People sometimes make great blunders in judging of one's refinement and social position by his dress.

Years ago a famous lawyer and wag came to Boston in a suit of homespun. At the public house some of the fashionable guests undertook to quiz him.

As he entered the parlor of the house he found that several ladies and two or three gentlemen were there assembled, and he heard a remark from one of them, 'Ah, here comes a countryman of the real homespun genus. Here's fun!' Whitman stared at the company and then sat down.

'Say, my friend, you are from the country?' remarked one of the gentlemen.

'Ya-as,' answered Ezekiel, with a ludicrous twist of the face. The ladies tittered.

'What do you think of our city?'

'It's a pooty thick settled place, anyhow. It's got swampin' sight of housen in it.'

'And a good many people, too.'

'Ya-as,' I should reckon so.'

'Many people where you came from?'

'Wall, some.'

'Plenty of ladies, I suppose?'

'Ya-as, a fair sprinklin'.'

'And I don't doubt that you are quite a beau among them?'

'Ya-as, I beaus 'em home—tew meetin' an' singin'-schewl.'

'Perhaps the gentleman from the country will take a glass of wine!'

'Thankee. Don't keer if I do.'

The wine was brought.

'You must drink a toast.'

'Oh, git eout! I eats toast,—never heard o' such a thing as drinkin' it. But I kin give ye a sentiment.'

The ladies clapped their hands; but what was their surprise when the stranger, rising, spoke calmly and clearly, in tones ornate and dignified, as follows:

'Ladies and gentlemen, permit me to wish you health and happiness, with every other blessing earth can afford; and may you grow better and wiser with advancing rayes, bearing ever in mind that outward appearances are often deceitful. You mistook me, from my dress for a country booby, while I, from the same superficial cause, thought you were ladies and gentlemen. The mistake has been mutual.'

He had just spoken, when Caleb Strong, the Governor of the state, entered and inquired for Mr. Whitman.

'Ah, here I am, Governor! Glad to see you?' Then, turning to the dumb-founded company, 'I wish you a very good eveing.'

And he left them feeling about as small and cheap as it is possible for full-grown people to feel.

HINTS TO SUMMER BOARDERS.

A humorist gives a few suggestions to city folks who go to the country. Don't expect a view from your window that takes in a great hillside with browsing lambs, a lake with water fowl, groves and flowers, and a clear sunset every day during your stay. The things come high save in advertisements for summer boarders. Look out upon the patient farm boy bugging the potato vines and be content. Don't ask the farmer why he puts his little peaches near the bottom of the basket and the big ones on top, and similar foolish questions, and thus display your total ignorance of agricultural and horticultural pusuits, and win the farmer's honest contempt. Don't go near the mowing machine when it is in motion. You may safely sit on the fence surrounding the field when it is singing its merry song, but that will be near enough. You might go behind a mowing machine when it is in complete repose, but if it should start, you should start also, and you should not stop until you reach the fence.

Don't try to climb the barbed wire fence just to show the congregation how smart you are. It requires long practice to climb a barbed wire fence and not be sorry for it afterwards. In busy times your may take off your coat and go out with the hands for half a day, just to get an appetite. That will please the farmer, notwithstanding the increase of appetite; but don't get into the habit of that sort of thing. Don't offer to milk the cow. She may object. If you go walking in the woods and see a large hornet's nest hanging from a low limb, don't become infatuated with it. If a desire to pull it and take it home to show the other boarders springs up in your bosom, try to repress it. Hornets are a little particular, and do not like to have their nests shown around among curious city people while they are using it, and if you pull their nest while they are at home they will show their disapprobation of your course.

One very pleasant little feature of foreign hospitality which American women seem exceedingly slow in adopting is that of offering some slight refreshment to guests. This is more especially true of the eastern hostess, notwithstanding she has traveled more than almost any other woman in the world. In nearly every part of the universe, except here in New York and New England, a guest is seldom allowed to leave a house without being offered some little dainty by way of refreshment. In France and Italy there is always the wine and confection for the guest; in Germany, the native glass of beer or grape milk; in England, the cup that cheers; in Russia, a steaming potion of black coffee and the friendly cigaret, and in Scotland a bowl of gruel and a barley-cake, while in our own western states the guest is overwhelmed with a perhaps too lavish hospitality. Notwithstanding less than a "spread" will satisfy a western woman's notion of a friendly welcome, but here the often tired caller comes and goes without so much as a glass of water being offered her. This is a great mistake, and New York women would well to take a hint from their sisters abroad in this regard. A cup of bouillon or tea or coffee, or a glass of wine, while it refreshes the guests, also enhances a hundred fold the sociability of a call, and a hostess never appears to such advantage as when assisting at some graceful hospitality. —New York World.

Compensation.

One woman, in furs and velvets;
Another, in squalid rags;
One rolled by in her stately carriage;
The other stood on the flags.

One woman, alone in her carriage;
By the other a little child,
Who, watching the prancing horses,
Looked up in her face and smiled.

She stooped to her boy and kissed him,
And gave him a hoarded crust;
Tho other had just left costly blooms
Where her one son lay in dust.

One back to her darkened mansion,
Wealth cannot hold death at bay!
One, back to the hut where labor
Brought bread for the coming day.

Perhaps, as over the sands of life
Time's great tide ebbs and flows,
More fates among us are equal
Than their outward seeming shows.

All the Year Round.

ELECTRICITY STRIDES.

The developments of the last two years begin to make it probable that electricity will eventually displace the horse as a moter for street railways. Forty years ago Professor Henry constructed a miniature train, which he succeeded in running by electricity derived from batteries of zinc and carbon. The cost of securing the necessary power in this way was so great that scientific men regarded the invention as little more than an interesting toy, which could by no possibility be made of any practical use. But Henry having demonstrated that electricity could be successfully applied as a motive power, other inventors have since been persistently experimenting upon methods of producing electricity which would be both cheap and simple.

The electro-magnetic machine now generally known as the dynamo seems to have met the demand both as to the cheapness and abundance of the needed power. The dynamo already lights streets and buildings and in several well known instances has solved the problem of a cheap street car motor. Two years ago there were no electric railways in the United States; now there are eleven in successful operation and twelve more under contract, or in process of construction. There are also eleven completed and successful lines in operation in Europe, the majority of them being in Germany. At this rate it is not at all improbable that the new motor may in a very few years supersede not only horses, but possibly cables and all other motors, as the expense of running by electricity on several of the lines now in operation has been shown to be only about 50 per cent of that of horse power.

There are three forms of applying electricity to the work of propelling street cars now in use. The first is that of conveying the electricity from the dynamo along a third rail placed between the two tracks, reaching the motor by a connecting wheel between this track and the car. By the second plan the electricity conveyed by a wire strung above the tracks at a height of ten or twelve feet. A small metal carriage runs along the main wire. The third plan is that of carrying storage batteries in the car, making each car complete in itself and independent of all others. The second method it that which has so far been adopted in a majority of cases.

In addition to the decrease in the cost of running cars by the new motor it has at least two other important advantages over horse power. It adds nothing to the filthiness of the streets, and it does away with the immense stables which under the present system pollute the atmosphere of large neighborhoods in our cities. The further introduction of electric railways will undoubtedly be stubbornly contested, but if the system possesses the merits claimed by its friends it will gradually make its way. This is a practical age, and old expensive and offensive methods of propelling street cars must give way for cheaper and better methods if any are found, just as the stage coach and canal boat have given away to the locomotive and the palace car. —Philadelphia Times.

THE UMBRELLA JOKE.

The old practical joke of a half dozen young fellows raising dripping wet umbrellas in the main doorway of a public hall at the close of an entertainment before a crowded house on a starlight night was played with entire success a few evenings ago in Harlem. The news of the unexpected and most unwelcome storm was communicated to others by those of the audience that first saw the umbrellas, and in that way it became the exciting and exclusive subject of conversation throughout the building. Gentlemen carefully covered their silk tiles with their handkerchiefs, rolled up the ends of the legs of their trousers, and turned up their coat collars. Ladies prepared themselves in the conventional way for a provoking walk to the cars, and others sent their gallant escorts flying after umbrellas, coaches and waterproofs. In about ten minutes the real state of things, the pretty how-to-do, had been discovered, and then came unbounded hilarity and a resolve on the part of the weather-bound boys to try it on somewhere themselves.—N. Y. Times.

'What has become of your niece, Mrs. O'Raherty?'

'Och, sure, an' she's done well wid herself. She married a lord.'

'Why you don't tell me! An English lord?'

'No, I don't think he's an English lord. He's a landlord. He kapes a hotel out in Indiana.'—Stray

I hope, my dear, said a newly made Benedict, if I should happen to be out nights occasionally you will not be lonely.

Oh, no dear, she replied sweetly. If you should find it necessary to be out, I will send for ma to keep me company.—New York Sun.

Railroad men claim that upon north and south running roads, the west rails wear out the soonest. They say the east rail will out-wear five on the west side.

FRIDAY EVENING, JULY 29, 1887.

THE Canadians are at their old trick of seizing American fishing schooners.

THE annual session of the American Social Science Association will be held at Saratoga September 5–10, with discussions of various interesting social questions.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND has accepted his second invitation to visit St. Louis, the date of the trip to be determined hereafter. He will visit the Atlantic exposition the middle of October.

The state committee has voted to hold the Republican state convention at Boston September 28, with Congressman Rockwell as presiding officer and Gen. W. F. Draper of Hopedale as chairman of the committee on resolutions.

JOHN TAYLOR, the successor of Brigham Young in the presidency of the Mormon church, died on Monday evening. Times are different now than they were in Brigham's day, and for nearly a year Taylor had been in hiding, to escape arrest for polygamy.

SENATOR SHERMAN'S boom for the presidency was started in good shape by the Ohio republicans at their state convention yesterday, resolutions extolling his services and presenting him as their candidate for president being adopted with great enthusiasm. Gov. Foraker was re-nominated.

A BILL has passed the lower branch of the Georgia Legislature, and been reported favorably in the Senate, which makes it an offense punishable by service in the chain-gang for a teacher or trustee of a public or private school to allow colored pupils in a white school, or vice versa. This is progress with a vengeance, but not the kind looked for in this day and generation.

THE interstate commerce commission cruelly sits down upon the opinion of commercial travelers that they are a privileged class, and coldly says that no railroad can sell them mileage tickets at a lower rate than is charged the common run of humanity, without violating the law. If the commission keeps on after this fashion the time will come when a drummer cannot even occupy two seats in a passenger coach with his baggage while he beguiles himself with a quiet game of "old sledge" in the smoker.

PERSONS bent on suicide will find a ready means of swinging themselves out of existence at New York hotels, as under a law of the last Legislature, hotels must have a coil of rope in every sleeping room for the use of guests in case of fire. There is nothing in the law requiring the rope to be knotted, and it is an interesting question whether the average hotel guest would not reach terra firma quite as safely with a pair of wings, as in attempting to descend a smooth rope hand over hand.

CHICAGO'S ex-chief of police, W. J. McGarigle, sentenced to three years' imprisonment for bribery and conspiracy, escaped from the sheriff Sunday. The officer accompanied McGarigle to his home and obligingly let him take a bath, but after waiting in an adjoining room an hour he found that, instead of a bath his prisoner had taken French leave. When an officer runs such unjustifiable risks as this, it wouldn't be a bad idea if he should be obliged to complete the term of imprisonment himself, failing to return the prisoner.

IT would scarcely be expected that such a booming metropolis as Kansas City would do anything in a commonplace way. It is not surprising, therefore, that the invitation to the President and Mrs. Cleveland to visit that city is wonderfully and elegantly constructed, consisting of a large volume bound in sealskin, with an inscription on a white satin panel bordered with blue plush. Inside the covers are water color views of the city, followed by the invitation, signed by 21,000 citizens. The book is inclosed in an imitation seakskin case, embossed with gold and lined with gold plush. The President could not resist such a daisy invitation as this, of course, and will go there on his western tour.

A CURIOUS romance comes from Chestnut Hill, N. Y. Florence Hill, for some years a governess in a family there, and the author of several stories, met a former lover in New York last fall, according to her story, and their engagement followed, with the usual number of love letters. Arrangements were made for the wedding in England at the close of this month, and numerous friends were to attend from this country, at the expense of the bridegroom. Then came word of her lover's death,—and it now transpires that the whole story was a fiction, the creation of her disordered brain, and she is now in an asylum.

Last week's remarkable rainfall caused the heaviest freshet in some parts of Western Massachusetts and on the boarders of New York state that has been experienced since the big freshet of 1869. Great damage was wrought in Southern Berkshire by a cloud-burst Saturday morning, which swelled Green river into a rushing wall of water. The Fitchburg road was washed out at no less than 35 places between Millers Falls and Erving, a distance of six miles, the track was covered with several landslides, and the bridge over the river was carried off. It will cost at least $50,000 to repair the damage, and it will be some days before traffic can be resumed. At Orange the streets were so flooded that people travelled in boats on Monday.

The government is about to issue a new series of postage stamps of the denominations of one, two, twelve, thirty and ninety cents. The portraits which they will bear and the colors are as follors: One cent, blue, with Franklin's bust; two cents, black, Grant; twelve cents, brown, Clay; thirty cents, brown, Hamilton; and ninety cents, black, Commodore Perry. The four, five, ten and fifteen cent stamps will not be changed.

The only cities in the United States having public baths are Boston, with 17; New York, 15; Philadelphia, 5; Brooklyn, 3; Cleveland and Hartford, each 1; and Buffalo, the number not given.

The letter box for eastern mail matter at the railroad station, which was removed at the time of the fire, is in place again.

The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor will hold a social in the vestry of the Congregational church this evening.

Now that there are no licenses granted in town wouldn't it look better if the saloon signs were removed from certain buildings?

William Tucker, a brakeman on the New London Northern local freight, was killed at New London Tuesday night by falling between the cars.

A new freight engine is running on the New Lonnon Northern road, the "Stafford," a heavy mogul with straight smoke stack and extension boiler.

Remember that you can have the JOURNAL sent to you while away on a vacation, and the address changed as often as required without extra charge.

There were sixteen arrivals at the state primary school yesterday from Tewksbury. The schools in the institution closed today for a vacation of two weeks.

Owing to the washouts on the Fitchburg road, a large quantity of Fitchburg live stock was shipped east over the Boston & Albany road Monday and Tuesday.

George Hamilton, a freight brakeman employed on the New London Northern road had a foot badly pinched between the bufers of two cars Wednesday morning.

The county commissioners have been petitioned to release Patrick Key of Bondsville, who was committed for drunkeness and malicious mischief some time ago.

The engagement is announced of J. P. Lynde, of the firm of LeGro & Lynde, druggists, to Miss May F. Doe of Boston. The wedding will not take place until next winter.

Only three objectors to the location of electric light poles were heard Tuesday, at the meeting of the selectmen, and three poles were ordered moved to satisfy the complainants.

The consecration meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society will be held next Sunday evening, instead of the first Sunday in August, on account of the pastor being absent the latter date.

Officer Northrop on Monday shot a large dog belonging to A. M. Dutcher, on South Main street. The animal had not been licensed, and had been complained of for biting one or two persons.

Deputy Sheriff Healy went to Wales Monday and made a raid on the premises of Frank S. Gardner, securing a quantity of rum, gin and wine. The matter comes up for a hearing the third Monday in August.

The base ball game with the Thorndikes was given up last Saturday on account of the rain. To-morrow at 4 the Palmers play with the Rockets of Ludlow, on the home grounds, and ladies will be admitted free.

An employe at the West Brimfield brick yard, named Methate, was caught by the caving in of a 15-foot bank the other day, and it took his comrades 10 minutes to dig him out, badly bruised but not seriously hurt.

New show windows have been put in the front of W. R. Milligan's and F. D. Barton's stores, in the Converse House block, this week, there now being only four pieces of glass in a window, instead of nine, as formerly.

A wet, slippery track and the failure of the brakes to hold, caused a smashup of freight cars in the New London Northern yard last Friday. Two cars loaded with Estey organs were badly damaged, and several organs smashed.

Edward Colgrove, a 12-years-old boy was brought before the district court this morning for stealing a sum of money from the cash drawer of H. P. Longley yesterday. The boy has an older brother at Westboro for similar deeds done in town.

The inspector of the state board of health who looks after water supplies, etc., came to Palmer a few days ago and visited the reservoirs of the Palmer water company. He stated that he had been out since April 1st, and that these were the two finest sheets of water used for domestic purposes he had seen in that time.

The engine which draws the fast New York evening express over the Boston & Albany road has a new steam gong which sounds exactly like the whistle of a steamboat. It is claimed that this can be heard further than the sharp, shrill ones now in use, and if found satisfactory it is understood all passenger locomotives on the line will be fitted with them.

The young people of North Wilbraham connected with St. Thomas' Catholic church will give a picnic in Lane's grove at North Wilbraham to-morrow. There will be dancing and athletic sports, and refreshments will be served in the grove. For those who wish to attend from this village, the 2.10 p. m. accommodation train will prove a convenient means of reaching the grove.

The Block Island train on the New London Northern road made an exceedingly quick run from New London to Palmer last Friday evening. The usual running time is two hours and thirty minutes, but was cut down to one hour and fifty-six minutes on this occasion. The run from Willimantic to Palmer, 36 miles, was made in an hour and two minutes, including seven stops.

A petition was carried to the railroad commissioners yesterday, asking them to view the depot premises at Palmer, and locate the passageway according to the act passed by the last Legislature. They replied that they had about decided to take a vacation through August, but might possibly be out to look over the ground in a week or ten days, if not, then some time in September.

The ladies of St. Paul's church held a lawn party at the residence of Mrs. S. R. Lawrence Wednesday evening, and a most enjoyable time was had. The grounds were tastefully decorated with Chinese lanterns, and Mrs. Lawrence, who always likes to see the young folks enjoy themselves, had provided a large platform for dancing, and hired the Palmer orchestra to play.

C. W. Johnson starts to-morrow morning for New York city, where he has been engaged to take charge of a large livery and boarding stable, and expects to remain permanently. The stable runs from 25 to 40 horses of its own, and has 25 boarders now during the dull season. It is located at 1542 Broadway, between 45th and 46th streets, where Calvin will be pleased to have any of his friends call when they are in the city.

The Prohibitionists of Western Massachusetts will hold a campmeeting on the Northampton camp ground next Thursday and Friday. The speakers Thursday are Hon. St. John of Kansas, and Hon. John B. Finch of Illinois. Round-trip tickets are 70 cents from Springfield.

H. S. Randolph, warden of the town farm, died of erysipelas Tuesday. About two weeks ago he received a severe fall from a mowing machine, the effects of which he felt for some time. A week before his death he came to this village for a quantity of ice, which he handled freely, and the next day badly smashed a finger while repairing a wagon. On the following morning he felt a pain under his left arm, erysipelas set in and rapidly spread to his whole side. He leaves a wife and two married daughters.

The district court on Tuesday held a hearing in the three cases against J. J. Sugrue for illegal liquor selling, and continued them until the third of August. The liquors seized at the Weeks House were declared forfeited, and J. W. Weeks fined $50 and costs for keeping with intent to sell, but appealed. The case of Izora V. Foss, for lewdness, was continued until August 3d. The cases of the boys who were arrested for placing obstructions on the track of the Ware River road at Thorndike were continued until the first Saturday in August.

In another column will be found the advertisement of the Boston and Albany road for a grand excursion to Boston on Friday, August 12th, from Indian Orchard to Brookfield, inclusive, the train leaving Palmer at 7.05 a. m. The fare for the round trip is only $1.45, which includes a sail down the harbor to Nantasket Beach, admission to Melville Garden, Point of Pines, or the cyclorama of the Battle of Gettysburg. Returning a special train leaves Boston at 7.20, affording our people an excellent opportunity of spending a day at the Hub at a very reasonable figure.

A certain clerk in one of the stores in town has recently been carrying his left hand done up in a bandage for a time, giving out to all inquirers that he had burned it, but the way in which it was done only leaked out a few days ago. He was delivering goods one morning at a house where one of the young ladies was doing some ironing. As he came up to the table he caressingly slid one arm around her waist, but no sooner had he done so than the young lady lovingly pressed a hot flat iron to his hand, and it left its mark in good shape. That's the how of it.

CARELESS PISTOL PRACTICE.

A narrow escape from a fatal accident occurred in this village last Friday afternoon. While H. D. Converse was practicing target shooting with a 22 caliber revolver in the yard of his residence on Main street, a ball either did not hit the target or glanced and passed through the wire screen and glass of a window in the house of S. L. Ferry, in the rear of the Cross block. Mrs. Ferry was engaged in household duties near the window, and the bullet hit her, passing through her dress, but struck a steel shank in her corset, which stayed the progress of the ball and prevented what might have otherwise proved a serious matter.

DENNY HELD IN $1000 BONDS.

The case of Patrick Denny of Monson, for stabbing James Murphy, came before the district court for a hearing last Saturday. Maurice Welch and Walter Kendrick testified that they were the first to reach the men, and found Denny with his left hand at Murphy's throat, and his right hand at Murphy's side, who cried out that he was stabbed and called for a doctor. Dr. Rand was summoned and Denny was allowed to go, though he was soon after arrested at his home by Officer Thompson, who found him washing blood from his face and hands. He claimed that it came there from nose-bleed, Murphy having assaulted him and struck him twice in the face, and that the stabbing was done in self-defense. Dr. Rand described the wound, and stated that while serious it would not be fatal unless some complication arose. The bail was reduced from $5000 to $1000, which Denny was unable to procure, and is in Springfield jail awaiting the action of the grand jury in September.

THE HEAVY RAINS.

It is "beyond the memory of the oldest inhabitant" when so much rain has fallen as came down between Thursday of last week and Monday of this week. There were hard showers Thursday and Friday, but Saturday there appeared to be no let-up whatever, and the water fell in torrents until a late hour at night. Ponds and springs were soon filled, and many of the brooks proved too small for the body of water which ran into them and overflowed their banks in many places, while the Quaboag river rose to the height of ordinary spring freshets. Roads were badly washed in numerous places in the town, nceessitating considerable repairs. Along the line of the New London Northern road there were several slight washouts near Leverett and Montague, and the boat train Monday, due at Millers Falls at 10 o'clock, was four hours late. The temporary bridge which still takes the place of the one burned last spring, was so weakened that Brattleboro passengers were carried around. The noon train from Amherst was also omitted that day, so that no train went south for 12 hours from Amherst.

BOY BURGLARS.

A week ago last Monday two boys—Geo. Stacey, 15, and John Brogan, 13—ran away from the state primary school, and no trace of them could be found until Tuesday of this week, when a telegram was received from New Haven officers, stating that the boys were held there. An officer saw two boys go into a deserted building, and following them found they were changing their old clothes for new ones evidently stolen. He took them to the station house, where they told a boastful story of having been robbers, etc., for a year or more, but finally owned up the whole story: From Palmer they had gone to Stafford, breaking into Eaton's grocery store and getting $4 in cash, also entering Buck's hardware store, where they took two revolvers, a watch and a number of knives. The latter they sold at Willimantic for 60 cents, but threw the revolvers away at Guilford, having no ammunition for them. The watch was also left in a ditch, for fear its possession would be a give away. They walked to New London, and then followed the line of the Shore railroad to Leetes Island, where the depot money drawer was relieved of 59 cents last Sunday morning. At East Haven they secured 70 cents from the money drawer in the Consolidated road's depot. About 3 o'clock Tuesday morning they broke into a New Haven fruit store, ate all the bananas they wanted, and secured 62 cents. A clothing store was then entered by crawling over a transom, and two suits of clothes taken, and they were preparing to strike for more productive fields when the officers found them. Stacey is the son of Predore Stacey, a Cambridge engineer, and was sent to the Monson school when 11 years old for stealing $7.50, besides being concerned in several other burglaries. Bogan has a mother living in Boston. The pair will probably be sent to Westboro.

The Shawville boarding house, under the management of Miss Carrie Eager, assisted by Miss Annie Tobie, is filled to its utmost capacity.

The grove meeting to have been held last Sunday afternoon at Town's grove was postponed on account of the rain to next Sunday at 4.30 p. m.

A lawn party will be held on Elijah Shaw's lawn for the benefit of Rev. H. P. Smith, a former pastor, who is spending a few weeks here. A general invitation is extended to all his friends.

HAMPDEN.

The Young Peoples' Reading Club will hold a fair next Tuesday evening, for the benefit of the Sunday school library of the Congregational church.

The farm occupied by the late Lucetta D. Howlett, and which she willed to her niece, Mrs. Chamberlin, has been sold to Anson Lull, formerly of Stafford, Ct.

A. O. Thresher has returned from Prince Edward's Island, where he has been staying a few weeks for his health, which has been decidedly benefitted by the sea breeze.

The wife of the poet, Aella Green, is spending a few weeks at the home of her father, Mr. Butts, and Mrs. Twichell of Kingston, Canada, is as usual spending the summer with her mother, Mrs. Gideon Day.

Farmers who had not secured their grass on the Scantico meadows previous to Saturday's rain will need a large stock of patience, grindstones and whetstones, as the water covered it, carrying on a good deal of sand and gravel.

THORNDIKE.

Wilbur McElwin spent Sunday with friends here.

Mrs. M. E. Murdock is visiting friends in Springfield.

Miss Marion Houston is spending a few weeks on the coast of Maine.

Miss Carrie Hawks of Hartford Ct., is visiting with Mrs. James Staples.

Ben Stewart of Saco, Me., has been visiting his sister, Mrs. Johnson, this week.

Miss Eva and Master Arthur Johnson left here Thursday for a visit with friends at Saco, Me.

Owing to the rain the Thorndikes had to postpone their game with the Palmers last Saturday.

Mrs. A. S. Parker and daughter Maude left here last Saturday for a visit with friends in Maine.

If the sidewalk between the railroad crossing and the iron bridge was raised it would be a decided improvement, especially in rainy weather.

BELCHERTOWN.

Mrs. Frank Fellows and family are away for a vacation of a few weeks.

The new library building will be opened to the public the middle of August.

Postmaster Bridgman and wife, with B. Butler and family, have returned from their trip to Nantucket and report a fine time and cool breezes, quite unlike the weather here.

The little son of Arthur Bridgman has been seriously ill with cholera infantum for the past week, but is now somewhat improving, and hopes are entertained of his recovery.

The free concert at the Clapp Memorial Library last Wednesday evening was largely attended and was a complete success. The Northampton quartette club did themselves much credit, more especially in the piece entitled "Country Fair; a waltz song." The club consists of Mr. Chilson, Mr. Prince, Miss Langley, Miss Clark. The piano solo by Miss Ella Walker was very fine, a selection from Wieniawski, Joseph. Miss Minton's solo, by Buck, "When the Heart is Young," was loudly applauded. A fine duett was given by Mrs. D. P. Clapp and daughter from Lacome, called "Estudiantina," the voices being in perfect harmony, and the song being rendered with much taste. Miss Clapp also sang a solo from Bizet called "Carmen," which was considered very fine. A medley, arranged by Edwin B. Walker for banjos and guitars, was very fine.

WEST WARREN.

Geo. B. F. Kingsley is rapidly recovering from his severe illness, and will soon be out again.

A neat little affair occurred Sunday night that gave the villagers much satisfaction. Whenever any out-of-town sports wanted to go on a "time" they have always seemed to select this village as a place where they could carry on undisturbed. Sunday night four young fellows drove through Main street howling like demons and whipping their horse fearfully. Officers Collins and Thompson started up the Ware road after them, and when nearly up to them Collins called on them to stop, and received a consigning to a little hotter place than this. The officers then jumped into a carriage that came along, and soon had the satisfaction of seeing the offenders behind the bars. One of them who had behaved himself was released, and the three who were locked up—A. Duquette, Elgzer Guertin and Dan Guertin—were fined over $11 each, which their friends were obliged to pay.

Dr. V. St. Germain was arrested Saturday night on a charge preferred by Rev. Father Giles of illegal liquor selling, and the trial Monday afternoon brought forth these facts: The local druggist is strictly observing the liquor laws and will fill no prescriptions for brandy or whisky. The doctor had a very sick patient, and prescribed some brandy, and to accommodate the family he sent the prescription to Ware and got the four ounces of brandy, and when it returned carried it to his patient. Father Giles soon after visited the house, and, as he claims, found one of the family intoxicated, and hearing that the doctor had left brandy there, caused a warrant to be issued for his arrest. The examination of the chief witness for the prosecution revealed that the doctor had brought some medicine there, and she didn't know whether it was brandy or whisky or what it was, and she couldn't tell what day it was. So Justice Tyler concluded there was no evidence and dismissed the case. It was rather hard on the doctor, who has always lived up to the law, and only transgressed for the sake of accommodating a dying patient.

MONSON.

Miss Mary Topliffe is visiting at her brother's in Gilbertville.

C. M. Webber has sold his dark bay stallion to Eugene B. Farrell.

J. G. Slater and wife are visiting and recuperating at Squier Pond.

James Murphy, the victim of the stabbing affray, still continues to improve.

A. T. Robinson honors Bar Harbor by his presence about these days.

The selectmen meet on Monday next for auditing accounts and paying bills.

Wilson M. Tucker is supplying our people with new sweet corn, which has a ready sale.

George H. Newton has sold his cottage home on Main street to August Buscher for $3200.

Money can be saved by conferring with Tax Collector Potter on Saturday or Monday next.

William Needham has been laid up for several days, but under kind care he is slowly improving.

Mrs. Mary Deane of Boston, with three children and two nurses, is summering at the Cushman House.

P. B. Moore, wife and daughter, started on their homeward trip, via the Santa Fe route, Thursday evening.

G. H. Newton offers in another column a 12 per cent investment to those only getting four. A bargain for some one.

Cashier Morris, wife and daughters joined the Raymond excursion party for the White Mountains last Tuesday.

Harvey and Stewart have nearly completed their contract for the new engine house, which is located on Central avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Deane have returned, and young loving couples and cooing doves might envy the seeming affection manifested.

Dentist Soule returned from his New Hampshire trip last Monday, and is now prepared to extract the root of evil from molars.

Sylvanus Darling is having bay windows put in the house he recently purchased of D. W. Letters, greatly improving the appearance.

Henry E. King of Troy, N. Y., was called home on important business last Wednesday, thus abbreviating a pleasant vacation hereabouts.

Mystic, Ct., is graced with Monson lassies as follows: Annie Leary, Kate Crowley, Mollie Hanley, Minnie Riley, Catherine Crowley, Lizzie Riley.

S. F. Cushman is beginning to occupy the premises he recently purchased of Mrs. Lyon, making alterations and improvements in the barn and stables.

Eugene B. Farrell is seriously contemplating a trip to California for health and recreation, and if beneficial will probably stay through the winter.

Rogers & Co. and Gage Bros. have recently experimented with Mr. Swett, the carriage painter, and the result is nicely painted delivery wagons.

Thanks to the highway surveyors and the good condition in which the roads have been kept, but little damage was done by the recent severe rain storm.

Jenks's clothing store gives Ted O'Keefe his vacation about these days, and he is rusticating in the wilds of New York City, Philadelphia, Atlantic City, etc.

D. M. Dustan of Weston Seminary for the past five years, has been secured as principal of Monson Academy at a salary of $1500. The fall term begins August 31.

Alterations and improvements are being contemplated in the vestry of the M. E. church, and among the donations for the purpose Mrs. Lyons's name appears for $25.

It was accident day last Sabbath with the livery stables, many of the teams coming in with damaged vehicles. Perhaps some of the gear was dam-aged before starting out.

B. A. Day contemplates making four first-class tenements in the Barton block, which if conveniently arranged and attractively surrounded will no doubt be readily rented.

Uncle John Ferry, the veteran vegeterarian, verily ventures varieties of vegetation, valua'ble verdure vended, victory, vantage, visible in his assortment of vegetables.

S. F. Cushman, executor, will sell at auction on Saturday, Aug. 6th, at 10 a. m., the homestead of the late Timothy F. Packard, a very desirable, spacious home and surroundings.

George W. Burdick received an order from Dakota last week for an invoice of his justly celebrated stone hammers. All the stone men form an acquaintance with Burdick by using his manufactures.

Rev. Mr. Maxham supplies the pulpit of the Universalist church to-morrow. There will be no preaching during August. On the first Sabbath of September Rev. Mr. Priest will begin his pastorate.

Mrs. Joel Hitchcock, 92 years of age, went out into the lot and picked nine quarts of whortleberries last Wednesday morning, and did not appear any more tired than a girl of eighteen would from excessive hot weather.

Regular meeting of Marcus Keep Post, G. A. R., next Monday evening, when the post will take action on the new pension bill which is to be presented to the next Congress. It is to be hoped that every comrade will be present.

Daniel O'Leary, a genial, kindly-hearted friend and neighbor, died about 11 o'clock last Monday night of inflammation of the bowels. His funeral was attended from the church on Wednesday, and the remains placed in the Pearl street cemetery.

C. H. Merrick was taken suddenly ill Tuesday afternoon at the shop of Fay, Peck & Co., and it was feared he would not survive the shock. He was removed by kind attendants to his home, but lies in a precarious situation, the trouble being heart disease.

Dexter S. Woodworth, formerly of Monson and later of Atlanta, Ga., is visiting his sister, Mrs. D. G. Green, and looking over the old landmarks where in his younger days the Puritanical lessons were learned, and the pleasant associations of the past are now brought afresh to his mind.

Samuel Stevens—everybody knows and likes Sam—has been rusticating in Maine, and has had an eye on the main chance, as the papers announce his marriage to Mabel Burnham, and the congratulations received by them on their return show the esteem in which they are held by friends and acquaintances.

Messrs. R. M. and T. Reynolds have adopted a motto, "Excelsior," and are determined to manufacture goods second to none. For this purpose they have recently introduced into their mill the latest and best of machinery, secured the ablest finishers and dyers, and as a reward their goods are being sought for and in demand almost unprecedented at this season of the year.

It is very annoying to ladies and children who are quietly and leisurely walking on the sidewalk to be suddenly confronted with a bicycle and rider, and a very narrow escape last Wednesday evening was noticed. If riders must "go it" in the evening to the annoyance of people, why not take the middle of the street. A header has been promised by an aggrieved party, and sympathy is in favor of the ladies and the little ones.

David Gilmore, formerly of Monson, died at Elizabethtown, N. J., July 9th, aged 78. He was a graduate of Monson academy, class of '36, and entered Amherst college, but on account of ill health did not pursue his course, but learned the spectacle trade of the late D. D. Moody, and for more than forty years had a store and manufactory in Maiden Lane, New York city. He was one of a family of nine children, of whom only one—Mrs. W. W. Colton—is living. He was a brother of Mrs. Hiram Norton and Mrs. Sophronia Carter.

WARE AND VICINITY.

One case of scarlet fever has been reported in town this week.

John P. Morin has made arrangements to sail for Paris, France, on the 6th of August.

The store which will soon be vacated by D. Giard, in Gray's Block on Nenemeseck square, has been rented and will be used as a boot and shoe store the same as it has been.

The interest in the Episcopal service has so much increased during the past few months that those having the matter in charge were obliged, in order to provide sittings, to secure larger quarters than the rooms at present used afforded, and have been fortunate in arranging to use the Unitarian church. The sittings will all be free, and regular services will be held. During the month of August Rev. C. W.

Duffield will officiate, and there will be a morning service at 10.30, and an evening service at 7.30, with Sunday school at 12 M.

Charles A. Fearigo, who has been working for M. L. Lane, died very suddenly last Saturday evening at Brockton, aged 24. He had gone there to spend a few days with his former employer, H. E. Guy. The Canadien Circle and the Young Men's Lyceum held special meetings and appointed members to attend the funeral. Joseph Dubois, Adelard DuBois and Henry A. Mongrain of the Circle, and Thomas Healy, T. J. McBride and Henry M. Clark of the Lyceum. He was one who made all he knew his friends, and there are many who will miss him. He was soon to be married to a Ware lady. He was buried on Monday at West Boylston, where his father and mother are laid. A brother and sister survive him. He was also a member of Nenameseck Council, A. L. of H.

CARD.—We feel to express our gratitude to our many friends and neighbors who so kindly remembered us in so many ways during these weeks of sickness. These tokens of love and sympathy have brought much comfort to us, and our wish and prayer is, that you may all be rewarded by our beneficent heavenly Father.

MR. and MRS. C. W. BENNET.

JOTTINGS FROM THE HUB.

From our Special Correspondent.

BOSTON, July 20th, 1887.

It is announced that the illness of Alpheus Hardy has taken such a serious turn from the blood poisoning that his death is daily expected. Here he is the retired merchant, of a broad public spirit, an unostentatious private charity and heart full of helpfulness and good cheer for all. To the religious world, the orthodox Congregationalists in particular, he is the efficient and faithful Christian. He is a member of the American Board and was for years, up to 1884, a prominent member of the prudential committee. He was also, up to 1885, a trustee of the Andover seminary. To Western Massachusetts he should be well known, for he was a trustee of Amherst College from 1855 down, and has rendered that institution signal service, as history will show.

The death of George H. Patch, military editor of the Boston Globe, was a great shock to all of his friends who had not for a few days heard of his suffering from the fatal pneumonia. He, too, was known all over the state. He was welcome in the Grand Army posts, and was at one time the commander of the Grand Army for the department of Massachusetts. He was always popular and had such a breezy and wholesome air about him that he carried things by storm. He was a ready public speaker and was thoroughly devoted to the interests of the Grand Army. No other man on the Boston press is anything like him, and his place is one of those that will be hard to fill. He had a child born to him last spring, and leaves other children and a widow, whose bereavement is sudden and severe.

Another loss to Boston within the week has been in the death of Jennie Collins. It is a loss which will probably prove irreparable. Her work was the building of a home for poor working girls in the great establishments of the city. Her "Boffin's Bower" has become famous, and no one has yet appeared or been suggested who has ability and enthusiasm to carry it on. It should be preserved as her monument. I had some acquaintance with her, and it was always to be noticed what an intensity there was in her every word and motion. She was no creature doing things by halves, but put her soul into her work and compelled assistance from the wealthy by her sheer enthusiasm.

The meeting of the Republican state committee will be held to-morrow, and the time and place of the state convention will be selected. Dr. Burden, chairman of the state committee, said to-day that he has never said that the convention would probably be held in Worcester. So far as I have seen the politicians, they prefer Boston in the main, and the sole reason is because they cannot be well provided for in Worcester. It all comes back on the Bay State hotel, which has repeatedly failed to rise to the emergency of handling a large crowd. Let that hotel treat its guests fairly at convention time, and people will be ready enough to go to Worcester, especially since the objection is made to Boston that it is too big a place to hold a convention in, as the delegates get scattered so that it is more difficult to unite them and hold them to any line of action. There is no particular interest yet in the political situation. It is assumed that there will be no great contest in either the Republican or Democratic convention, and the chief liveliness will probably be over the attempt to introduce a prohibitory plank into the Republican platform.

It is queer what a readiness there is on the part of candidates for the office of secretary of the state board of agriculture, yet what a certainty there is on the part of those who have the election to make (which will come August 23), that the right man has not yet been found. It would be in order for a committee of the board, like Diogenes with his lantern, to go around looking for a man. In the first place, he must be a thorough farmer in all its branches. No specialists are wanted, who are very, very good in one thing, but don't know anything else. A good all-around man is essential, who will take in things "small and large." Then he must be an educated man, who can meet the educated men in other departments of the government, and keep up the farmers' end even with the best of them, and not expose them to ridicule as "grangers with hay-seed in their hair," or anything of that sort. Then, too, he must be an orator, a man who can stand up before a crowd at a cattle-show or other public gathering, and speak with the governor and be every inch a man in the eyes of the people. These are a few of the traits wanted. Those without them need not apply.

It rather looks as if our Irish fellow-citizens have overdone the business in protesting so loudly against the use of Faneuil Hall by the British societies for the celebration of the Queen's jubilee. There are some 27,000 Britishers in the state who have not been naturalized, but can do so and become voters. About 300 of them held a meeting Monday evening to see what they had better do to protect their own interests in view of the growing power of the Irish. This introduces a new element in our politics, and will mix local matters worse than ever. It is a miserable affair to drag in a race issue, but the Irish have acted as if it was "Ireland and America for the Irish," and it is only natural that the reaction should come.

Experiments in moving street cars by electricity are to be made soon in Cambridge and in Boston by the Cambridge company. With the consolidation attempted by the West End company and the revolution threatened by the Meigs system, a lively year may be expected ahead of us.

This afternoon the intense heat has been banished by a delightfully cool breeze from the sea, and we are all unperspiring and comfortable. LANDON.

Try Pond's Extract, the remedy by unanimous verdict for Inflammation and Pain. Do not be deluded by spurious preparations.

SOLID FACTS.

Nestling between the Owl's Head and the Tortilita Mountains, Pinal County, Arizona, are the twelve mines of the Tortilita Gold and Silver Mining Co., which expose a sufficient wealth of ore to run a 20-stamp mill for years to come. During the past three years a 5-stamp mill has produced nine tons of ore daily, while a 20-stamp mill will turn out forty tons daily. Such a showing has caused capital to seek possession of shares of its capital stock. For shares of stock (which are non-assessable), information, etc., address the Tortilita Gold and Silver Mining Company, 57 Broadway, New York. The shares are two dollars each, and the company gives the same attention to an order for one share that it does to an order for five hundred shares. If desired, certificates will be sent by express, the money to be paid when they reach the investor.

ELY'S CREAM BALM was recommended to me by my druggist as a preventative to hay fever. Have been using it as directed since the 9th of August and have found it a specific for that much dreaded and loathsome disease. For ten years or more I have been a great sufferer each year, from August 9th till frost, and have tried many alleged remedies for its cure, but Ely's Cream Balm is the only preventative I have ever found. Hay fever sufferers ought to know of its efficacy.—F. B. Ainsworth, Publisher, Indianapolis, Ind.

Skin-Success is a speedy and positive cure for every species of skin and scalp disease.

Eminent physicians certify to the purity and efficacy of Skin-Success Soap.

A healthy skin may be obtained through Skin Success, and the torment of itching banished.

For toilet and bathing purposes the great cleansing and curative Skin-Success Soap stands unequaled.

Skin-Success positively cures skin disease of every description in a comparatively brief time.

For all cutaneous affections of children and adults, Skin-Success Soap is an unfailing remedy.

BEWARE OF SWINDLERS.

We have exposed, during the past year, many swindlers who advertise, under the name of medicine, vile compounds which only increase human suffering. To all who need a pure medicine and blood purifier, we can honestly recommend Sulphur Bitters.—Editor Sun. 2w17

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhoea, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the perscription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists hroughout the world. Price 25c. a bottle. 1y21

A Certainty.

Steele's Little Bile Pills are without an equal for stimulating the liver to healthy action, and creating a proper secretion of bile, thus removing from the system the germs of malaria, curing constipation, indigestion, and inducing a healthy circulation of the blood, without which no one can enjoy sound health. They are small, but effective; free from nauseating propensities and griping pains, and do not interfere in their action with the ordinary routine of daily life. Heavily sugar coated. To be had of LeGro & Lynde, for 25 cents per bottle. 1y8eow

Don't Experiment.

You cannot afford to waste time in experimenting when your lungs are in danger. Consumption always seems at first, only a cold. Do not permit any dealer to impose upon you with some cheap imitation of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, but be sure you get the genuine. Because he can make more profit he may tell you he has something just as good, or just the same. Don't be deceived, but insist upon getting Dr. King's New Discovery, which is guaranteed to give relief in all Throat, Lung and Chest affections. Trial bottles free at LeGro & Lynde, Palmer, and C. E. Blood, Ware. 6

Saved His Life.

Mr. D. I. Wilcoxson, of Horse Cave, Ky., says he was for many years badly afflicted with Phthisic, also Diabetes; the pains were almost unendurable and would sometimes almost throw him into convulsions. He tried Electric Bitters and got relief from first bottle and after taking six bottles was entirely cured, and had gained in flesh eighteen pounds. Says he positively believes he would have died had it not been for the relief afforded by Electric Bitters. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer, and C. E. Blood, Ware. 6

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The Best Salve in the world for Cuts, Bruises, Sores, Ulcers, Salt, Rheum, Fever Sores, Tetter, Chapped Hands, Chilblains, Corns, and all Skin Eruptions, and positively cures Piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Legro & Lynde, Palmer, and C. E. Blood, Ware. 1y29

ENJOY LIFE.

What a truly beautiful world we live in! Nature gives us grandeur of mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands of means of enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health; but how often do the majority of people feel like giving up disheartened, discouraged and worn out with disease, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily find satisfactory proof, that Green's August Flower will make them as free from disease as when born. Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint are the direct causes of seventy-five per cent of such maladies as billiousness, Indigestion, sick headache, costiveness, nervous prostration, dizziness of the head, palpitation of the heart, and other distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottles, 10c. Try it. 1y46eow

A Good Appetite

Is essential to good health; and at this season it is often lost, owing to the poverty or impurity of the blood, and the weakening effect of the changing season. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine for creating an appetite, toning the digestion, and giving strength to the whole system.

"When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was dizzy in the morning, had a headache, and no appetite; but now I can hardly get enough cooked to eat." EMMA SHEPARD, 1 Coral street, Worcester Mass.

"I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla for dyspepsia, which I have had for the last nine or ten years, suffering terribly. It has now entirely cured me." Mrs. A. NORTON, Chicopee, Mass.

"I must say Hood's Sarsaparilla is the best medicine I ever used. Last spring I had no appetite, and the least work I did fatigued me ever so much. I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, and soon felt as if I could do as much in a day as I had formerly done in a week. My appetite is voracious." MRS. M. V. BAYARD, Atlantic City, N. J.

SULPHUR BITTERS

THE BEST AND PUREST MEDICINE EVER MADE.

It will drive the Humor from your system, and make your skin clean and smooth. Those Pimples and Blotches which mar your beauty are caused by impure blood, and can be removed in a short time, if you are wise and use the great blood purifier, SULPHUR BITTERS.

What makes you tremble so? Your nerves are all unstrung, and need a gentle, soothing
DON'T tonic to assist nature to repair the damage which your excesses have caused.
GIVE Sulphur Bitters is NOT a cheap rum or poor whisky drink, to be taken by the
UP! glass, like other preparations, which stimulate only to destroy. Why suffer with Boils? Why rave with that terrible headache? Why lay and toss on that bed of pain with rheumatism?

If you have failed to receive any benefit from other medicines or doctors, do not despair. Use Sulphur Bitters. They will cure you when all others fail. No person can remain long sick who uses SULPHUR BITTERS.

The dose is small—only a teaspoonful. It is the best and cheapest medicine. Try it, and you will be satisfied. Get it of your druggist. Don't wait, get it at once. If you are suffering from Kidney Disease, and wish to live to old age, use Sulphur Bitters. They never fail to cure. SULPHUR BITTERS.

Send three 2-cent stamps to A. P. Ordway & Co., Boston, Mass., for best medical work published, finely illustrated with colored plates from life.

THE PEOPLE'S FAVORITE LIVER PILLS.

They act slowly but surely, do not gripe, and their effect is lasting, and therefore worth a dozen others. (Doctor's formula.) Small, Sugar-coated, and easy to take. See testimonials. 25c at druggists, or mailed on receipt of price.

Dainty but Dangerous.

Her enchanting little boot,
From beneath her jaunty suit
Ventured out.
That she knew its witching charm,
Without meaning any harm,
Who could doubt?

Just a single little glance
Filled my life with wild romance,—
I was caught.
Sparkling eyes and soft brown hair,
Hers was just the beauty rare
I had sought.

So I wooed the charming maid,
First enchanted, as I said,
By her boot.
Now, alas! I'm well aware
Boots and tempers seldom are Built to suit.

For our friendship ripened fast,
And, before a year was past,
We were wed.
Now both boots and other things
Recklessly she often slings
At my head!

OUR SUNDAY LAW.

Below is the entire Sunday code of the state as it stands since Gov. Ames signed the much debated Sunday bill of the present Legislature. Briefly, the purpose of the revision has been to bring the law into harmony with existing public sentiment.

Section 1. Whoever is present at a game, sport, play or public division, except a concert of sacred music, upon the evening of the Lord's day, unless such game, sport, play or public division is licensed by the persons or board authorized by law to grant licenses in such cases, shall be punished by fine not exceeding $5 for each offense.

Sec. 2. Whoever on the Lord's day keeps open his shop, warehouse or workhouse, or does any manner of labor, business or work, except works of necessity and charity, or takes part in any sport, game or play, except as allowed or prohibited in the preceding section, is present at any dance or public division, show, game or entertainment, shall be punished by fine not exceeding $30 for each offense; but nothing in this section shall be held to prohibit the manufacture and distribution of steam, gas or electricity for illuminating purposes, heat or motive power, nor the distribution of water for fire or domestic purposes, nor the use of the telegraph or telephone, nor the retail sale of drugs and medicines, nor articles ordered by the prescription of a physician, nor mechanical appliances used by physicians or surgeons, nor the letting of horses and carriages, nor the letting of yachts and boats, nor the running of steam ferry-boats on established routes, of street railway cars, nor the preparation, printing and publishing of newspapers, nor the retail sale and delivery of newspapers, nor the retail sale and delivery of milk nor the making of butter and cheese, nor the keeping of public boat-houses, nor the making and selling by bakers or their employes of bread or other food usually dealt in by them before 10 of the clock and half-past 9 of the clock in the evening.

Sec. 3. Whoever, keeping a house, shop, cellar, or place of public entertainment or refreshment, entertains therein on the Lord's day any other person than travelers, strangers or lodgers, or suffers such persons on said day to abide or remain therein, or in the yards, orchards, or fields appertaining to the same, drinking or spending their time idly, or at play, or in doing any secular business, shall be punished by fine not exceeding $5 for each person so entertained or suffered so to abide or remain; and upon any conviction after the first, by fine not exceeding $100; and if convicted three times, he shall thereafter be incapable of holding a license.

Sec. 4. No person licensed to keep a place of public entertainment shall entertain or suffer to remain or be in his house, yard or other places appurtenent, any persons other than travelers, strangers, or lodgers in such house, drinking and spending their time there, on the Lord's days, or the evening preceding the same; and every such innholder or other person so offending shall be punished by fine not exceeding $5 for each offense.

Sec. 5. No person shall serve or execute any civil process on the Lord's day; but such service shall be void and the person serving or executing such process shall be liable in damages to the party aggrieved in like manner as if he had no such process.

Sec. 6. Whoever on the Lord's day behaves rudely or indecently within the walls of any house of public worship shall be punished by fine not exceeding $10.

Sec. 7. Prosecutions for penalties incurred under the preceding provisions of this chapter shall be instituted within six months after the offense is committed.

Sec. 8. All sheriffs, grand jurors and constables shall inquire into and inform of all offenses against the preceding provisions of this chapter, and cause the same to be carried into effect.

Sec. 9. Whoever on the Lord's day discharges any firearm for sport or in the pursuit of game shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $10.

Sec. 10. Whoever attempts to take or catch any fish on the Lord's day, by using any hook, line, net, spear, or other implement, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $10.

Sec. 11. All prosecution under the two preceding sections shall be instituted within 30 days from the time the offense was committed.

Sec. 12. Whoever conscientiously believes that the seventh day of the week ought to be observed as the Sabbath and actually refrains from secular business and labor on that day, shall not be liable to the penalties of this chapter for performing secular business or labor on the Lord's day, if he disturbs no other person.

Sec. 13. Any innholder, common victualler, or persons keeping or suffering to be kept in any place occupied by him implements such as are used in gaming, in order that the same may for hire, gain or reward be used for purposes of amusement, who on the Lord's day uses or suffers to be used any implements of that kind upon any part of his premises, shall for the first offense forfeit a sum not exceeding $100, or be imprisoned in the house of correction for a term not exceeding three months; and for every subsequent offense shall be imprisoned in the house of correction for a term not exceeding one year; and in either case shall further recognize, with sufficient sureties, in a reasonable sum for his good behavior, and especially that he will not be guilty of any offense against the provisions of this section for the space of three months next ensuing.

Sec. 14. The board of railroad commissioners may authorize the running of such steamboat lines, and upon any railroad, of such trains on the Lord's day as, in the opinion of the board, the public necessity and convenience may require, having regard to the due observance of the day.

Sec. 15. The Lord's day shall be deemed to include the time from midnight to midnight.

WORKING IN MID-HEAVEN.

People who have been watching the erection of the false work at the east shore anchorage pier at the Poughkeepsie bridge and out in the river between piers 2 and 3 have been interested in the agilty and what seemed to them dare-devil recklessness of the trained men on the job. They have seen them crawling along the girders and braces nearly a hundred feet high, leaping from timber to timber, or running along the narrow planking, now stooping over to aid in the hoisting of timber or iron, now standing on the extreme edge of the river front of the work peering down on the rocks and river below, or going along hand over hand among the braces with apparently as much ease and comfort as though moving along on terra firma.

"They are all used to that kind of work," said Gen. Field of the Union Bridge company, "and have no fear whatever. When we were building the cantilever over the whirlpool rapids at Niagara, 240 feet above the rushing waters, they were just as daring as they are here. The cantilever arms were then within fifty feet of each other, and it was decided to connect them temporarily with each other by a plank. This plank was about fifty-five feet in length, about 2½ feet of each end resting on the cantilever arms. The foreman had issued a strict order prohibiting any one of the men from crossing the plank until it was firmly fastened at the ends, the penalty being immediate dismissal. There had been a great deal of talk among the men as to who would be the first one to cross. I was standing on the American side looking at the structure, when I saw one of the men walk out on the plank, and when he reached the middle of it, he stooped over, seizing the edges of the plank with both hands, and throwing his feet above his head kicked his heels and shouted to the terrified lookers on. He must have been a minute doing this, but I felt as though it was half an hour. After satisfying himself that he had kicked enough he regained his equilibrium and trotted along the plank to the opposite side from where he started, seized hold of one of the braces of the cantilever and went down it head first, hand over hand to the bottom. I never saw anything like it before. Of course the foreman discharged him and he was laid off three or four days, when I sent for him. He was one of the best men on the job, and I talked to him like a Dutch uncle and put him to work again. These men have no fear; they are brought up to the business and feel just as safe one hundred and fifty feet in the air as they do on the ground. Of course I can see how people wonder at such things, but we have got used to it. The best time to see them travel is at the dinner hour, or when the day's work is completed.—Poughkeepsie Eagle.

GAMBLING IN MEXICO.

A short distance from the church booths are erected, from which proceeds the music of harps and guitars. In them the visitors to Gaudalupe may gratify any fondness they may have for the great national vice—gambling. The strange, harsh cries of those who have charge of the games, as they call out the details of stakes to be offered and the result of each deal and play, are positively repulsive. The group of players in each booth comprises men, women, and even children, of every class, in about the proportion in which the several classes exist in the country. There are small stakes and large ones, and the variety of games by which the appeal to chance is made seems endless. The players chat and laugh as they play, and though they watch the games very closely, and, if their money lasts, play sometimes all night long, there is none of that feverish or excited look about them which is noticeable in the faces of gamblers elsewhere. It is evident that the Mexicans gamble entirely for the sport there is in gambling. They win or loose with the same happy look, the same gay laugh.—American Magazine.

WHY DIDN'T YOU TELL THE BULL?

There was once a very important state officer in California who thought that everybody knew him, or ought to know him. He was one day walking through a field, when a bull addressed him in an undertone and made for him with its head down and in a position to raise him. He was a state official, a man of dignity and political power and natural pomposity, but he ran. He ran surprisingly well. He ran still better than he did for office, and he got to the fence first. He clambered over out of breath and dignity, and found the owner of the bull calmly contemplating the operation.

"What do you mean sir?" asked the irate official. "What do you mean by having an infuriated animal like that roaming over the fields?"

"Well, I guess the bull had some right in the field—"

"Right! Right! Do you know who I am, sir?"

The farmer shook his head.

"I sir, I am General ——"

"Why didn't you tell the bull!"—San Francisco Chronicle.

WE ARE WONDERFULLY MADE.

There was an old preacher once who told some boys of the Bible lesson he was to read in the morning. The boys finding the place, glued together the connecting pages. The next morning he read on the bottom page: "When Noah was one hundred and twenty years he took unto himself a wife, who was"—then turning the pages—"one hundred and forty cubits long, forty cubits wide, built of gopher wood, and covered with pitch inside and out." He was naturally puzzled at this. He read it again, verified it and then said: "My friends, this is the first time I ever read this in the Bible, but I accept it as evidence of the assertion that we are wonderfully made."

IT WILL BE ALL LIGHT THERE.

Children are happy counsellors, says a writer in the Detroit Free Press. They are to our hard, practical, everyday lives what the stars are to the heavens, or the flowers and birds to the earth.

Ah! what would the world be to us
If the children were no more?
We should dread the desert behind us
Worse than the dark before.

There is a family in this city who are dependent at this moment upon a little child for all the present sunshine of their lives.

A few weeks ago the young wife and mother was stricken down to die.

It was so sudden, so dreadful when the grave family physician called them together in the parlor, and in his solemn professional way intimated to them the truth—there was no hope!

Then the question arose among them who would tell her?

Not the doctor! It would be cruel to let the man of science go to their dear one on such an errand.

Not the aged mother, who was to be left childless and alone!

Not the young husband, who was walking the floor with clinched hands and rebellious heart.

Not—there was only one other, and at this moment he looked up from the book he had been playing with unnoticed by them all, and asked gravely:

"Is my mamma doin' to die?"

Then, without waiting for an answer, he sped from the room and up stairs as fast as his little feet would carry him.

Friends and neighbors were watching by the sick woman. They wonderingly noticed the pale face of the child as he climbed on the bed and laid his small head on his mother's pillow.

"Mamma," he asked, in sweet, caressing tones, "Is you 'fraid to die?"

The mother looked at him with swift intelligence. Perhaps she had been thinking of this.

"Who—told—you—Charlie?" she asked faintly.

"Doctor an' papa an' gamma—everybody," he whispered. "Mamma, dear, little mamma, doan' be 'fraid to die, 'ill you!"

"No, Charlie," said the young mother, after one supreme pang of grief; "no," mamma won't be afraid."

"Jus' shut your eyes in 'e dark, mamma, teep hold my hand—an', an', when you open 'em, mamma, it'll be all light there."

When the family gathered awe-stricken at the bed side, Charlie held up his little hand.

"Hu-s-h! My mamma doan' to sleep. Her won't wake up here any more!"

And so it proved. There was no heart-rending farewell, no agony of parting, for when the young mother awoke she had passed beyond, and as baby Charlie said, "It was all light there."

THERE'S NO PLACE LIKE HOME.

"Where shall we go this summer, dear?" asked Mrs. Flyaway.

"Well, let's see." replied her husband, "last winter we got malaria in Florida?"

"Yes, and the aligators got your pointer dog."

"And the preceding summer we got the rheumatism in the mountains?"

"We did, and the bears got my little skye terrier."

"And the summer before we went to the seashore and got bled by the mosquitoes and the landlord?"

"Yes."

"And the summer before that we went into the country, and the children were laid up all the summer with ivy poison?"

"I remember."

"Well, if I felt as strong as I used to, I'd like first-rate to take a vacation this summer, but I'm feeling kind of weak and listless, and I am afraid I couldn't stand it. Let's stay at home and rest this year."—Lewiston Journal.

She Kept the Golden Rule.

HAVING BEEN BENEFITTED, A LADY TELLS THE GOOD NEWS TO HER FRIENDS—WHY EVERYBODY SHOULD READ THE PAPERS.

By chance I saw Rev. Mr. Hall's letter in the New York Sun relating to his wife's case and her cure of nervous dyspepsia and Malaria by the use of Kaskine. I had been afflicted in the same way for about eight years, and taken quinine until I was almost crazy from its effects. I would have severe pains at the pit of my stomach on eating more than usual, and was very nervous and underwent great mental depression. My head troubled me a great deal with terrible pains through the eyes and back of the neck. I also suffered much from sickness of the stomach.

In reply to a letter from me Mr. Hall said that his wife took, in all, half a dozen bottles of Kaskine, and it cured her. This decided me and I began using it. Up to the present date (March 12, 1887) I have taken several bottles within two month's time, and I feel very much better. The bad sensations in my head are entirely gone; my stomach troubles are very slight to what they were, and I expect to be perfectly cured before the warm weather sets in.

Of course I could not keep this good news to myself, and so told my lady friends, several of whom are using this remedy with the same good results as I experienced myself. I need hardly tell you how glad I am that so excellent a medicine for such common yet distressing ailments as mine, has been discovered, and when a good word from me will point out Kaskine, the new quinine, to those who may suffer in the same way, you may be sure I shall not fail to speak.

Yours very truly,
MRS. WALTER H. MITCHELL,
Whippany, N. J.

Kaskine, the new quinine, allays the inflammatory conditions, regulates the bowels, promotes the assimilation of food, and subdues the nervous derangements which attend and are often the cause of dyspepsia. It has the exceptional virtue of being easily borne by the most delicate stomachs, and is especially adapted to the use of women and chronic invalids. It effectually destroys malarial poison and never leaves behind it any deleterious effects.

Other letters of a similar character from prominent individuals, which stamp Kaskine as a remedy of undoubted merit, will be sent on application.

With what alacrity SANDFORD'S GINGER responds to the cry of distress. No cramp or pain has ever made a demand upon it for relief or cure that has not met with instant response.

It is a delicious combination of Imported Ginger, Choice Aromatics, and French Brandy, totally unlike and vastly suderior to all other "gingers," pain cures and nauseating nostrums.

Unripe food, impure water, unhealthy climate-unwholesome food, Malaria, Epidemic and Conta, gious Diseases, Cholera Morbus, Cramps, Pains, Indigestion, Colds, Chills, Simple Fevers, Exhaustion, Nervousness or Loss of Sleep, that beset the traveler or household at this season, are nothing to those protected by SANFORD'S GINGER.

Tell Me.

Where did you find, little maiden fair,
Such soft blue violets for your eyes?
And how did you catch in your crazy hair
The golden shimmer of summer skies?

Where did you ever learn ways so sweet,
To which no art or seeming belong?
Were your dimpled hands and restless feet
Attuned to motion, as harp to song?

Who told you the secret of the song
That sings itself, and laughter, too,
That never tires, though the day be long?
Tell me, my little fairy—who?

And whisper in my ear the magic word
That unlocks the gates of sleep—
A word that men have never, never heard,
And only little children keep.

And teach me to trust and trust and trust again,
Though hopes prove false and hearts deceive,
And whether the world brings loss or brings gain,
To ever love, and still believe.

Winds blow cold, out of tune is the song,
Roses have thorns, and gold lies deep;
Tell me how to laugh when the world goes wrong,
And I pledge you the secret to keep.

RECOVERED BY A LETTER.

It had been a busy, wearisome day with me ever since the clanging bells and screeching whistles had startled the winter morning punctually at 7 o'clock. Worse than that, it had proved one of those vexatious periods that sometimes drop down upon us without the slightest premonition, in which the skein of life becomes so hopelessly and inextricably tangled that the more we try to smooth it out, the more we add to its complication and mystery.

Since the gageworkers inexorable summons had warned the tardy ones of their danger on that crisp, clear winter morning, until now, at half-past five in the afternoon, it had been a veritable black-letter day with me, both literally and metaphorically. My head swam and my eyes were dim and blurred. The type-writer, too, had been in a sort of rebellious, cranky mood, as though protesting against the incessant strain and overwork that had been put upon it.

From the dingy little office on the third floor, where my monotonous life was mostly passed, I could look upon the great Brooklyn bridge, which, like a huge artery, united the hearts of the two bustling cities. It was preciously seldom that I dared indulge in the luxury of resting my aching eyes upon the ceaselessly moving panorama on the towering iron bridge; but when I did, it gave me new courage to resume work, for I then realized what a world of active, perpetual workers there were beside my own humble self. The sight was restful to the eye and encouraging to the spirits.

It was half-past 5 o'clock, and a cold winter day. The cranky type-writer had ceased from its petulant clicks, and rested in its corner in moody silence, as one who would say, "I've been shamefully abused to-day." The weary fingers that had, for nine hours, manipulated its keys, were resting upon the sill of the solitary window in that dingy office; and the eyes that had followed steadily the hateful alphabet all day, were now resting upon the wagons rolling over the smooth ways of the bridge, the noiselessly gliding cars and the mass of pedestrians. The tired body leaned against the window-casing, as my eyes followed the movements of the busy living objects out there.

I was present in the body in this little den, and my eyes seemed to take in all before them; my spirits were way out among the hills and fields of my native place, 200 miles away. Thought is so independent of all our surroundings that it can take us airily on its wings and lead us backward or forward to scenes once familiar, or to those in prospective, hoped for, but not yet realized.

So, while the weary hands rested on that black window-sill, and the tired body leaned for support against the casing, and the aching and dimmed eyes seemed reveling in a feast of delightful change from the hateful and complaining little type-writer, my spirit was 200 miles away in Drayton, a quiet village in New Hampshire, and my mental eye was resting on a pleasant but humble cottage, and my spiritual ear was drinking in the sweet tones of tenderness of a mother's voice. So completely had my present uncongenial surroundings been obliterated from the tablet of my mind that I felt the soft touch of a mother's gentle hand upon my head, as she smoothed my heavy tresses of brown hair in the old, familiar, caressing way; and I even heard the dear tones as she uttered them in her musical way:—

"Courage, my child! and remember that a mother's prayers and love are always with you, and that your Heavenly Father, who cares for a sparrow, will watch over you."

It was the only Father I had at this time, and I tried to trust in Him and let Him take the sad corner of my heart, that my own earthly father more than filled by his love and care for me.

"Can you write a letter, miss?"

The bridge and all its great moving panorama had long since vanished from my physical senses. The village home swiftly followed it now into oblivion. The dear mother's face had faded and disappeared and her gentle injunction, woven into her, blessing, was ruthlessly shattered by this terse, matter-of-fact sentence, exploded so unexpectedly into my ear.

I had come out of my dream-life with a shock that left me for a moment speechless. I looked at the man dumbfounded. He seemed to me what, in my limited experience, a western miner should look like; a broad-brimmed, slouch hat, coarse trousers inside of heavy boots, and a fur coat which gave him something of the appearance of a grizzly bear, such as I had seen pictured in my school books. He had, however, a pleasant face which was both kind and respectful, and was a man probably not more than thirty-five.

Could I write a letter? Well! Could a human machine rotate and move in its well-worn grooves? Could a type-writer reproduce dictated speech or thought!

"Could I write a letter?" I interrogated mechanically, still gazing at him.

"That's about the size of it, miss," he assented, with just a slight relaxation from his sad look, but not quite a smile. "You see, miss, I've just come on from Leadville, where I've been for about ten years among the mines. I made lots of money out there, and I've come back to settle down. I've got to be in this city for a week or two on some business, and I thought I'd get some one to write my old mother"—

"I'll write your letter," I said promptly. The "old mother" had settled the matter with me. My slight vexation at being called upon to lengthen my wearisome day had vanished with the other wearisome pictures. "But," I added, thoughtlessly, "why do you not write yourself? Your mother, I am sure, would rather have a letter written by your own hand."

"Guess I couldn't do it, miss," he replied, this time with a sad smile. "I'm learning to write, but I'm afraid the poor old mother couldn't read my writing now."

He had picked up my pencil and was making hieroglyphics on a scrap of paper on the desk.

"Could you read that?" he asked.

I managed to decipher "mother," but that was all I could make out.

"You used your left hand I noticed. Why do you not learn to write with the right hand?" I asked again, as thoughtlessly and with still sadder results.

"Oh! I know how to write with that," he answered.

There was no smile now, and I observed that he did not withdraw his right arm from his capacious pocket.

"Then why do you not use that hand?" I pursued blunderingly.

He had laid the pencil down and looked very discouraged at his efforts.

I longed to make amends for the pain I had caused, and I went immediately to the odious little type-writer, saying:

"I will write you a letter on this."

Here was a man who wanted a letter written to his poor old mother, whom he had not seen for ten years, and he had no right hand with which to write his filial love and devotion! I would be his right hand, for the time being, at least. I would lengthen my wearisome day indefinitely if it would cheer the heart of a poor, old, anxious mother somewhere.

"But what's that?" he said, laying a finger on the magical little machine.

I explained by showing him a sheet of type-writing. He looked it over, and handed it back to me with a negative shake of the head.

"Not any for me, miss," he said, depreciatingly. The poor old soul would not like it. She'd kinder think it was newspaper work, or something like that, you see. I want her to have a genuine, hand-writ letter; more sociable like, you know."

I reflected for an instant. I could, of course, write one for him with pen and ink. My experiences in penning addresses upon tens of thousands of envelopes, before I was promoted to the dignity of a type-writer, had given me a mastery over the pen. It was only a question as to whether I should humor his whim.

I decided in the affirmative. I had a dear friend somewhere out in the western country, perhaps a miner too. He had left a mother—and me—to seek his fortune. We were very dear friends once; but a light cloud had hidden us from each other. Still I loved him after all these sad, lonesome years, and perhaps he still had a lingering love for me. Who knows?

He noticed my hesitation, momentary though it was.

"It would please mother so much—"

"Yes, of course," I interrupted.

I seized a pen, and placing a sheet of note paper before me, I was ready.

"I want it to go something like this," he began, thoughtfully. "Dear old mother—"

I melted as I traced the lines on the paper. These first three words were the key to my heart. He had opened it. He seemed wrestling with some problem, and I tried to encourage him to proceed with the dictation.

"I want it writ kind and tender like; just like I'd talk to her if she was here now, you know."

"Yes," I assented.

"But to tell it to a stranger"—

"Yes, I understand, but I cannot write it for you unless you tell me first what you want to say to her," I said. And then I added, "you can speak freely to me. I have a mother, too, a good way from here, and I can imagine I am writing to her, you know."

"Is that so?" he said, while a grateful smile, and something very much like a blush overspread his manly, bronzed face. "Then I'll go ahead, I want you to say, 'Your boy, who left you ten years ago, on whose head you laid your dear hand when you gave him your parting blessing, and told him whatever he did, or wherever he went, to always remember that—that—God would take care of him if—if—'"

I waited patiently without looking up till I heard a suppressed sob. Then I saw that strong, roughly clad man choked with emotion, and his eyes glistening with the fiercely repressed tears.

"Beg pardon, miss, I'll go on now, 'would take care of him if, in every time of temptation, he would take a look at his mother's picture in his pocket, and think how she was praying for him day and night. Your boy will be with you again.' Sign it John, miss, if you please."

I was disappointed at this ending. I had thought to know his name, at least, not knowing then that I should address the envelope for him.

A vague presentiment had been gradually taking possession of me; a feeling that there was approaching a crisis in my life. I ridiculed the idea, and argued that the man, and his history, was only a coincidence with something interwoven with my own life. But in spite of the light manner in which I tried to treat the matter, this ghost of a presentiment refused, peremptorily, to be exercised.

It had grown quite dark outside. I had lighted the gas. My visitor was reading over the letter, which I had handed to him, after signing it "John"—the name of my old lover; but there are so many "Johns" in the world, I argued. I stood in the window, looking at the bridge again in the glory of its electric lights. The bells and whistles were sending out the welcome sound of rest to the thousands of tired toilers, and I—I was off to that distant village again, looking into those dear aged eyes and listening to those tender, loving tones.

"John" was reading to his old mother half aloud, but it was only an indistinct hum in my ears. I had called in another "John" from the dim past, who was standing by me and mother as of old.

But as I glanced at the handsome face near the gas jet, lighted up by the soft blaze and illuminated by a tender emotion which the contents of the letter had awakened, I gave a violent start. The faithful artist, memory, had by subtle process removed the bronze from that face, and had retouched the lines of care, and by soft, deft manipulation had also rejuvenated the face till I saw it a decade younger before me.

He spoke to me now, having finished the reading of the letter for the third time, but I kept my face to the window till I could gain my composure. What would a strange man think of me, with my lip trembling and the hot blood running riot over my cheeks and brow?

"It's a pretty handwriting," he said with a grateful smile. "Better than mine;" hiding his maimed arm in the great pocket of his grizzly coat. "But, I'd like if you'd put a little post—, what do you call it?" he added, coloring.

"Postscript," I suggested. "Certainly."

"Tell mother," he said, as I took up my pen again, "that I wish she'd remember me—no, give—love to—to—my little girl, if she lives up there yet, and if she isn't married."

He seemed to force the words out, and turned away his flushed face from me.

My heart beat violently, and my hand trembled so that I could scarcely trace the words he had dictated.

Could it be my old lover, who had buried the old love of which my suffering heart was the object? I wrote the fatal words. I could scarcely see the paper before me. I moved the pen mechanically, as I would strike the soulless keys of the odious type-writer. I doubt if I saw the letters that I formed at all. My head was in a dizzy whirl.

He took the letter again and pored over the postscript. I thought he never would have done with it, he was so long.

"I can just make it out," he said, finally, "Does not look like the other part of the letter a bit. It is not much better than my left handed scrawl. Oh! I beg pardon, miss," he hastily added, as he looked full into my pained eyes. "I 'spose you're tired. Been working all day, probably. I'm a brute to add to your troubles and tire you more. It will do very well, I guess."

I had closed my eyes to try to shut out the pain. I had seen, daily growing, great, ugly black rings under my eyes. Any one could see them. This stranger saw them. But the pain at my heart now far exceeded in intensity that of the aching eyes.

"Now, miss," he continued in the gentlest tones, "if you will please direct it for me, I'll be so much obliged."

I had not turned from the window, nor unclosed my eyes, and with all sights shut out from my senses, my hearing seemed painfully acute. That voice carried me back to scenes in which I had heard just such tones—low, gentle and tender. It was—I'm sure it was the twin of that voice that once, in the long ago, wakened in my heart its very first and best love.

I heard his last request, but it had so mingled with the far-away voice I was listening to in my dreamy retrospection that I paid no heed to it.

A slight movement on his part aroused me, and I saw him looking compassionately at me, and in a respectful way he held out the letter.

I folded it and inclosed it in an envelope, and took up my pen once more.

"Please direct it to Mrs. Jane Stanley, Drayton, New Hampshire," he said.

The hand that held the pen rose suddenly in the air, like the arm of one first stricken with the palsy, and the other followed it uncontrollably. One gasp for breath—a choking sensation—and I fell backward, but not far; a strong arm held me up. A convenient glass of water revived me sufficiently to hear the words:

"Poor child! she's worn out."

"Are you John Stanley?" I whispered, as he raised me to a sitting posture.

"Why, of course I am John Stanley," he said, regarding me with surprise.

My face, which a moment before had felt cold and bloodless, was now burning as with a fever, and yet I shook as with the violence of an ague, as I said in almost inaudible tones:

"I am Annie Sinclair."

Something between a groan and a miner's shout of joy at the discovery of a rich lead reached my ear, as I was unceremoniously gathered tightly in the shaggy, grizzly-bearskin coat of the terrible stranger. What if it were a mistake, after all. There might be other John Stanleys. Oh, yes, and there might be other Annie Sinclairs, who worked ten hours a day on type-writers. And—I might not be myself, and John might not—

"My own litle girl! To think I've got you to write to mother and inquire about your own self!"

I think he must have forgotten all about how tired and worn out I was from the fierce way in which he embraced me again and again, only pausing long enough to look into my aching eyes. I could easily imagine I was being hugged by a Rocky Mountain grizzly as I lay helpless on the fur coat and felt the arm close tightly around me.

But I made a feeble struggle at last to extricate myself. What right had John Stanley to kiss me in this free and passionate manner? He had not yet asked me to forgive him for the past. John had been a miner, and I suppose he thought as he had once staked out his claim on me, that that settled it forever. Oh! these men are so cool and presumptuous. He only laughed at my weak efforts to free myself from his embrace, and kissed me again.

John was the first to discover the presence of a third party in the room, and following his gaze, I saw with alarm that Mr. Brunsley, my employer, had come in, and was looking on with a countenance which was a study. Amusement and displeasure seemed hopelessly mixed.

"It's all right, Mr. ——," John exclaimed. "This is my little girl. I left her behind ten years ago. My claim is good yet."

"I am sorry to lose so good an employe," Mr. Brunsley remarked smilingly; "but I must congratulate you, sir, on your good fortune in getting her."

"I want to pay you for writing the letter for me," said John, turning again to me.

"I am already paid," I replied shyly.

From that evening I turned my back on the hateful little type-writer, and have never touched a key since.

Instead of looking out upon the great Brooklyn bridge, with its ceaseless panorama of cars, wagons and human beings, I now look out from a cottage situated about midway between Mrs. Stanley's and my own mother's, upon the loved hills and charming landscapes where as a girl I was happy, and where as a grown woman I knew my first sorrow, but where I now know the world as I have never, never known it before—bright, sunny, musical, cloudless and serene.

I write all of John's letters now—but not with a type-writer, and he always pays me for my labor—in the same currency which is legal tender in our house, as that he proffered me for the first letter I penned for him. And when I tell my newer friends that I was once hugged by a grizzly bear, and they manifest incredulity, I bring out John's old Leadville coat, and they laugh.

A CURE FOR ALCOHOLISM.

I was one of those unfortunates given to strong drink. It reduced me to degradation. I vowed and strove long and hard, but I seldom held victory over liquor long. I hated drunkenness, but still I drank. When I left it off I felt a horrid want of something I must have or go distracted. I could neither eat, work or sleep. I entered a reformatory and prayed for strength; still I must drink. I lived so for over twenty years; in that time I never abstained over three months hand-running. At length I was sent to the house of correction as a vagrant. If my family had been provided for I would have preferred to remain there, out of liquor and temptation. Explaining my affliction to a fellow prisoner, a man of much education and experience, he advised me to make a vinegar of ground quassia, a half ounce steeped in a pint of vinegar, and to put a small teaspoonful of it in a little water, and to drink it down every time the liqqor thirst came upon me violently. I found it satisfied the cravings, and suffused a feeling of stimulation and strength. When I was discharged I continued this cure, and persevered till the thirst was conquered. For two years I have not tasted liquor, and I have no desire for it. Lately, to try my strength I have handled and smelt whisky, but I have no temptation to take it. I give this for the consideration of the unfortunate, several of whom I know have recovered by the same means, which I no longer require to use.—Connecticut Home.

SHE GIVES HUBBY A LESSON.

I know a shrewd woman, who, whenever her husband had given her a lecture on nervousness, used to contrive to have him dress one of the children for school on a winter's morning, after a breakfast slightly belated. The good man would fall meekly into the trap, not clearly remembering the vastness of the labor—the adjustments and the tyings and the buttonings; the leggins, over-drawers and arctic shoes; the jacket, scarf, coat, gloves, mittens, wristlets; the cap or hat or hood, to be pulled and pushed and tied in proper position; the complete way in which all these things, besides being put on, have to be mutually made fast by strings and buttons and safety pins, so that the child thus dressed is a model of well compressed packing, and could, like a well packed barrel of china, be sent around the world without injury.

Calm must be the spirit and high the purpose of the father who reaches the end of this complex task without a word of impatience, while the wife whom he calls nervous has long since taken off his hands the other children, and has long since with deft fingers dressed them, and given one patient, final, all-comprehensive twitch, and the whole thing is done. If you doubt whether men are, on the whole, and in their own way, as nervous as women, test them with getting the children ready for school, and remember that their mother does it twice a day at least, and every day of her life.—Harper's Bazar.

It was raining quite hard, and one of the traveling men who was in the store wanted to go down street. Seeing an umbrella in the corner and desiring to borrow it he asked the clerk who was nearest it:

'Is that your umbrella, Smith?'

The clerk slowly turned on him, and after an impressive pause said:

'Mr. Seller, if there's anything I do despise it's a suspicious nature.'—Plaindealer.

Let the Bairnies Play.

O! let the bairnies play themsel's,
I like to hear their din;
I like to hear each restless foot
Come trippin' oot and in.

I like to see each face sae bright,
And each wee heart sae gay;
They mind me o' my ain young days—
O! let the bairnies play.

O! dinna check their sinless mirth,
Or make them dull and wae
Wi gloomy looks or kankered words,
But let the bairnies play.

Auld douce wise folks should ne'er forget
They once were young as they,
As fu' o' fun and mischief, too—
Then let the bairnies play.

And never try to set a heid,
Wi' auld age grim and gray,
Upon a wee saft snawy neck—
No! let the bairnies play.

For, O! there's mony a weary nicht
And mony a waefu' day
Before them, if God spare their lives—
Sae let the bairnies play.

THE IDEAL HOME.

The ideal home beautiful is attained rather by avoiding errors of taste than by the adoption of special dogmas of art. For my own part if I have any dogmas to preach, they may fairly be condensed in this one rule: "Avoid shams and affectations of all kinds."

"Don't mistake mere prettiness for beauty; millinery, for instance, is out of place in the home beautiful.

Don't attach to your chairs and sofa cushions meaningless bows of ribbon which tie nothing.

Don't dress up your toilet tables in muslin petticoats stiffened with crinoline, or colored calico.

Don't scatter startling white "tidies" about chairs and sofas, as on so many bushes, as if you were hanging out the wash to dry.

Don't display on your walls china plates and dishes. They were never meant to go there. An exception may be made now and then in favor of fine color, to help light upon the room, or where a delicate china painting is worthy of careful examination. But hang up ordinary domestic china! Don't!

Don't hang small pictures so that their beauty is lost to any one under eight feet high. If a picture is not seen from the same position that the artist saw it when he painted it, the drawing will appear foreshortened and the general effect consequently falsified.

Don't hang any picture in the home which has not the impress of elegance, purity and cheerfulness.

Don't give place to representations of corpses, tortured saints, or anything occasioning painful emotions. And, above all, having such pictures, and wanting them down stairs, don't banish them to the nursery, school-room or bed-room.

Some things I would relegate to the bedroom—out of the way somewhere—in locked drawers, for instance. I mean mementoes of seaweed, and dried ferns or flowers, and wretched daubs on china, canvas or paper, the crude efforts of youthful members of the family. No true lover of the home beautiful will inflict these on his family and friends and compel them to violate truth by pretending to like them.

Don't buy your carpet or your wall paper because it looks pretty in the roll when you see it in the store. But think of the fitness of each with its ultimate surroundings. Remember that the carpet is to be a background for your furniture, and the wall paper—unless it is to be the actual decoration of the walls—is to be merely a background for your pictures.

Don't admit into the home beautiful any piece of furniture or implement of every-day life which does not honestly serve its purpose—no light, flimsy chairs which an able-bodied man dare not sit upon; no puffy, debilitated sofas, all wind and springs; no burnished, brass-sheeted, fire-irons, bought only to be looked at, and give place to the ugly little black poker and shovel when coal is to be broken or ashes are to be removed.

There is no reason why an object should not be useful as well as ornamental. Indeed, there can be no beauty without fitness. Nature everywhere teaches us the compatibility of the highest utility with the greatest beauty.

And so with beauty and truth. There may be truth without beauty. Truth, beauty and utility are the inseparable trinity of the ideal home. Let us then write them upon the portals of the house as the epitome of all that is most admirable in religion, in art, and in every-day life.—Journal Decorative Art.

A SHREWD YANKEE TRICK.

A new liquor warehouse opening at Boston on a ready-money and low-price system, Johnathan walked in one day with a two-gallon keg on his shoulder, and asked for a gallon of the best brandy. The liquor having been poured through a funnel into his keg the money was demanded. Pretending ignorance of their mode of doing business, the Yankee said that he would pay the next time he came into town. The shopman demurred, saying that he did not intend to give any credit. "But," asked the Yankee in mock surprise, "do you intend to take back the brandy?"

"To be sure," replied the other, "if you don't pay for it."

"Then," said he, "you must bring your measure, for I had some liquor of my own in the keg."

This was done, a gallon of the contents measured back, and the fellow marched off with another gallon of fine grog, having half filled his keg beforehand with water.—Bernard's Retrospections of America.

Little Dick—'I don't want to do that.' Omaha woman—'But you must.' 'Why?' 'Because I say so.' 'What's the reason I have to mind you? I ain't your husband.'—Omaha World.

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, AUGUST 5, 1887.

MR. DREXEL, owner of the cottage on Mount McGregor where Gen. Grant died, proposes to do a graceful and appropriate act by presenting the place to the Grand Army.

THANKS to the good offices of the state board of arbitration, the trouble in the Beverly shoe shops has been settled practically in favor of the lasters, who have returned to work.

KENTUCKY went Democratic in Monday's state election as usual, but by a majority so much smaller than customary that the Republicans begin to hope their turn will come before many years.

THE quiet village of Marion, down in Plymouth county, was surprised and delighted Tuesday to learn that Mrs. Cleveland had arrived in town as the guest of Gen. A. W. Greely.

THE United States attorney for Utah territory has entered suit to disincorporate the Mormon church and wind up its business, turning over the proceeds to the common school fund of the territory. The property is valued at $3,000,000.

Some of the residents of Gardiner, Me., are so intensely conservative that when the city clock was set by standard time recently they at once purchased another clock, put it in a church tower and are now enjoying its local time. The "good old ways" are good enough for them.

MCGARIGLE, the escaped Chicago boodler, has turned up in Canada, whither he made his escape in a Canadian schooner, thanks to the imbecility or indifference of the Chicago detectives. He talks of returning to Chicago as soon as the "little affair" is settled.

THERE has been a reunion of colored soldiers and sailors at Boston this week, extending over two days, the occasion being very pleasant and profitable. Special honors were paid to the name and memory of Gov. Andrew, and his grave was visited and decrated on Tuesday.

THE celebration at Philadelphia, Sept. 17th, of the 100th anniversary of the signing of the constitution, promises to be an occasion of much interest. President Cleveland is to preside, Justice Miller of the United States supreme court will deliver an oration, and there will be a industrial and military procession.

IT may interest people to know that last month was the hottest July since 1878. Dates are not used as frequently in a comparison of temperatures as localities. It has been frequently remarked during the past few weeks that it was "hotter'n h——," a terse statement intended to convey an idea of very intense torridity.

MAYOR O'CONNOR of Holyoke, who refused to sign the 150 liquor licenses voted by the aldermen, because they reduced the fee $100, stood out pluckily long after it became evident that he could not bring them to his terms, but has finally yielded to legal advice and signed the papers. It is a present victory for the liquor interest, but the mayor was in the right morally.

CHARLES H. REED, Guiteau's counsel, attempted suicide by jumping from a Jersey City ferry boat last Saturday, while suffering from an attack of emotional insanity, but he was rescued, and the bath brought him to his senses. Reed hasn't found much but ill luck in life since his defense of his miserable brother-in-law, whose curse seems to follow all who had anything to do with him.

SPRINGFIELD banks will inaugurate the Saturday half-holiday movement in that city to-morrow by closing at noon for the next seven Saturdays. There is no reason why banks should not generally adopt this plan, through the summer months at least, and we venture to say that they will do so before many years. Merchants will not find it so easy to close, inasmuch as Saturday is one of their busiest days, and people do not readily change their habits in such matters. Still, the half-holiday might be made quite general with a little coöperation and extra effort, and it is destined to grow in favor and observance every year.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY STEARNS has unbosomed himself to a reporter to the extent of declaring that he could not be induced to accept a nomination to the governorship this year, though he professes to believe that Massachusetts will elect a Democrat to that office. His views upon the duties of the chief magistrate are characteristic, and very sensible withal. He says:

> Of late years it seems to me the governor's duty has been to act as chief junketer for the commonwealth. We hear of him in all parts of the state wherever there occurs any municipal epoch, and even at the most ordinary festival the governor is required to be present, leading the dance at balls, exhibiting himself as the most common spectacle at all festive occasions. While I think he should always appear and represent with dignity the commonwealth on all occasions in which the state is interested, I do not think he should be called upon to respond to the squeak of every fiddle or to the clink of glasses at every club dinner.

The showers this week have undone much of the work laid out in repairing the damage to the Fitchburg railroad in the vicinity of Millers Falls by the recent rains.

James Martin, a painter 17 years old, while at work on the Brooklyn Bridge, Monday, fell headlong into the river 130 feet below, but was not seriously injured.

Rev. Dr. William Hague, one of the ablest clergymen in the Baptist denomination, dropped dead of apoplexy in front of Tremont Temple, Boston, Monday noon.

A trumpet has been invented for telephoning at sea, by which conversations are said to be carried on miles apart with no wire.

There were slight earthquake shocks all along the Mississippi valley Tuesday, but no damage is reported.

Over 1000 street car horses have died from the heat since the 1st of June in New York.

The town of Attleboro, the largest in the state, is to be divided into two towns.

PALMER AND VICINITY.

Joseph King has been seriously sick for some days, but is now improving.

Miss Bertha Marshall is back in her place in the telegraph office at the depot.

A. J. Northrop tore his hand quite badly last Sunday by catching it on a nail.

Tuesday was another day of heavy rains. The farmers are willing it should "let up" now.

Miss Hattie Blanchard gave a pleasant lawn party to a number of friends last evening.

C. H. Baker is doing the mason work on a two-story brick barn at Warren for W. B. Ramsdell.

Rev. A. C. Hurd of Thorndike will occupy the pulpit of the Congregational church next Sunday.

Quite a number of Palmer people visited the Prohibition camp meeting at Northhampton this week.

F. E. Sedgwick and wife will go to housekeeping in a tenement in G. F. Sedgwick's house on Pleasant street.

The tax book has been delivered to the collector, and he can be found at his office any afternoon except Friday.

D. J. Mahoney returned Wednesday to Kansas City, where he goes into the hotel business with J. H. Smith, formerly of this village.

A private party of 16 went to Forest Lake Wednesday afternoon, enjoying a moonlight ride on the water and a fine drive home.

The first peaches of the season in the local market were some fine ones brought in by S. Leach, who raised them on his farm in Wilbraham.

There were no preaching services at St. Paul's church Sunday, owing to the sudden illness of Rev. Mr. Raeburn, who was expected to fill the pulpit.

The New London Northern road has greatly improved its station at Dwights by a new piazza outside, new shingles, and fresh paint and paper inside.

Newton Sedgwick has been taking a forced vacation from duty at Shaw's store this week, being threatned with a fever, but is now on the gain once more.

The picnic at North Wilbraham last Saturday, by the young people of St. Thomas' church, was a very successful affair, being largely attended and greatly enjoyed.

The Flynt Building and Construction Co. of this place are rushing business, and have in process of erection over 30 buildings, varying in price from $1000 to $100,000.

The engine on Conductor Sedgwick's train broke down at Winchendon yesterday, and another had to be sent from here to bring the train down. It arrived about 45 minutes late.

The horses attached to Caryl Bros. delivery wagon started on a run up Commercial street Monday afternoon, but the driver pluckily held on and stopped them before they had gone far.

The Baptist Sunday school will picnic at Evergreen Park, next Wednesday, the trains leaving at 8.20 a. m. and 2.10 p. m. Should the day be unfavorable, the trip will be postponed until the first pleasant occasion.

A. E. Park's delivery horse took a little run around the block from the front to the rear of his store yesterday afternoon, but did no damage. "Joe" is quite courageous about tackling runaway teams, after they have stopped.

M. J. Dillon has in contemplation the erection of an ice house on the lot he recently purchased of the Sullivan estate. An excellent pond of pure water could be procured by damming the Burleigh brook, which runs through the lot.

The cheap excursion to Boston, over the Boston and Albany road, occurs next Friday. The round trip fare is $1.45, and only a limited number of tickets will be sold, so those who wish to go will do well to secure their pasteboards in advance.

Mrs. Elisha Converse, 80 years old, received a severe fall last Friday afternoon, badly bruising his hip. She was attempting to lower a window, which gave way, throwing her from the support on which she was standing to the floor.

Monday morning as soon as it was light nearly every sportsman in the place started out after woodcock. If the exodus from other towns was as large as from Palmer, the only wonder is that the hunters managed to shoot without hitting someone.

The New London Northern Road sells round trip tickets to Lake Pleasant for the fare one way, if the ticket is presented to their agent there between 10 and 11 the same day, when a return ticket good until Sept. 15th will be furnished. Roand trip tickets to D. L. Moody's conference at Northfield are sold at $1.55 from Palmer, good going until the 11th, and returning until the 12th.

The annual meeting of the Massachusetts Universalist Convention will be held with St. Paul's church in this place some time the latter part of September, probably commencing the 28th and continuing three days. Over 200 delegates are expected. W. C. Greene, Stillman Ellis and George Robinson have been appointed a finance committee, and as entertainment committee, W. W. Leach, C. E. Fish, Mrs. A. H. Willis, Mrs. J. F. Holbrook.

The Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society has this week put out a large poster in two colors, announcing its thirty-fifth annual exhibition, which will be held Tuesday and Wednesday, September 13th and 14th and giving the list of premiums, which is much larger this year than ever before, besides many of the premiums being of greater value than formerly. The list of new attractions is also good, and fair weather is all that is needed to make the exhibition a most successful one.

The selectmen have this week granted the three druggists of the town — O. P. Allen and LeGro & Lynde of this village, and A. P. Adams of Thorndike — a druggist's license for the sale of liquors. This is in accordance with a law which went into effect June 15th, which compels the selectmen of a town to grant at least one license of this class if a suitable person can be found. As the applicants all bore excellent records in regard to the management of this part of their business, no discrimination was made, all being served alike. The state fixes the price of the license at $1, and each person making a purchase must sign their correct name, a penalty being imposed for giving a fictitious signature.

A work of more than ordinary merit is being brought to the attention of our citizens by E. M. Aiken of Springfield. It is The Child's Bible, published by Cassell & Co., handsomely printed in large, clear type, and finely illustrated, and sold at a very reasonable price. The great charm of the work lies in the fact that it takes the interesting portions of the Bible and places them before the child in the very language of the holy book, all so arranged and illustrated as to present the greatest part of the Scriptures in a most attractive and instructive manner. As one clergyman well says: "All have not time nor talent to simplify and winnow the Scriptures, and find the child's portion of the gospel feast. It will gladden every mother to have this done in such winsome and attractive form." There are many and hearty recommendations, but the book itself is its strongest recommendation to every family.

HOTEL SET ON FIRE.

An attempt was made Tuesday night to burn the Union hotel at Bondsville, but fortunately it was unsuccessful. Between 11 and 12 o clock a quantity of old rags, well saturated with kerosene oil, were found to be ablaze under the front piazza, and just in season, for had the fire continued a few minutes longer it would have been a hard matter to put it out. The house was filled with guests, and their escape would have been doubtful had the fire gained headway, such was its location. The hotel is just across the line in South Belchertown, where several serious incendiary fires have occurred lately, and the fire bug would be severely dealt with if found.

OFFENDERS AGAINST THE LAW.

The case of the 12-years-old Colgrove boy, for stealing money from the cash drawer of Longley's grocery store, was heard last Saturday, and at the solicitation of the state visiting agent, Mr. Lewis, it was continued until the fourth Monday in September, the boy being liberated on probation.

F. S. Gardner of Wales was found guilty of keeping liquors with intent to sell, and fined $50 and costs, from which decision he appealed.

Only one of the four boys arrested for putting obstructions on the track of the Ware River road at Thorndike was found guilty, Phillamon Gagnon, and his case was placed on file, upon the payment of costs.

Wednesday, J. J. Sugrue of Thorndike was up on three charges for selling liquor Sunday, June 19th. He was found guilty and fined $300 and costs, but appealed, as usual.

The continued case of Izora V. Foss, for lewdness, was heard, and brought out some of the most revolting and disgusting testimony ever heard in this court. She was found guilty and sentenced to two years in the woman's reformatory at Sherborn, but appealed.

THE BOYS "PLAY BALL."

The Rockets of Ludlow came to Palmer last Saturday sure of a victory over the home team, but went back defeated, 7 to 6, after the best exhibition of ball playing ever seen on the park ground. Neither side scored in the first inning, both made four runs in the second, and were again shut out in the third. The Palmers made three runs in the fourth inning, and failed to score afterward, while the visitors made one each in the fifth and seventh. The Palmers did not take their last turn at the bat. The Rockets were heavy batters, but couldn't seem to find Rooney's balls, getting only six single hits, while the Palmers batted Dunn for eight singles and a double. The boys should be well patronized when they play so good a game. The club loses Sugrue and Manning, who go to the Three Rivers club, Manning having secured a good position in that village. Manager Holden promises to have a man equally as good for to-morrow's game with the Thorndikes, which will, no doubt, be an exciting one, as both clubs are bound to win. The Thorndike team will be made up as follows: Greene, c.; Sullivan, p., Pierce, ss.; Daly, 1st b.; Merritt, 2d b.; Riley, 3d b.; Broshnan, lf.; Cavanaugh, cf.; Flynn, rf. Ladies will be admitted to the grounds free.

WILBRAHAM.

There will be union services at the Memorial church next Sunday.

Rev. M. S. Howard started Wednesday for Cape Cod, for a two weeks' vacation.

The Congregational church Sunday school picnicked at Shaker pond Wednesday, and report a most enjoyable time.

Dr. Webber and wife start to-day on a two-weeks' vacation, in Connecticut and other places. Dr. S. Foskit will take his practice during his absence.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

M. A. Lane's new house is well filled with boarders.

Henry Cutler and family have been taking their vacation at the Vineyard.

E. H. Cutler is on a western trip, to be gone until September. Mrs. Cutler is at her father's home in Holland.

Mrs. W. S. Clark of Saccarappe, Me., and Mrs. Fannie Knight of Brockton, are spending a week with J. A. Parker.

William McGuire and M. H. Cooley, with a picked nine from the grist mill, played ball last Saturday, the score standing 10 to 8 in favor of the McGuire nine. The game was very well played, the kicking at the decisions of the umpire being fully equal to professionals.

BRIMFIELD.

On Wednesday Thomas J. Morgan and wife left for a visit to Onset Bay.

George Whitehouse returned from a business trip to Batavia, N. Y., on Tuesday.

Rev. W. K. Pierce returned Friday from his vacation of two weeks, and occupied his pulpit last Sabbath.

E. Livermore and wife and Jennie E. Livermore, their daughter, and Mrs. Francis P. Lincoln, returned Friday from a two weeks' sojourn at Newport, R. I.

The arrivals of summer visitors at the hotel are: Miss Nellie and Gertrude Thurston of Worcester, Emer Lovell and wife of Philadelphia, and Edward Butterfield, wife and son of Leonia, N. J. At Lyman Webster's—Mrs. Hazen Webster of Chicago, and Mrs. H. B. Webster and her daughter, Mrs. Ida P. Gaylord of Holyoke. At J. T. Brown's—Dr. J. E. Marsh, wife and daughter of Maynard.

Dan Gray is moving his family to Lonsdale, R. I., where he is to have charge of the spinning dehartment.

Mrs. Sibley, an old resident of this village, died at the house of her daughter, Mrs. Austin Smith, on the Ware road, early Thursday morning.

The Thorndikes defeated a club from Duckville last Saturday 26 to 0. The feature of the game was the coaching of the Duck team by the umpire. The Thorndikes will play the Palmers on the park at Palmer at 4, to-morrow. A good deal of interest is shown as both are strong teams, and a good deal of money has been bet on both sides by outsiders.

A BOLD BURGLARY.

The store of J. A. Wright was entered by burglars early Monday morning and the safe robbed of postage stamps and cash to the amount of $500, and about $100 worth of jewelry was taken from the show cases. The robbers gained an entrance through an open window in the barn, and by the aid of nippers turned the key in the back door of the store. They were evidently experts, as the safe was drilled and the lock forced off. Before leaving they helped themselves to bananas and cigars, and after throwing the insurance and other papers behind some boxes locked the door and departed, leaving no trace behind them. It is supposed they were the same ones that robbed the safe at Hardwick the night before, as the safe was drilled in the same manner. A reward of $100 for the arrest and conviction of the burglars is offered by Mr. Wright, and the selectmen offer $200.

MONSON.

Fred White spent Sunday at Coney Island.

Frank Thompson of Amherst has been in town for a few days.

E. F. Willis and wife start Monday for a week at Block Island.

The Monsons play the Wales at Wales Saturday, and the Palmers at Palmer a week from Saturday.

Fred White, James Scott and Super-Entwiste spent last Sunday at Coney Island, and report a very pleasant trip.

The game of ball last Saturday between the Monsons and Three Rivers was won by the former, the score being 20 to 2.

Miss Hattie Anderson, who has just completed a four-years' course at Mt. Holyoke seminary, is to be the new assistant at the academy.

Universalist services will be suspended until the first Sunday in September, when Rev. Mr. Priest, pastor-elect, will commence his pastorate.

On account of ill health, Mark Noble will close out his livery business, and will sell his horses, carriages, etc., at auction on the 20th, commencing at 10 o'clock a. m.

Marcus Keep Post, G. A. R., mustered three recruits into their ranks last Monday night. Dr. G. E. Fuller will give a talk on army life at the next meeting of the post.

At a full meeting of the Grand Army Post Monday evening, a unanimous vote was given for the new pension bill recommended by the pension committee, and to be presented to the next congress. The bill is almost identical with the bill that was vetoed by the President. Thus far but one post in this state has failed to fully indorse this bill, which the President sees fit to term a paupers' pension bill.

WARE AND VICINITY.

F. G. Fisher has opened a law office over DeMerritt's drug store.

The cornet band's leader, Peter Brennan, has moved his family to Maynard.

The public drinking fountains have not arrived yet, but are expected daily.

Rev. E. Hitchcock's family is staying at the Ware cottage at Sterling camp-ground. They are to remain three or four weeks.

Joseph Breckenridge has fifteen city girls from Boston boarding at his farm. The same number left there the last of last week.

D. L. Griggs of Brimfield has the agency for the American Hand Fire extinguisher for several towns in this vicinity, including Ware.

Henry A. Utley is soon to build an addition to his laundry building, and add carpet beating machinery to his now extensive works.

Miss Eddy and Miss Winifred Eddy have returned from a vacation of three weeks spent with friends at Wakefield and Dorchester.

H. C. Cummings is building a dwelling house on South street for William J. Irwin, on land recently bought of the Gilbert Manufacturing Company.

Rev. B. M. Fullerton, of Waltham, formerly of Palmer, is to preach at the East Congregational church next Sunday, Rev. A. T. Perry being away on a vacation.

The school committee has purchased land of Leander Witherell, in district No. 8, on the west road to Gilbertville, for $150, and will soon erect a school house thereon.

At the assembly of the French Canadiens A. C. Larose, A. E. Dansereau and Ernest Dumontte were elected delegates to attend the national convention to be held at Southbridge.

At a special town meeting on Wednesday afternoon it was voted to appropriate a sum not exceeding $3000 to be used by the water commissioners to extend the water service.

Herschel Halstead has bought a house and lot on West Main street of O. B. Owen. The house is being erected by E. S. Ruggles. It is expected to be completed by the first of October.

Work by the carpenters has been commenced on Bryson's addition to his store, and will be rapidly pushed forward, and it is expected to be completed this month or the first of next.

Mr. and Mrs. George Gorham, Mr. Buffington's son-in-law and daughter, of Worcester, are assisting in conducting the restaurant. David L. Barlow will not continue to work there.

W. C. Sheldon has traded a building lot on West Main street to Henry F. Barnes for his horse, which is considered to be the best large horse that was ever seen in town. Its weight is about 1500 pounds.

John Dexter has purchased of Mrs. Olney Goff, a lot of land adjoining his place on the south, with a frontage of about 200 feet, and about 300 deep on West street. He is soon to build a house south of his own.

David Rohan, clerk in Coe & Naylor's grocery store, had the fingers on his left hand badly cut by falling and striking them on a broken jug, Monday. It was necessary to take seven stitches to draw the flesh together.

Thomas F. Clark and Patrick Gargan leave here on Aug. 17th, and are to sail from Boston on the 18th on board the Cephalonia, to visit Ireland, England, Scotland and Paris, and are to remain until the middle of October.

District Deputy Brennan, of Holyoke, visited the regular meeting of Nenemeseck Council, A. L. of H., Monday evening, which was the sixth anniversary of the organization of this council. During this time only one companion has died.

Miss Anna W. Robinson, formerly of Ware, has been visiting relatives in town the past week. We take the following from the Exeter News-Letter, of Exeter, N. H., of July 15th:

> "Miss Anna W. Robinson sang for the last time in the choir of the First church last Sunday. She returns this week to her home in Newton, Mass. Miss Robinson has a thoroughly trained, rich mezzo-voice, which she uses with artistic taste, and her departure is to be greatly regretted."

Asa Breckenridge accidentally shot himself in the hand Wednesday with a pistol. The ball entered the palm of his hand and passed into the wrist about three inches. The wound was dressed by Dr. Miner. The ball could not be removed at this time, but may have to be taken out through the surface later. It may prove a serious wound.

Wide Awake for August has an illustrated article on "Summer Sports" which all young people will be glad to see; another on "Concord" for patriots, stories by Charles Egbert Craddock, and several other very interesting pieces by favorite writers. Any one may have a specimen copy for five cents, by sending to D. Lothrop & Company, Boston.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Methodist church have elected for their officers: President, Ralph A. Sullivan; vice-president, Henry P. Billings; secretary, Albert Pratt; treasurer, Archie Campbell; look-out committee, Miss Annie Strand, David Sherman, Mrs. Agnes Marsh and Mrs. H. P. Billings; prayer-meeting committee, H. B. Billings, Rev. Edwin Hitchcock and Herbert P. Cummings.

JOTTINGS FROM THE HUB.

From our Special Correspondent.

BOSTON, Aug. 3d, 1887.

One cannot have attended the meeting of the national civil service reform league at Newport to-day (as it has been my privilege to do) without a sense that the men are, in the main, thoroughly conscientious. They do not intend to be hoodwinked by the mistake of the president into opposing what is contrary to the principles of the reform. On the other hand, they do not mean to be so far carried away by criticism of President Cleveland as to overlook the service he has rendered by standing out in many cases against the clamorous demands for more speedy changes in the offices. They mean to be thoroughly fair-minded. It seemed to me, as I listened to the reports of the different associations from the large cities of the country, and heard George William Curtis's address, that they are beginning to realize more than ever what a colossal job they have undertaken. Mr. Curtis makes it out that there is a renewed and increased popular interest in the subject, but from nearly all quarters came the report that neither of the two great parties believes in the reform. It is not possible to form any accurate measure of the growth of public opinion. It is too indefinite to be measured. Without doubt, however, Mr. Curtis is right as to the fact, for all that civil service reform means is honest, efficient government, but the mass of the people, who have neither friends to put into office nor opponents to put out, will have that sort of government sooner or later. They will be led about by the nose more or less by the politicians, but the interest the large mass of the people has in public office is solely that it should be honestly administrated. So the triumph of the reform is certain, though it may be a long way off.

People will notice that the league has spoken freely about the president and about the Higgins-Rasin gang in Baltimore. I think the effect of the meeting will be to strengthen public confidence in the purpose of the league to be truly independent, and not to be controlled either way by prejudice. It was disheartening to hear the rehearsal of President Cleveland's shortcomings, though he was credited with honest motives, and to note the predictions of a clean sweep before his term is completed if he keeps on. The comparison with Grant, Hayes, Garfield and Arthur only illustrated how terribly powerful the spoils system is, and how it realizes that it is now fighting for its life. Whether Cleveland goes down before his powerful enemy, or stands like a rock in its path, it is clear that the duty of the people is to stand steadfast to the reform, even if all their leaders fail. If this is a government by the people, they must be their own leaders.

There is capital stuff for reformers in some of the members of the league, especially in some of the western men. They are more brusque and go-ahead than some of our eastern agitators. They look as if rough-and-tumble fights would just suit them. There is William D. Foulke of Indiana, with snap enough in him for a whole state; Charles Bonaparte of Baltimore, where the disgraceful Higgins rules, shows a wonderful pluck and energy in the face of overwhelming odds, and a determination to keep up the fight to the end; Gen. Grover of Chicago is another wide-awake man; so is Henry Hitchcock of St. Louis. Mr. Curtis is a poor presiding officer, not as sharp and keen as a man in such a place should be. He gets the motions mixed sometimes, and would be badly bothered if the members did not help him out. It is expected that the next meeting will be held in Chicago in September, 1888, where there will be less fashion and more work than at Newport.

The selections of Congressman Rockwell to preside at the Republican state convention, and of Gen. Draper of Hopedale to be chairman of the committee on resolutions, are fortunate in one respect—they ignore the old Beard-Lodge difficulty and bring forward comparatively new men. If the Republicans are to get on in their career, these feuds must be healed, and it was good political judgment to take men who are not identified with the contest for the senatorship, or in any of the factional struggles of the last two years. Rockwell will make a good presiding officer with good form, bearing and address. Gen. Draper will also do well, and under him there will be no attempt to introduce an anti-Beverly Farms plank in the platform. The great issue will be over the prohibitory amendment.

The Democratic state committee expects to meet next week Saturday to fix the time and place of their state convention.

LANDON.

According to the internal revenue figures beer drinking is increasing steadily, while the consumption of whisky is decreasing.

Have you noticed how the clothing trade of Western Massachusetts have squirmed over the fire, smoke and water sale of Foster & Streeter, the Springfield clothiers? The crowds of buyers at this sale have necessitated a policeman at the door to prevent a jam, and sales have been enormous. Thanks to a large stock there are equally good bargains in store for those who have been unable to gain admission. Better call at once.

ELY'S CREAM BALM was recommended to me by my druggist as a preventative to hay fever. Have been using it as directed since the 9th of August and have found it a specific for that much dreaded and loathsome disease. For ten years or more I have been a great sufferer each year, from August 9th till frost, and have tried many alleged remedies for its cure, but Ely's Cream Balm is the only preventative I have ever found. Hay fever sufferers ought to know of its efficacy.—F. B. Ainsworth, Publisher, Indianapolis, Ind.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhoea, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the perscription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25c. a bottle. 1y21

ASTONISHING SUCCESS.

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing consumption, severe coughs, croup, asthma, pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle, as 80,000 dozen bottles were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask you druggist about it. Sample bottles to try, sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in the United States and Canada. 47eow

PECULIAR

To itself in many important particulars, Hood's Sarsaparilla is different from and superior to and other medicine.

Peculiar in combination, proportion and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom.

Peculiar in its medicinal merit, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown.

Peculiar in strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One hundred doses one dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Peculiar in its "good name at home"—there is more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers.

Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad; no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time. Be sure to get

SULPHUR BITTERS

THE BEST AND PUREST MEDICINE EVER MADE.

It will drive the Humor from your system, and make your skin clean and smooth. Those Pimples and Blotches which mar your beauty are caused by impure blood, and can be removed in a short time, if you are wise and use the great blood purifier, SULPHUR BITTERS.

What makes you tremble so? Your nerves are all unstrung, and need a gentle, soothing tonic to assist nature to repair the damage which your excesses have caused.

DON'T GIVE UP!

Sulphur Bitters is NOT a cheap rum or poor whisky drink, to be taken by the glass, like other preparations, which stimulate only to destroy. Why suffer with Boils? Why rave with that terrible headache? Why lay and toss on that bed of pain with rheumatism?

If you have failed to receive any benefit from other medicines or doctors, do not despair. Use Sulphur Bitters. They will cure you when all others fail. No person can remain long sick who uses SULPHUR BITTERS.

The dose is small—only a teaspoonful. It is the best and cheapest medicine. Try it, and you will be satisfied. Get it of your druggist. Don't wait, get it at once. If you are suffering from Kidney Disease, and wish to live to old age, use Sulphur Bitters. They never fail to cure. SULPHUR BITTERS.

By Chance.

They met by chance, a wayward Fate
Till then had kept them wide apart.
He had no thought of love or hate;
She hardly knew she had a heart.

They met by chance; the sinking sun
Cast lengthening shadows on the ground,
The long June day was nearly done—
The twilight dim was gathering 'round.

They met by chance; a fateful chance
That brought them nearer—nearer still,
Each gave the other a startled glance—
Each felt a momentary thrill.

They met by chance; a swift, sharp pain
Unnerves them when they think of that!
They trust they'll never meet again—
The 'cyclist and the brindle cat.

AMONG THE PARAGRAPHERS.

NO PLACE LIKE HOME.

For a "change of scene" people are grieving,
Now cometh the country board booms;
And their homes, full of comfort, are leaving
For some stuffy and little close rooms.
When the nights seem as hot as red fire,
And the skeeters will come in a horde;
While the people groan, fret and perspire,
And growl at that sham "Country board."

When "proof of the pudding" they've tasted,
With berries, suggestive of flies;
They will long to go home and "get rested,"
"Country board's" so suggestive of lies,
For such their experience has taught 'em,
When they, from their mansions, did roam;
And when they return in the autumn,
They will sing this: "There is no place like home."

Sunday school teachers need to exercise caution and stick to facts when instructing their classes, or they will be tripped up. For instance, in Buffalo, a young miss, who has a class of small boys, was rehearsing the story of the flood, and said: "Just think, it rained a whole year, and the entire earth was covered with water." One bright youngster eyed her keenly as he listened intently to her, and, as this last statement was made, he exclaimed: "Oh, go on; it must have frozen over some of the time."

NASBY ARGUES WITH THE PRESIDENT.

I am in Washington jist now by invitashen uv His Serene Eggslency, the President, ez a sort uv advisory committy to assist in settlin sich sicklish questions ez may arise in the seceded states, wich is now, thank Heaven, the government.

I remarked that to attempt to send back them flags and sich, wood create a feelin in the North wich wood be oncomfortable for His Eggslency, and consekently for us.

'Why so?' wuz asked. 'Did he not veto the penshun bill, and hez ther been any uprisin about that? Ef he kin do that, why not this?'

'My liege and gentlemen,' I replied, 'you'll deskiver that there's a thunderin site uv difference between a penshun and a flag. There's many a soljer who woodent thank ye for a penshun who will raise rich a hell ez yoo never dreamed uv if ye tech his military record, and if I wuz in power here I shood let them severely alone. Troo, there wasn't any uprisin about the penshuns, but the time for the uprisin ain't jist at hand. That will show itself next year. No man wood more like to see them flags in the South where we could safely kiver them with sich romances as we chose; but lookin at it ez a praktikal man, I don't like it. I hev a offis. I never wuz more comfortable in my life. I hev nothing speshly to do, and a good salary for not doin it. I want His Eggslency re-elected in '88, for I dont want to be hurled out uv that comfortable place like a stun from a catapult, and be landed on the cold and sterile rox uv defeet.'

'I've heerd enuff uv this kind uv talk,' said His Eggslency, with a pertenshus frown on his brow; 'I've heerd enuff uv this kind uv talk,and we'll dispense with it. I'm responsible to the dimekratic party, which, by the way, I am. What is the Dimekratic party?'

The order wuz determined upon and ishood, at about 10 a. m., and the mornin wuz spent in innosent hilarity. Ginrel Hercules McHammer uv Mississippy, sed how wonderful is the finger uv Providence and how the Lord has showed up in the matter uv the late struggle. He (McHammer) went into the war actily expectin to bust the old government and controle the whole kentry by forse uv arms. But the Lord rebooked our presumpshen. He permitted us to be whaled in the feeld to show the yooselisnis uv the South's apeclin to arms so long ez they had the Northern dimocrisy to depend upon. The South wuz crushed in the feeld, but wat happened? The Dimocrisy uv the North cum promptly to her aid, and lo! where are we now? We got back into the government with the addishuel representashun that the nigger popelashen give us, without being at all worried with the nigger vote. We hed electid a President from the North, it is troo, but that wuz only becoz a Northern man alluz wood do more for us than a Southern.

Genrel Rosser uv Virginny did not want to speshly irritate the North. He wanted absoloot peece, and he considered this thing uv sendin the flags South so that they could be safely lied over wuz a step in the rite direckshun. But, in addishun to returnin these flags, he shood insist upon some other things. Frinstance, laws should be passed perventin sich ruffians ez Genrel Sheridan from goin down the Shenandoah Valley remindin them shivolrous people uv the time when he went down there with some blookoted Linkin ruffians behind him and made it warm for the then unsubdood Confedrisy. Time and the offises hez mitigated the greefs uv the people uv that valley, but sich uv em ez are not absent holdin consulates woodent like to see Sheridan. We are willin to permit Sheridan to live, but there must be a limit to wat he does.

His Eggslency remarkt that all this wuz troo, that he wuz willin to do this to bring about the ery uv good feelin in the dimekratic party, wich wuz lokated in the South and in the lower wards uv Noo York City.

Genrel McHammer remarkt that ther hed got to be a good deel more dun than that to satisfy him. He shood insist on penshunin Confedrit soljers ekal to Fedrel, and datin the penshuns back even with the Fedrel soljers.

I wuz rithin under these injoodishus announcements of policy, and wuz in hopes some one wood steer His Eggslency away from sich a dangerous course. But not one uv em dared say a word, cept Endicott, which remarked it wuz prinsiple, and in the coz of prinsiple he wuz willin the party shood die, ef it hed to, but it wood be with its feet to the foe and its eyes to heaven.

'Hellen blazes!' I shreeked, 'wot folly is this? Wat's all this about diein with our feet to the foe and our eyes to heaven? I don't want to die. I ain't jist now conserned about wat kind uv a corpse I shel make, for I don't want to be a corpse at all. Hevn't the Dimocrisy got sense enuff to live? Can't we manage to eggsist a while and enjoy the spoils? Yer Eggslency, reconsider this rash act.'

'Never!' sed he, 'never! I hev sed it and it shel be done.'

'Then yoo may ez well pack yer baggage and prepare for a skip March 4, 1889—you may ez well!'

Jist here commenst a sceen. The order to send back the flags hed got into the streets, it had bin tellygrafted all over the kentry, and responses wuz a comin back ez thick ez lice in Egypt. No matter wich it wuz from, Republikins or Dimokrats, it was one continyood pertest agin the move.

'Wood you insult the entire North?' shreeked the Republikins.

'Wood yoo throw away the last chance yoo hev for a re-eleckshun?' shreeked the Dimocrisy.

And His Eggslency looked over the telegrams.

'Wher is Milwaukee?' he asked feebly. 'Is ther sich a place ez Peoria?' he mumured. 'And Pittsburg?'

'You bet there is such places,' sed I, "ez you will discover next year."

'Well, ef we hev made a mistake we hev made one, and must back down. Bayard, write a dispatch saying that after givin the matter more matoorer considerashun we hev decided to let the d—d flags stay wher they are, not becoz we don't consider it the correct thing to do, but becoz having eggsamined the law, we find we ain't justified in doin it, though it should be done.

'My Liege, don't say that,' I emplored. 'Say that it wuz the work ov somebody else, and that yoo never knowed a thing about it till it wuz done, and that the moment yoo made hot haste to rescind the order. Put it on Bayard, put it on Endicott, put it on me. We hev got to nominate you agin, and we want some show for electin yoo, so that you can re-appint us. Oh my Liege—"

He was immovable. Directin Bayard to do as he had directed, he stalked out of the chamber.—Toledo Blade.

BALEFUL EFFECTS OF BEANS.

The other day the new minister in a smart Connecticut manufacturing village started out to make calls. After ringing a bell at the front entrance of one of the few substantial old-fashioned farm houses still standing on the outskirts without gaining a response, he followed a narrow footpath around the house to a door opening toward the sunrise, upon which he rapped gently with the head of his cane.

Immediately the sharp click of a slipping bolt was heard, and the good-natured face of a stout elderly woman appeared in the slowly widening crack, and expectant dominie was astounded by this query:

"Look here, now sir, you ain't a tattler, be you?"

"That isn't supposed to be part of my vocation," laughed the clergyman, "I am Mr. ——"

"Oh, yes, I know you. If you ain't a tattler you can come in this way; if you be one, you can go to the front door, and I'll let you in there."

"All your culinary secrets shall remain safely locked in my bosom," promised the pastor, who was growing a little curious.

"Well," said the woman, throwing open the door and allowing her visitor to enter her spotless kitchen and sit down in the ancient chintz-covered rocker, "this seems real nice, and as if you meant to be sort of one-of-our-folks. Now, I'll tell you. I'm cooking beans, and I wouldn't have anybody in this village know it for all the world!"

"Why?" asked the new minister in surprise.

"Beans are cheap. Everyone in the village feels above eating beans. It would be the nine days' talk if it should get out. If you had ever lived in a factory village, you would know your soul wasn't your own; it belongs to the neighborhood. I've got five bushels as nice beans as was ever raised on this farm, but I dare not try to sell them, and when once in a while I venture to cook a few for my own eating I keep the doors locked."

"We are all fond of beans at our house. I will buy a bushel of yours, and we will eat them and endeavor to turn the current of public opinion," said the minister with a laugh.

"It wouldn't do. No one would go to hear you preach if it got talked around that you eat beans or codfish. We need a minister here the very worst way, so now that you are here, don't do anything to set the folks again you. And don't tell what you found me a-cookin', for if you should, there isn't a soul on the street would speak to me, for all I'm worth enough to buy and sell them all off in a lump."

DON'S BOX THE EARS.

Boxing the ears is a too common form of punishment practised by irritable and ignorant persons, and it is almost always done in fits of sudden anger. I say done by irritable and ignorant persons,because it seems to me that no person with any information on the subject would allow his passion to get the better of his judgment in such a matter. The drum of the ear is of paper-like thinness; it may have been, in a number of cases, ruptured by a single slap on the side of the head, incurable deafness resulting. Says an eminent physician: "All strokes on the head of children, with an angry hand, are brutal and criminal." In the same connection he adds that "a generous, wise and humane parent should allow a night to intervene between the commission of the fault on the part of the child and any decided punishment. The veriest thief should be allowed time lest the law should be vindictive and wrathful. And shall a man or woman punish an unresisting child with angry inconsideration, with unreasoning wrath in the heart? It is monstrous."

WHY THE CROW IS BLACK.

The Indians of the extreme northwest had some very remarkable legends about the creation, in which the crow takes the leading part, bringing order out of choas. Perhaps the most curious was that which accounted for the raven coat of the crow. One night, while making a tour through his dominions, he stopped at the house of Cannook, a chief, and begged for lodging and a drink of water. Can-nook offered him a bed, but, on account of the scarcity of water, refused to give him anything to drink. When all the rest were asleep the crow got up to hunt for the water butt, but was heard by Can-nook's wife, who aroused her husband. He, thinking that the crow was about to escape, piled logs of gum wood upon the fire. The crow made desperate efforts to fly through the hole in the roof where the smoke was denser and denser, and when the crow finally regained the outer air he had black plumage. It was previously white.—Z. L. White, in The American Magazine.

TEA AND COFFEE IN CHILDHOOD.

A recent writer inveighs against the indiscriminate use of tea and coffee, especially in the young. He is of the opinion that against the practice of giving them to children we cannot speak too strongly. Childhood is the period when the nervous activity is at its greatest. The brain is very busy in receiving new impressions. Relax action, co-ordination of muscles and the special senses are all under a constant course of training. The nervous system is pushed to its utmost capacity, and long is the list of victims that follow its overstimulation. In these little people, nothing but harm can come from the use of such cerebral stimulants as tea and coffee.

KASKINE,

SCIENCE EMERGING FROM DARKNESS.

No Bad Effect. No Headache. No Nausea. No Ringing Ears. Cures Quickly. Pleasant, Pure

A SPECIFIC FOR MALARIA, RHEUMATISM, NERVOUS PROSTRATION, DYSPEPSIA AND ALL GERM DISEASES.

A POWERFUL TONIC THAT THE MOST DELICATE STOMACH WILL BEAR. THE MOST SCIENTIFIC AND SUCCESSFUL BLOOD PURIFIER.

I wish to sincerely thank you for the knowledge which you gave me of a remedy for nervous disorders and for neuralgia.

I have been afflicted all my life with attacks of neuralgia affecting principally my face and head, giving me at times excruciating pain, disturbing my sleep and appetite and general health, and often rendering me unfit for business. You will see that this affection has been of long standing. These attacks were not continuous, but of an intermittent character, coming and going, making their appearance often like a flash of lightning, without any previous warning, tormenting me for a few days, then passing off with a few lingering twinges, only to reappear later on. Besides being hereditary it was no doubt aggravated by nervous and mental irritation and exhaustion, helped on by a faulty dige-tion and bad nutrition. No doubt the prevailing cause of neuralgia is impoverished or poisoned blood. The seat and lines of attack are the nerves. A great city is not half so full of telegraph wires as the human body is of nerves, and neuralgia pains are the most exquisitely afflicting series of sensations from head to hand, and to the most distant portions of the body, a human being is capable of expe-lencing.

You may be very sure that I was eager to get rid of this infliction, and to this end have tried almost every form of nerve medication; oftentimes it is true with great temporary relief, but never, until I met with Kaskine, with what bore any resemblance to a cure.

When Kaskine (the new quinine) was brought to my notice by a friend it was at a time when one of my attacks was on me in full force. My friend told me that Kaskine (the new quinine) not only acted directly on the blood, disinfecting it of poison, but that it also acted on the digestive and assimilative functions, furnishing new and vivifying blood to the attenuated and throbbing nerves.

I without hesitation began to use it freely and steadily according to the directions, and found that it was not only an easy and a pleasant medicine to take, but also a very effective one. When I began taking Kaskine I was nearly wild with the spasms of pain in my head and face; they were almost unbearable. After a few doses had been taken I was greatly relieved of the paroxysms. I could sleep restfully and eat my food with relish, and I said to myself, "I think that this Kaskine will do the business for me."

I continued its use and was soon a different man; the pains were all gone, the nervous twitches and lightning-like twinges of darting agony had disappeared; my depressed spirits rose, and whatever the cause or however it may have wrought, I believe that Kaskine (the new quinine) has proved itself to be the true remedy for neuralgia.

Some months have now elapsed since my neuralgic attacks ceased and they have not returned.

I again thank you for making known to me this remedy, and if my "say so" is of any use to you or to others who may be suffering from this dreaded affliction, I am entirely willing that you should use my name in its behalf, as personally I believe in it.

J. J. BENSON,
131 North Pearl St., Albany, N. Y.

P. S.—I will very willingly reply to any letters of inquiry addressed to me at my residence, 131 North Pearl street, Albany, N. Y.

Other letters of a similar character from prominent individuals, which stamp Kaskine (the new quinine) as a remedy of undoubted merit, will be sent on application.

Satisfied.

At twenty three
I planned my scheme of life—I'd be
A merchant toward whose waiting pier
Globe circling ships should homeward steer
From Orient to Occident.
When millions had been won, I meant
To choose a wife of gentle race,
Cultured in mind and fair in face,
Build me a palace with each part
By art designed, enriched by art,
And, finally, to have one son,
Handsome and tall, but only one.
Thus I forecast my destiny
At twenty-three.

At forty-three.
How have I prospered! Let me see—
I find myself a simple clerk,
With light reward and heavy work,
Yet hoping for advance in rank,
I owe no man and have in bank
A trifle saved. I occupy
Some fourth floor rooms, which Kate and I Think charming. (Kate's my wife you know
A pretty seamstress long ago.)
We have six girls—perhaps too many—
But not for worlds we'd part with any.
So kind has fortune been to me
At forty-three!

—From Life.

A MOTHER'S STORY.

The young man you met at the gate, sir? Yes, that is my son—my boy Jack.

You noticed the scars on his face, and thought, maybe, that the spoilt features meant to be handsome?

Ah, sir! that was because you did not know. Why, those red marks make him more beautiful to me now than when a baby in my arms, with yellow curls and laughing eyes and a skin like a rose-leaf, the people hurrying in and out of the trains would turn to look and smile at him, and praise him to each other, speaking low, maybe, but not too low for a mother's quick, proud ears to hear.

For we lived in a little house close by the station, and when I heard the whistle of his father's train, I used to snatch the boy from his cradle or off the floor where he sat with his little playthings, and run down to the farther end of the long depot where the engine always halted, to get the smile and the loving word that my heart lived on all day.

Not the least bit afraid was the baby of all the whistling and clanging of bells, the groaning of the wheels and the puffing of the steam. He would laugh and spring so in my arms that I could scarcely hold him, till his father would reach down sometimes and lift him up into the engineer's cab and kiss him for one precious minute, and then toss him down to me again.

When he grew a little older he was never playing horse or soldiers like the other little fellows around; it was always a railroad train that he was driving. All the smoothest strips of my billets of kindling wood went to build tracks over the kitchen floor, hither and thither, crossing and recrossing each other.

"Don't move my switch, mother dear!" he used to cry out to me. "You will wreck my train for sure!"

So I had to go softly about my work with scarce a place, sometimes, to set my foot. And all the chairs in the house would be ranged for cars, the big rocker, with the tea bell tied to its back, for the engine; and there he would sit perched up by the hour, making believe attend to the valves and shouting to the fireman.

I shall never forget the first time his father took him to ride on the engine.

Jack had begged over and over to go, but his father always bade him wait until he was older. So I said:

"Don't tease father any more, Jack, dear;" and like a true little heart that he was, he had not said another word about it for a matter of six months or more.

But that day such a wistful look came into his face, and he pulled himself up tall and straight, and said, quite softly, his voice trembling a little, "Father, do you think I am grown enough now?"

Looking at him I saw tears in his pretty eyes. I think his father saw them, too, for he turned to me in a hurry and said:

"We meet the up train at Langton, Mary, and Bill Brown will bring the little chap back all right, I know. What do you say?"

What could I say but yes? At supper time he was back, but he could not eat. His eyes were like stars, and there was a hot, red spot on each cheek, so that I feared he might be ill. And I thought he never would be done talking, but now he had said scarce a word.

"What was it like, Jackie?" I asked him.

"Oh, mother!" he said, "it wasn't like anything!"

He sat for a moment thinking, then he said, "Unless it was like you read last Sunday."

"And what was that, Jack?" I inquired, for I had forgotten.

"Don't you know, mother? The wings of the wind!"

That was not his last ride on the engine by many times, for as he grew older, his father would take him often on Saturdays or other half holidays. He was perfectly trusty and obedient. I believe he would have had his right hand cut off sooner than have meddled with anything.

But he knew every valve and screw and gauge, and watched every turn of his father's hand, and learned the signals all along the line, so that my husband said to me more than once:

"I believe in my heart, Mary, that if I was to be struck dead on the engine, Jack could run her through without a break!"

He was in school, and learning fast, but out of hours he was always pouring over books and machinery and steam. Such an odd child as he was, with thoughts far beyond his years.

Sometimes, sitting here by myself, I go over in my mind the very strange things he used to say to me those days.

I remember that one evening he had been reading for a long time in some book that he had got out of the public library; but by-and-by he stopped and leaned his head on his hands, looking into the coals. Then, all at once:

"Mother," said he, "isn't it a wonderful thing that God could trust men with it?"

"With what, Jack?"

"With the steam—the power in it, I mean! It was a long time before He did. But when the right time came, then He told."

"Oh, mother!" said he, with eyes shining, "what must it have been to be James Watt, and to listen to such a secret as that?"

In a minute he spoke again:

"And it's never safe to forget to listen, because we don't know when He might speak, or what there might be to hear!"

I could not answer him from a choking in my throat, but I had laid down my knitting, and I put my arm around him and he looked up into my face with something in his eyes that I never forgot.

We were getting on well then. The little house and garden were almost paid for, and we thought that nowhere in the world were happier people than we, or a brighter, cosier home. My husband and I were always talking of this, and what to be done for Jack as soon as the last payment was made. But before the money was due my husband came home very sick one day.

"Do not be frightened, Mary," he said, I think I shall be better to-morrow."

But he only grew worse next day. It was a lung fever that he had, and for many days we thought he must die. Yet he rallied after a time—though he kept his hacking cough—and sat up and moved about the house, and at last felt himself strong enough to take his place again.

But that was too much, for at the end of the first week he came home and fell fainting on the threshold.

"It's of no use, Mary," he said, after he came to himself. "I can't run the engine, and if I could it isn't right for people's lives to be trusted to such weak hands as mine!"

He never did any regular work after that, although he survived for a year.

Consumption is a terrible disease, sir. To see one that you would give your heart's blood to save, slipping away before your eyes, and you helpless to hold him back by so much as a hair's breadth from the black gulf of death! Ah, sir! I trust you have never learned how hard it was!

Young as he was, Jack was my stay and comfort through that dark time. My poor husband had matters in his mind that he longed to speak to me about, but I always put him off, for I could not listen to anything like his going away from us.

But at last, the very day before the end came, as I sat by his bed, holding his hand in mine, he said very gently, but firmly:

"Mary, wife, I think you must let me speak to you to-day."

I fell to crying as if my heart would break, and he drew a pitiful sigh that went like a sword through my breast; yet I could not stop the sobs. Then Jack rose up from the little stool where he sat so quietly that I had almost forgotton that he was there, and came and touched me.

"Mother! dear mother!" he said; and as I looked I saw his face was perfectly white, but there were no tears in his eyes.

"Mother!" he said again, "please go away for a little while. I can hear what father wants to say."

You will think me cowardly, sir, but I did as the child bade me. I left the door ajar, and I could hear my husband's weak voice, though I could not understand the words, and then my brave boy's answers, clear and low, not a break or tremble in the sweet voice. And at last Jack said:

"Is that all, dear father?" and "Yes, I will be sure to remember it—every word!"

The he came out and kissed me with a smile, and went through the outer door.

But an hour afterwards when I went out to the well, I heard a little choking sound, and found him lying on his face in the long grass under the apple tree, sobbing his very heart away. So I turned about and went into the house as softly as I could, and never let him know.

After it was all over with, and we had time to look about us, we found some debts left and very little money. It was a bad thing for me, that had for so long a strong, loving arm between me and every care, to think and plan how to make both ends meet, when I could not even start evenly at the beginning. But Jack came to my help again.

"Father said that you were never to work hard, dear mother, because you were not strong, but that I must take care of you in some way. He thought you could let two or three rooms to lodgers, may be, and that the best thing for me just now would be to get a train-boy's place. He said the men on our road would be sure to give me a chance for his sake."

I do not know that I had smiled before since his father died, but when I heard him say 'our road,' in that little proud tone he had, I caught him to my heart, and we laughed and cried together.

"And I spoke to Mr. Withers about it only yesterday," he went on, "and he said Tom Gray is going to leave, and I can have his chance and begin next week, if I like. What do you say, dear mother?"

"Oh, Jack!" I said, "how can I get through the long, lonesome days without you? And if anything should happen to you I should die!"

"Don't mother," he said gently, for the tears were in his eyes again. But I would not heed him.

"And you to give up your school!" I cried, "and all our plans for you to come to naught!"

"Father thought of that, too," he answered, "but he said the whole world belonged to the man that was faithful and true; and I promised him. You can trust me, mother!"

Trust him? Ah yes! he had struck the right chord at last, and I lifted my head and dried my tears. Whatever unseen dangers I might fear for my boy would be of the body, not of the soul. 'Faithful and true!' I thanked God and took courage.

It is wonderful how he succeeded with the books and papers and other thing that he sold. There was something in him that made him a favorite with everybody. I have been told by more than one that the sight of his frank, handsome face was like sunshine, and that people bought of him whether they wanted anything or not.

Well, the years went by, and he grew up—working his way from one position to another on the road—trusted everywhere. He was my own boy still, though he was so tall and strong, with his bright curls turned chestnut brown, and a silken fringe shading the lips that kept their old loving kisses for me alone.

It was not long before he had the place of engineer, which he had so much wanted. He had a day off, and was doing some little things for me about the house and garden, when one of the depot hands came up the path calling for him.

"Mr. Harding wants you instantly, Jack," cried the man. "The Jersey express should have left the depot five minutes ago, and the engineer has fallen down in a fit. Curtis and Fitch are both off on leave, and Mr. Harding says there's nobody left but you that he'll trust with the train."

"I!" cried Jack in a maze. "The Jersey express! And I never drove anything but a freight train!"

"Well," cried the man, impatiently, "don't stop to argue! Orders are orders, and here is a minute and a half gone already."

Jack seemed to come to himself at that. He darted one smile at me and was off like a shot, drawing on his coat as he ran. In less time than I take in telling it, I heard the signal of the outgoing train, and knew that my boy was trusted with a task that was used to be given only to the most intelligent and careful men in the service.

They brought him back to me that night, sir, and laid him on his father's bed; and by piece-meal, and then afterward, I learned what had happened that day.

The train starting out so late, they were forced to make up time somewhere on the line. So, on that long straight stretch of track through the valley, that were making sixty miles an hour. The train fairly flew. Jack could feel the air strike his face like a sharp wind, though it was a balmy spring day.

Then an awful thing happened! The great connecting rod of the driving wheel on the right of the engine broke. Jack seemed to live his whole life over in that one terrible instant when he saw the end of the rod swing upward. It struck the cab under him and dashed it into a thousand pieces, and he knew no more till a horrible agony awoke him where he had fallen senseless on the engine.

Burned and almost blind, with the flesh scalded and torn from his hands, he remembered his engine, with its open throttle, leaping on to certain destruction. He seemed to see the passengers inside the long train, as so many times in the old days when he called the morning papers through the cars.

He knew how they looked and what they were doing, smoking, talking of the elections, the price of grain, or how stocks went up last week; women, with crowing, dimpled babies in their arms; little children crowding to the windows, vainly trying to count the whizzing telegraph poles; young, happy people going on wedding journeys, maybe, and others coming home who have been very long away.

He remembered that, as he hurried to his place at the front, that day, a little girl with a cloud of golden hair had leaned from a car window to give one more good bye kiss to her father on the platform. "Take good care of mamma, darling," he had heard the gentleman say.

The fireman—no coward, either, was Tim Harbook, with wife and babies at home—let himself down from the tender and escaped. So might my Jack have done. But he crept along the side of the leaping engine, carefully and painfully he swung himself into his place, and with every motion of his hands an untold agony, he reversed his engine and put on the air brake.

Then the train stopped, snatched back from the pit's mouth, and they took my boy from his post—'faithful and true!'

It was a long time before Jack's burns were healed. The road people came often to see him—no men could have been kinder—and every week his wages came in full.

But one evening, after he had begun to get out a little, one of his mates came in and wanted Jack to go to a meeting with him.

"What sort of a meeting?" said Jack.

"Oh, I can't say exactly—something interesting, they told me, and everybody invited."

He stole a queer look at me, and I knew he wanted me to help him. So, as I really thought it might do Jack good, I said:

"Yes, Jack, go along with Tom."

"But I'm not presentable with this face."

"Pshaw, man! It's evening, and nobody will notice. Leastways, they need not."

With a little more coaxing, Jack set off with him. I had hardly heard the gate click, when the door opened again, and Jennie Brown came in like a sprite.

"Quick! quick! Mrs. Burton! Put on your bonnet!" she whispered.

"Where? What do you mean?" I said, for I was frightened.

"To the meeting. Hurry, or we shall be too late!"

She was tying my bonnet strings under my chin as she spoke; and she had the house door locked and me down the garden path and out of the back gate fairly without my will. She hurried me across the square, and then pushed me through the crowd at the hall entrance.

I was out of breath with nervousness and fast walking, so we sat down in a back seat. The room was full. There was a great many ladies present, and on the platform sat the superintendent and several of the directors of the road. Everybody seemed to be whispering and smiling and looking lackward toward the door, and I looked too, alough I did not know why.

Then the door opened and Jack came in with Tom. I heard somebody on the outer side of me whisper: 'That's he?' and another, and a rustle crept through the place, and then, all at once, such a cheer went up as, I can truly say, I never hear in all my life before—no, not even when the troops came home from war. The people stood up and the ladies waved their handkerchiefs.

The superintendent tried to speak, and rapped on his little table, but all in vain, until the crowd had their three times three.

And through it all I watched my boy. He looked around him, dazed at first by all the tumult, and trying to see what it meant. Wherever he might turn his eyes he met a hundred others smiling on him, and a score of hands stretched out to him as he passed—and all at once he knew.

Oh, sir, I cannot tell you about it. How they carried him up to the front, though not on the platform—there he would not go—how they found me out and made me sit beside him; how there were speeches and hand shakings and laughing and crying.

And at last the superintendent said that there was a little child there, the granddaughter of the president of the road, who had been with her mother on the train that day, and that she had been selected by many grateful friends to present a little token to to the man whose faithful courage had saved so many lives.

Then a beautiful lady, all in soft rustling silk, came up the aisle, leading the loveliest child I ever saw, with a great glory of golden hair around her head, like the picture of an angel. I felt Jack start, for it was the very child whose face had come to him in that awful moment on the flying engine.

The little thing let go her mother's hand as she came near, looking up with shy blue eyes, and in her small fingers was a purse of gold. You could see the great coins shining through the silk netting. She held it up to him, and all the room was as still as death. I head one great sob rise in my boy's throat, and then he lifted the child in his arms, and stood up holding her, straight and tall.

But he did not take the purse. "No darling," he said, in a low, tender voice, so clear that everybody heard. Then he kissed her, and lifted one long curl from her neck.

"This is the only gold I want," he said, and looked at the child's mother with a question in his eyes.

"The lady nodded, and my boy took out a pair of scissors from his vest pocket and cut the curl off gently and put it carefully away.

And, sir, if they cheered before what was it now! The arched ceiling rang, the gas flared and flickered, and the very pendants on the chandeliers dashed together.

But he would not take the money—then nor afterward.

"It is not ours. What can we do with it? We cannot throw it away," said the superintendent.

"I'll tell you, then, sir," said Jack, at last; "brakeman Jim Flaherty was killed last week. He left a sick wife and six children. Give the money to them."

And so they did.

Now you know, sir, what the scars on my boy's face mean to me. I read in the red marks, 'Faithful and true!' and I would not have them changed for the coat of arms of any king on any throne.—Boston Home Journal.

TO-MORROW'S ECLIPSE.

The total eclipse of the sun on August 13 will last three and a half minutes, and if the present arrangements are carried out, the scientific world will know more about solar phenomena than it does now. The shadow of the moon first strikes the earth at Berlin, and passing to the east it will run across Russia and Siberia to the sea of Japan and Japan itself. Fortunately for scientific observers the Russian overland telegraph line follows the eclipse over most of its course. It will take about two hours for the shadow to pass from Russia to Japan, and Prof. Todd of Amherst college, who has charge of the American eclipse expedition to Japan, sent out by the national academy of sciences, has suggested that the telegraph can be utilized during these two hours. If a discovery is made by astronomers in Russia, the news can be telegraphed east, and verifications can be made. Russian scientists are organizing expeditions, the government co-operating with them. Several eminent English astronomers are already at Moscow preparing for the event, and telescopes are being forwarded from Germany, Italy, France and other countries, into Russian territory.

CULINARY MYSTERIES.

How true is it that few of us know what we are really eating. The manner in which a cultured appetite can be deceived with a most plebeian morsel is thus related:

"A bet was recently made by two French gourmands, one of which asserted that he could detect the component parts of any dish set before him, the other betting at great odds that he would not be able to tell the material wherewith his cook would prepare a 'savory dish' for them. The bet was taken, the one confident in his quick natural sense, the other in the skill of his cook. The cook—a Frenchman—of course exerted all his talents and surpassed all praise. The dish was placed before the knowing epicure. He tastes, smacks his lips, tastes again, smells it—tastes again. Alas! it is redolent of all rich odors; such gravy, such solids—so soft, so tender! What can it be? A wondrous prepared tripe? No! Calf's head in a new shape? No, no, no! a thousand noes. Our epicure gives up. 'It is old white kid gloves!' is the cool explanation when the bet is resigned as lost."—Boston Traveller.

Smith, who is afflicted with a sore throat, asked his friend Brown to examine it. Brown (peering down Smith's throat)—"On which side is the sore spot?" Smith (speaking with difficulty)—"On the left side." Brown—"Coming up or going down?"

Her Preference.

He was handsome and tall,
The envy of all
The men as he walked by her side,
While slowly the light
Of day changed to night,
And merrily rippled the tide.

She, pretty and sweet,
Entrancing and neat,
Demurely beside him was walking,
While softly the air
Caressed her fair hair
And listened the while to their talking.

"You'll please pardon me"—
He glanced playfully—
"If really my question should tire.
Do you care for men tall,
Or of those who are small—
What kind of men do you admire.

Her lashes quick fell
And veiled her eyes well,
"No pardon for such a request;
I like mankind all,
Both little and tall
But then I like Hymen the best."

SHE WASN'T MAD.

Lovely Miss Lucinda Tyler went to Farmer Hayseed's for the summer. The objec of her visit was to secure rest and qui t She decided to abstain from all social ex citement, and at first she succeeded. After awhile, however, her resolutions gradually gave away, and she found herself indulging in a pleasant little flirtation with Farmer Hayseed's son John.

John was good looking and accommodating, and he did not object in the least to the effects of the city girl's fascinations. In fact, he rather seemed to like it, and when he got hold of her hand one evening—accidentally of course—and gave it a good squeeze, the affair developed into something serious.

Of couse Miss Tyler's affections were not permanently disabled, but she sympathized with the steady devotion of her admirer and encouraged him, because she, like all women, fancied that sort of thing. Even Eve left poor old Adam for an hour or two to flirt with that very insinuating gentleman known as Beelzebub.

John's courtship was placid and unremitting. Everything he could do for Miss Tyler was done. It was therefore with regret that he saw the end of August approaching, for then she was to leave. He took her out riding. They entered a long, well-shaded, romantic looking road, and almost before Miss Tyler knew anything John exclaimed with more or less emotion:

"I love you."

"This is very sudden," she replied.

"I hope you ain't mad about."

"No; I don't know"—and as she faltered his arm encircled her waist.

There was silence for a minute or two, and then pity got the better of the dear girl's feelings, and she said softly:

"John, I should think you would get tired of the monotony of your life here.

"Yes; it is kind o' tiresome sometimes."

"Tell me what you do?"

"You won't get mad about it!"

"Certainly not."

"Well, you know, we run this farm in summer so's to make enough to keep the family the rest of the year. Mam tends to the cooking, pap tends to the work outdoors, and they make me do all the love-making business."

"The lovemaking business?"

"Yes; that's what it amounts to. Flirt with the boarders, you know, and make 'em believe that they've made a mash. First it was tough work—kind o' bashful you know—and the first summer I only popped to two girls. The second summer I got up to six. Last season I reached a dozen, and this year—but say, you ain't mad about it, are you?"

"No, dear John," and her head nestled fondly on his shoulders. "What a pretty hat you have. Let me hold it for you, and, dear John, how fine and soft your hair is."

And she ran her fingers gently through his chestnut locks. Presently she put both her hands up there, and after getting a good tight hold, she pulled with all the gathered strength of a six weeks' vacation. John tried to yell, but he couldn't— his breath forsook him. He tried to speak, but it was no go.

The big tears that rolled down his cheeks were the only manifestations of his misery, but they were enough to touch a heart of stone. In about a minute—to John it seemed a century—the lovely Miss Tyler released her hold and gathered several dozen strands of chestnut hair into a knot.

"No, dear John," she said in her sweetest way, "I ain't mad. I only wanted a tuft of your lovely hair for a summer souvenir. And now dear John suppose we return."

Dear John obeyed without a murmur. They reached home, and that night at a family circle John, issued his ultimatum.

"Dad," said he, "if there's any more courtin' business to be done around here you've got to do it, I've quit for good."

WEATHER PROVERBS FOR AUGUST.

When the dew is heavy in August the weather generally remains fair.

When in the beginning of August thunder storms are passing they will generally last to the end of the month.

When in August the sun shines warm and moon and stars are bright, it is good for grapes, because they then ripen well.

Dry August, arid, warm,
Doth harvest no harm.

When it rains in August it rains honey and wine.

If the first week in August is unusually warm the winter will be white and long.

When the months of July, August and September are unusually hot January will be the coldest month.

As August, so the next February.

As Bartholomew's day, (24th), so the whole autumn.

If the 24th of August be fair and clear,
Then hope for a prosperous autumn that year.

Thunder storms after Bartholomew's day are mostly violent.

Yes, my child, yes; dun is the future tense of due.—Washington Post.

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, AUGUST 12, 1887.

TEXAS has defeated the proposed prohibitory amendment to the constitution by a majority of 125,000 or more,—about what might have been expected in a Democratic state.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND is receiving invitations to visit about every place there is in the West and South, on his approaching trip. None of them want to get left, but most of them surely will.

SOME of the Mormons want to go to Canada. The desire should be encouraged. That country already has a choice and growing collection of congenial spirits from this side of the border, and this sort of emigration ought to be encouraged.

DISMAL reports are sent out of a terrible drouth in Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin. Crops are ruined, stock suffering, and sickness prevailing. The earth is parched, and prairie fires have swept thousands of acres and constantly threaten further ravages.

ELEVEN Chicago boodlers have been found guilty, and seven of them sentenced to two years in prison, the others being let off with $1000 fines. The way of the boodler is becoming as hard as that of other transgressors, except as an accomodating sheriff occasionally lets one escape.

MRS. CLEVELAND walked to church last Sunday morning at Marion, like any other sensible woman, but returned too late from an afternoon drive to attend service in the evening as had been planned, thereby disappointing a large audience, many of whom had gone miles to see her. From which it would appear that not everybody goes to church solely to commune with the Lord and learn of Him.

CULTURED Roston must be highly edified by the spectacle of the mayor of the city honoring with his presence the sparring exhibition Monday evening, when John L. Sullivan, the champion "slugger," was presented with a jeweled belt by his admirers. Times change, and men with them, but we venture to say that not another mayor in the commonwealth would have lowered his dignity by attending such an exhibition.

THE Boston Journal suggests that the Republican platform ought to have a plank in favor of granting no town divisions until the voters in the town have approved the division by a majority vote. This is good in theory, and might be all right for Beverly, but all town divisions are not asked for on the same grounds, and a division might be justified under some circumstances where a majority of the voters could never be induced to vote for it.

THE new sloop Volunteer won the race of the New York yacht squadron, from Vineyard Haven to Marblehead, Tuesday, crossing the line several miles ahead of the Mayflower, the second yacht. The Volunteer is showing her heels so beautifully to the Mayflower, Puritan and other racers, that the Scotch Thistle may not find it as easy a matter to walk off with the America's cup as has been talked. The trial races to decide what yacht shall defend the cup will come off Sept. 13, 15 and 17, and present indications are that the Volunteer will easily win the honor.

OUR government is trying a little tit for tat business by seizing Canadian fishing vessels in the Behring Sea. This is very well as far as it goes, but with Canadian cruisers and British men-of-war harassing American fishermen at every opportunity the question is why the government does not apply the retaliation authorized by Congress last winter, and shut out Canadian vessels from our ports. It begins to look very much as though we "dassn't" do it, which is not a pleasant reflection for a wide-awake American. A little more Yankee grit at headquarters would be refreshing.

WHATEVER can be the matter with the Springfield Republican? A $150,000 appropriation for a new government building in Springfield, secured only by the herculean efforts of Congressman Rockwell, does not prevent the Republican talking after this fashion:

> The selection of Congressmen Rockwell for president of the Republican state convention gives prominence to one of the most aspiring politicians in the state, one whose career is watched with interest in various quarters. It appeared long ago that Mr. Rockwell had entered public life to stay, if possible. The assiduity with which he has devoted himself to mastering the business methods of politics, little hampered by inconvenient principles, has been standing proof of this fact. He is an amiable and clever man, not lacking in ability, and has displayed remarkable skill in maintaining his hold upon the district since he was chosen to fill out Gov. Robinson's term. But the politician's arts, which he knows and practises so well, do not, after all of themselves, afford a safe basis for a long public career. After Mr. Dawes and Gov. Robinson had been in Congress for a few years and established the value of their services to the state and the country, there was little disposition to supplant them, either in Hampden or Berkshire county. This is not likely to be true of Mr. Rockwell, and whenever Hampden county is able to present a strong candidate with a solid support, he will undoubtedly be obliged to surrender his seat. Leading Republicans of this section are already beginning to think of ex-Senator James R. Dunbar of Westfield as such a candidate. The district and the country would gain immensely by a change like this.

The worst of it is, this is dreadfully true.

A HORRIBLE railroad accident, one of the worst ever recorded, occurred on the Toledo, Peoria & Western Railroad late Wednesday night, near Chatsworth, Ill. An excursion train consisting of two engines, three baggage cars, six day coaches and six sleepers, and carrying 960 excursionists bound for Niagara Falls, was running nearly a mile a miute when it struck a small trestle bridge which was on fire. The first engine crossed safely, but then the bridge fell, piling up the rest of the train in a terrible wreck. The bridge crossed a dry run about 10 feet deep and 15 feet wide. The baggage cars were piled one upon another, the three following coaches were telescoped into the space of one, and the next three cars were all broken and twisted. Only the sleepers escaped. With nothing but their hands and pieces of wreck to work with, the uninjured passengers worked like heroes throwing dirt on the flames, to save the poor victims who were pinned in the wreck from a terrible death by burning, and after four hours' desperate labor they succeeded in putting out the fire. But the loss of life was fearful, 118 bodies having been taken from the wreck at last accounts, while two or three times that number were injured.

The Flynt Building & Construction Company have the contract to build a three-story brick mill at Port Chester, N. Y., for Pond, West and Simons, the contract price being $40,000.

The Boston and Albany road will run an excursion from Barre Plains, Gilbertville, Ware and Thorndike to Boston, the 24th, and the 27th excursions will be run to Boston from all points between Willimantic and Amherst.

Saturday night brought a decided change in the temperature, the mercury falling rapidly. Fires were almost necessary, and in some sections slight frosts were reported. The weather has continued comfortably cool all through the week.

The 300 tickets allowed this station for the excursion to Boston to-day were all sold before nine o'clock Wednesday evening, and quite a number were procured from other stations, where they were not all sold. Several people were unable to secure tickets at all.

In another column the Palmer water company advertises for sealed bids for the privilege of cutting ice from its reservoirs for a term of five years, the lease to include land for an ice house and right of way to same. A good chance for some one to secure a good quality of ice.

The attention of the town fathers is called to a portion of the old Greenwich turnpike, so called, in the northern part of the town, where the Central Massachusetts workmen have excavated the highway about a rod wide and four feet deep, for a distance of some fifty rods, making it dangerous for teams.

The New London Northern road announces one of its popular excursions to Lake Pleasant to-morrow, trains leaving Palmer at 8.10 a. m., 2.05 and 5.35 p. m. There will be grand concerts at the Lake, and fireworks in the evening, the round-trip fare being only 95 cents. A special train will leave the lake on the return trip at 10.30 p. m.

The Massachusetts Fish and Game Association has published a neat little pamphlet giving the game laws, and the season when fish and game are not to be taken, with the penalty in each case. They are for free distribution, and copies can be obtained by addressing Henry J. Thayer, secretary of the association, 246 Washington street, Boston.

There is one newsboy on the Boston & Albany road who knows all he wants to about handcuffs. Yesterday morning he didn't, and seeing a pair hanging in Station Agent Rice's office when no one was near examined them. He got one on his wrist and in trying to see how it worked locked it. The key had been lost some time before, so the lad took the 10.32 train to Springfield in search of a locksmith.

House owners will do well to be careful how they leave windows open or unfastened these warm nights, as the burglars are around. The night of the Thorndike post office robbery E. C. Sexton's house in this village was entered, and last Monday night the house of Stillman Ellis was entered. One of the inmates heard a noise and opened a blind in the second story, which evidently scared away the thieves. The house of J. H. Smith was approached, but the dog barked so furiously that nothing further was attempted.

Manager Heery of the Palmer Electric Company says that the New York parties with whom he contracted to put in the plant and string the wires, promised to have it all complete by September 1st, but have been prevented by unavoidable delays. A large force of men will soon be put to work, however, and the lights should be running by September 15, or October 1 at the latest. The plant will be located at North Monson, and the Westinghouse system of lights used. Mr. Heary is already promised about 300 incandescent lights, and thinks it can be made 600 as soon as the first ones are in working order.

RAILROAD ACCIDENT.

Conductor Sander's train on the New London road, which leaves Palmer at 8.20 a. m., met with an accident at Stafford Springs Monday morning. As the train rounded a sharp curve Engineer Moulton discovered the rear of the express freight train on the track only about 100 feet away. He at once reversed his engine and applied the brakes, then he and Fireman Webster jumped just as the two trains came together. The front end of the engine was badly smashed, and has been sent to the shop for repairs. The bunters on the baggage and several freight cars were broken, and the passengers somewhat shaken up, but no one was hurt. A failure on the part of the freight brakeman to signal following trains was the cause of the accident.

A FATAL ACCIDENT.

One of the most terrible accidents ever known in town happened in the kitchen of the Nassowanno House about 4.30 yesterday afternoon. The cook, Mrs. May Allen, was alone in the room building a fire, and as it did not burn quite fast enough to suit her, she took up a pail of hot grease from the top of the stove and poured some upon the wood. Like a flash the fire ran up the stream of grease into the pail, which Mrs. Allen dropped, spilling some of the contents upon her clothes, which instantly caught fire, and in a moment she was in a blaze from head to foot. She made no outcry, and tried to put out the fire with her hands, but failing to do so ran to the wash room, where she was seen by the clerk, who at once came to her aid and the fire was soon put out, or rather died out, for when they were finally extinguished the woman's entire clothing was burned from her body, there being literally nothing left but a small portion of her corset. She walked up stairs with slight assistance, and Dr. Wilkins was summoned. Although she inhaled none of the flame, nothing could be done for her, there being scarcely a spot on her body which was not burned and blistered, while on her arms and hands the flesh and nails dropped off at the touch, and she passed away about 9.30 o'clock last evening. Mrs. Allen is a sister of Mrs. W. P. Delehanty, and came to Palmer about two months ago.

THE PALMER'S DONE UP 15 TO 5.

BY THE THORNDIKES AND THE UMPIRE. OTHER BASE BALL MATTERS.

The Palmers received their first defeat at the hands of the Thorndikes, on the home grounds last Saturday, the great difference in the scores being materially assisted by the umpire, who made some of the rankest decisions ever heard of, and every time in favor of the Thorndikes. At first the Thorndikes refused to play, on account of two new men the Palmers had engaged in place of the two who had lately left, and got into the team to go home, but finally consented to go on with the game, the umpire remarking: "We'll beat them now, anyhow." As long as the Thorndikes could have done it without his assistance, the Palmers naturally think they should have been placed on an equal footing in the matter of decisions. The Palmers were weakened by the loss of their catcher, Sugrue, Rooney not being accustomed to the new man, while he and Sugrue had understood each other perfectly. His delivery was at once "caught on" to, and after three innings Bruton was put in, and proved harder to hit. The new catcher, Ash, did well until he opened an old split in his hand and gave way to Miller, who had hard work in holding Bruton. The Thorndikes played an almost faultless game, and worked well together. They have an excellent battery, the work of their catcher being the best ever seen on the grounds, taken all together, and the neighboring clubs will have hard work to beat them. A large crowd was in attendance from Thorndike, and an unusually large amount of money was bet on the game, but owing to the kick, all bets were declared off by the umpire on the commencement of the game. To-morrow afternoon the Palmers play the Monsons on the home grounds, and Monson people are giving odds of two to one on their team.

Wednesday afternoon a game between clerks from the north and south sides of Walnut street drew out a large attendance besides the 160 boys and girls who came down from the state primary school. The clubs were made up as follows: North end—Mason, c; Lacey, p; Ober, 1b; Miller, 2b; Caryl, 3b; Cross, ss; Holden, cf; Dwyer, rf; Sistare, lf. South end—Hall, c; Manning, p; Weeks, rf; Thompson, 1b; Foley, 2b; Ellis, 3b; Allen, ss; Gardner, lf; Erskine, cf. The south enders started off with a good lead, and it looked as though it was to be a one-sided game up to the fifth inning, when the north end seemed to hit the pitcher better, and assisted by some wild throws made eight runs besides shutting out the south ends. In the sixth inning the south ends got in two runs, and the north ends six, making the score 19 to 18 in favor of the south ends. The seventh inning was the most interesting. The south side made three runs, and the north end went in and rolled up five, which gave them the winning run. They then stopped the game with two men out, the agreement being to play seven innings, or more if they had time; but the north end was in a good deal of a hurry about this time. There were many amusing points about the game, one being the score made by "Bill" Mason on a three-base hit on account of wild throws and fumbles. Two broken bats testify that all the spiteful batters do not play with the regular nine. Other features were the umpiring by the catcher of the north enders during the first three innings, and the frantic cries of the south end's right fielder for water while running bases. The score was 23 to 22 in favor of the north ends, and the losing side paid for a supper for all hands, which was served at the Nassowanno House in the evening in Landlord Belcher's best style.

A game which no doubt be amusing is talked of to take place next Tuesday between two nines to be picked up among men of the village who are about 40 years of age. One of the specifications is that no player shall know anything about the game, the umpire also to be ignorant regarding the rules.

F. Fountain, Providence, R. I. He paid for his room, saying he shouldn't stop over Sunday, but he hung around all the morning and at 1 o'clock he was called to dinner, but waited until Mr. Aldrich had gone away, when he went into the dining room and made things lively for the table girl and cook. As he didn't show up at night Mr. Aldrich concluded that he had been "hung up," and started in search of his man on the 6.30 train Monday morning. At West Brookfield Fountain took the train and as soon as he saw Mr. Aldrich he said something about owing him a dollar and handed out a bill to pay up. Mr. Aldrich thought he wasn't taking early morning rides simply for his health and said three dollars would straighten things out. The fellow kicked, but when he saw a telegram handed to the conductor to be given to the Worcester police he settled.

The long-talked of ball game between the Thorndikes and Palmers took place at Palmer last Saturday, and resulted in the victory of the Thorndikes by a score of 15 to 5. Although the weak point of the Thorndikes was their batting, Rooney was forced to retire in the fourth inning, and was succeeded by Bruton, who also suffered at the hands of the Thorndikes. The Palmers were unable to hit Sullivan, who pitched an excellent game, and was almost perfectly supported by Greene, who also caught some very difficult foul flys. The Thorndikes outplayed the Palmers at every point, and Brosnan was loudly cheered for his fine work in the left field. The Thorndikes played a perfect game with the exception of a few errors by the infielders. The Ludlows will play here Saturday afternoon, and are expected to bring their new catcher from Springfield. It is feared that Greene will be unable to play to-morrow, as he was severely injured by a ball pitched by Bruton in the Palmer game.

About 8 o'clock Tuesday evening the inhabitants were startled by hearing an alarm of fire, and within a very few minutes nearly one-third of the population of the village were at the scene of the fire, which was Metcalf's shed at his wood yard on West street. The fire burned furiously at first, but water was thrown on it, and as there was nothing more to burn, it was all over in a very few minutes.

The annual picnic of the Pierce family was held on Wednesday at Sturtevant's grove, Hardwick pond. It was the largest gathering they have ever had, there being present about 65, coming from New Braintree, Natick, West Brookfield, Hardwick, Ware, and Bridgport, Conn., four generations being present. The day was spent in boating, swinging, singing, etc., the principle feature of the day being the dinner, which was appreciated by all.

At the district court last Friday there were more charges made than have ever before been made at one time. There were six or eight up for drunkenness, most of them being parties from other towns. Arthur Kane for assault and battery was fined $10. Arthur R. Kane was convicted of keeping a liquor nuisance, fined $100 and given three months in the house of correction; keeping with intent to sell $50 and costs, and fined $50 each for two liquor sales. All of these were appealed to the superior court, the December term.

THE most singular duel on record is reported from Tampico, Mex., where two men are said to have shut themselves up in a dark room with 100 tarantulas of the most poisonous kind, agreeing not to leave the room until they were all killed. When the door was opened the two men were found dead on the floor, sourrounded by the terrible spiders, some dead and some alive. Dueling would speedily die out if these weapons were used.

A CARD.—We desire hereby to express our heartfelt thanks, to all our friends, in our recent affliction in the death of our daughter Minnie, and we would especially thank her associates and friends for the beautiful flowers.

JOTTINGS FROM THE HUB.

From our Special Correspondent.

BOSTON, Aug. 10th, 1887.

An indication of one of the most important facts of our times—not the fact itself—is to be seen this week in Boston. This is the semi-annual meeting of the National Electric Light Association. It began yesterday at Parker's and will close tomorrow. A strange transformation has come over the second story of the hotel, in those parlors which are usually accessible for dining clubs and social reunions. Placards of many sorts are posted on the doors and walls, informing the visitor that in this or that parlor is to be found the display of such and such an electric motor or the office of a certain electrical publication. A tour of the rooms is deeply interesting. More people crowd to see the Baxter motor than any other. The largest parlor is all fitted up with machinery run by electricity. In itself the motor is a compact machine whose essential shape is like the upper half of a letter O with the top of the circle cut off. Each of the sides is a great magnet, and between the arms which approach each other is a cylinder some three or four inches in diameter. Currents of electricity are sent through the magnets, causing the cylinder to revolve and the circular motion thus obtained is transferred by belts to machinery, just as it would be in case of steam. The electricity is obtained from the Brush light station in the city, and is brought to the Parker house by wires. But little space is occupied by a motor, and they vary in size according to their power. A four-horse-power motor occupies a space perhaps 30 by 20 inches and stands 15 inches high. In this parlor in question were over half a dozen motors, all placed on stout wooden tables, so as to bring them to a convenient height for the attendant. A slight movement of a switch opens or closes the current and starts or stops the motor. The machines are made of varying power, from one-fiftieth of one horse-power up to 25 horse-power. One of the attendants informed me that for additional power it is better to put in more motors than to increase the size of the particular machine.

No limit can yet be imagined to the possible uses of electricity for motive purposes. In a large city, where there are many users, it is applicable to every kind of machine which is run by belts to which steam power is at present applied. Of course its availability depends upon its cost compared with steam. For so small a supply of one horse-power the Baxter people charge $10 a month. But when they get up to a great station of 5000 horse-power, where they burn $85,000 worth of coal in a year and have other expenses and salaries in a corresponding scale, they figure that they could let out their power for an average of $1.62 per horse-power per month, and then leave enough for the company to pay 21 per cent dividends. Other motors, the Cleveland and Edgerton, for instance, are also on exhibition, each of which has its peculiar merits in its owner's eyes and its irremediable defects in the eyes of its rivals.

One singular agent I noticed there,—a man to advocate the non-magnetic watch. All watches, so his discouraging message ran, which are made (as most of them are) with steel hair spring or balance wheel, are liable to be put permanently out of order by being worn in the presence of electric machinery, or even upon street cars which are propelled by electric motors. He can give any number of awful examples of prominent officials who found, after visiting electric machinery in motion, that their valuable $300 chronometers were permanently thrown out of adjustment,—practically ruined. Hence comes the necessity of buying the non-magnetic watch with its hair spring and balance wheel of a peculiar composition which cannot be affected by electricity. Probably in a year or two all people who live in the country will be buying at old junk prices, valuable time-pieces which are still uninjured, but have been discarded for the necessary non-magnetic watch.

Unless I am mistaken, the ministers will get a fresh grip on thoughtless young men through the introduction of electrical machinery which is certainly destined to come in the near future. Where the apparatus is all right, it is safe, but the fatalities from the electric light wires thus far hint at the risks of the future. Speaking with one of the managers on this point, he admitted to me the risk from electrical machinery. Now, if a man feels all ready for instantaneous translation to the other world without the slightest warning—not even the shortest instants'—of impending death, it won't make him nervous to work for an electrical company. But if he is sure he is not ready to go, it must sober him far more than any possibility of death by steam, railroad accidents, powder mill explosions, or any other form of physical annihilation while at one's ordinary occupation. One of the documents here tell of the advantages of electricity in the execution of criminals, for the death would be so sudden as to be absolutely too quick for the man to perceive a sensation. Of course electricity would kill an honest man just as quickly. One cannot see such an exhibition as this without acknowledging that, after all, the wonders of machinery and invention have but just begun. It makes the future larger and more mysterious than ever.

On Monday evening came the presentation of the famous diamond belt to John L. Sullivan. One part of Boston is proud and exultant. A more sensitive part is humiliated and ashamed at the spectacle. It will a public boxing exhibition in the Boston theater, for whose occurrence against the city ordinance a unanimous vote by the aldermen and common council was needed and secured. Mayor O'Brien and several aldermen, besides a large number from the common council, were present, and sporting men represented the large cities of the eastern states. So Boston's honor to brawn excels its homage to brain, and the city which dotes on the great slugger is the laughing stock of the world.

But little is being done in politics. On Saturday of this week the Democratic committee will fix the time and place of their state convention. Facts are known concerning the Democratic prospects which show at least that they prefer two strings to their bow, and they want to hold on to both Stearns and Andrew as gubernatorial possibilities.

The Prohibitionists have sent out a glowing circular, calling upon the third party men to make as strong a showing as possible at the Worcester convention Sept. 7, and denouncing the old parties as the conglomeration of treachery and lies.

LANDON.

August Magazines.

Harper's for August gives the place of honor to Miss Welch's paper on "The Neighborhood of the International Park at Niagara," which has fifteen fine illustrations, the finest of which perhaps are of the whirlpool. "Hunting the Grizzly Bear" by G. O. Shields, will interest sportsmen, and "Buccaneers and Marooners of the Spanish Main," is the first of two articles by Howard Pyle, giving accurate history of the eighteenth-century pirates. "The Irish Party," by Edward Brown, has portraits of fourteen members of the party. Mrs. Rebecca Harding Davis, continuing her Southern articles, describes Mobile, and says "a few years will make it the New York of the South." The Mexican Notes are finished. There are "intense" installments of "April Hopes," and "Narka," a good short story, "A Fisherman's Mate," with fine poetry and interesting miscellany.

In Scribner's for August, "Unpublished Letters of Thackery" occupies the leading place and is illustrated with several Thackery drawings. "The Picture-Quality of Holland" is by the American artist, George Hitchcock; "A Girl's Life Eighty Years Ago" is concluded, and the fiction includes "The Last Rembrandt," which shows great strength of imagination. "The Revival of Handicraft" by Prof. John F. Weir of Yale Art School is timely and important.

The August Century is an exceptionally good mid-summer holiday number of the popular magazine. "Snubbin' through Jersey" reports the mishaps and delights of a vacation trip in a canal boat, while "Our Kivigtok" describes an episode of the Lady Franklin Bay expedition, is written by Gen. A. W. Greely, and illustrated by Mrs. Mary Hallock Foote. Joel Chandler Harris begins a three-part story, "Azalia;" "Is it a Piece of a Comet?" by W. E. Hidden is accompanied by drawings of natural size; the Battle Series approaches conclusion, and a "Hundredth Man" reaches its tenth part. The solid paper of the number is by Edward Atkinson, "Low Prices, High Wages, Small Profits—What Makes Them?" The poetry is excellent. There is a fine portrait of John Brown and a picture of his grave at North Elba.

The notable features of the August Wide Awake are the first of a series of sketches of Old Concord and a paper on summer sports, both illustrated. Margaret Sidney, the writer, lives in "Wayside," the home of Nathaniel Hawthorne, next door to the Alcotts', a mile from Concord bridge, toward Lexington. Summer Sports is by Elbridge S. Brooks (late of the St. Nicholas staff), who shines in vacation as well as in his more accustomed work. He gets into half-a-dozen pages practical clues to croquet, bowls, hare and hounds, canoeing, tennis, bad-minton' quoits, ball-in-the-hole, or nine holes, and stops with base-ball, with bare mention of boating, fishing, swimming, camping, tramping, bicycling, photography. Charles Egbert Craddock goes on a coon-hunt and trees a panther in the "Story of Keedon Bluffs"—her second young folks' story [both of them written for Wide Awake]. There are long stories by Catherwood, Davis, Champney, Hopkins; short ones by Mitchell, Hart; poems, sketches, skits, biographies, peeps at the Zoo. Wide Awake $2.40 year—a sample copy sent for five cents. D. Lothrop Company, Boston.

The Jubilee season in London, and the excitement of the public mind over the Queen's fiftieth anniversary of her reign, are represented by two articles in the current number of The Electric: "Victoria Literature," by Prof. Edward Dowden, and "The Progress of Thought in Our Time," by John Addington Symonds. Both of these papers are noteworthy productions of their brilliant authors. "Oxford in the Middle Ages," by John C. Brodrick, is an interesting study of university life in the olden time. Algernon Charles Shinburne has a paper on the Jubilee, perhaps the strongest that has yet been published. Andrew Lang has one on Literary Plagarism, and James Keith one on "Our Great Competitor." Mr. Gladstone attacks some of the conclusions in Mr. Lecky's last volume of "England in the Eighteenth Century" with eloquence. The papers entitled "Russia as the Enemy of English Trade," and "The Origin and Interpretation of Myths"—the latter by W. S. Gill—are highly suggestive and interesting. Other articles of notable interest are a sketch of Thomas Stevenson, the great engineer, by his son, Robert Louis Stevenson. "Tree Lore," by J. A. Farrer; and "Poet's Pictures," a selection from Temple Bar. The minor articles are interesting and well chosen. Special attention may be called to the study of Virginia life, entitled "Mar'se Dab after the War," from Blackwood's Magazine.

The St. Nicholas for August opens with a frontispiece by Mary Hallock Foote, illustrating some bright verses by Edith M. Thomas, entitled "Invitation to Echo;" and the illustrator turns author a little farther on in a charming sketch of Rocky Mountain life, called "An Idaho Picnic," with more pictures in her characteristic style, Nora Perry contributes a "girl's story," that has equal application to boys. The story contains a healthful lesson for some teachers, as well as all scholars. There is a pleasant sketch of the "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table" by the editor of the "Youth's Companion;" George J. Manson gives his views on "Journalism" to the boys who are getting "Ready for Business," and as it is the author's own profession, sees it in no roseate hue; while C. F. Holder tells "How Some Animals Become Extinct," with special application to those forms which have disappeared within the history of man. "A Great Battle in a Forest" is the title given to Gen. Adam Badeau's account of the great battle and Confederate victory of Chancellorsville, where Stonewall Jackson received his death-wound, and Major Keenan won immortal fame by his gallant charge. Of the continued stories, "Winning a Commission" and "Jenny's Boarding-house" are concluded, happily, of course; and "Eddie John's Family," under the guidance of Prof. H. H. Boyesen, embark for America. The "Brownies," who may be regarded as a perennial serial, go a-fishing and catch everything catching except the measles; and there are verses and pictures and lots of other nice things.

FORTUNES FOR EVERY ONE.

MILLIONAIRE MACKAY'S ADVICE TO YOUNG MEN AND WOMEN.

AN OPPORTUNITY NOW OFFERED TO PROFIT BY IT.—A RARE INVESTMENT, AND THOUSANDS ARE PUTTING THEIR MONEY IN IT.

Once in a while a man with a woe-begone face and a general aspect of seediness will say: "There is no change for a poor man in this country." There never was a greater mistake than this. Take a glance at the millionaires of New York and you will find that nineteen out of twenty of them started without a dollar. They made their money as a rule by keeping their eyes open and taking advantage of the opportunities which were occasionally afforded them.

It is not the men who make all the money, either. There are young women who can give ordinary men points on making safe and good investments, and who are living in luxury now through having invested their small savings in a good thing that returned them profits a hundred-fold.

Maybe it was in a good patent, perhaps it was in a small store, or more likely they made their wealth by a sensible investment in some good stock, which rapidly appreciated in value. That is about the easiest and safest way for a man or woman to get rich, and there are hundreds of both sexes in New York who know that fact because they have tried it.

When John A. Mackay, the famous Bonanza millionaire, was at the Hoffman House recently, a Morning Journal reporter asked him how he got his first start.

"In a mining property," replied Mr. Mackay. "There is nothing like mines to make a fortune, and when a young man asks my advice as to what he shall do with his fifty dollars, or his hundred dollars, or his five hundred dollars, I invariably tell him: 'Put it in a good mine.'"

That the advice of Mr. Mackay is being pretty generally acted on by men and women who are smart enough to take advice from such a source, is shown by the wonderful demand which has sprung up for the stock of the Tortilita Gold and Silver Mining Company, whose general offices are at No. 57 Broadway, New York city.

The capital stock of the Tortilita Company is $1,000,000, divided into 500,000 shares at $2 each.

Such a chance to make a safe investment that is away ahead of savings banks and building associations is rarely offered to the public.

The shares are non-assessable and the man or woman who calls or sends to the office of the Tortilita Mining Company to invest but $2 is treated with as much courtesy as the millionaire who buys 5000 shares.

Already the shares are a favorite investment in all parts of the country, especially with people who have small sums of money and who hope for large returns from a small purchase.

The stock has advanced 100 per cent from the original price, and many believe it will go to $10 and even $20 per share. The price now is $2. Dividends will begin September 1, and bullion is now being shipped.

And now a word about the mines and the officers of the company: Mr. Joseph H. Reall, president of the Tortilita Gold and Silver Mining Company. Mr. Reall is an experienced business man and well versed in financial matters. His associates are men of like character and ability. The vice-president of the company is Hon. Floyd King, a distinguished officer in the late war, and for nine sessions—eight years—a member of Congress from Louisiana and chairman of important committees. Mr. Duboise T. Elmore, who has worked the mines for three years and made them pay, and who is a large owner in them, is superintendent. He has had many years of practical experience in mining and milling on the Comstock in Nevada, (which has paid in dividends some $265,090,000) and in California. Mr. Elmore gives it as his opinion that these mines promise as large results as the Comstock. Mr. Rodman M. Price, Jr., a well-known mining and civil engineer, is secretary of the company.—New York Morning Journal.

A MUCH MARRIED WOMAN.

Mrs. Fowler, of this city, was married last January to her sixth husband, and strange as it may seem, five of them died exactly two years from their wedding day. Her last husband has been sick for the past four months with chronic jaundice, and was given up by four of our best physicians; as a last resort he began using Sulphur Bitters, and yesterday told our reporter that they had saved his life, smilingly saying that he guessed Mrs. Fowler would be unable to take a seventh better half for some time to come.—Exchange. 2w19

TO THE HONORABLE THE JUSTICES of the Superior Court, holden at Springfield within and for the County of Hampden.

Humbly shews Nellie S. Able of Palmer, in said County of Hampden, that she was lawfully married to Frederick M. Able, then of the city, county and state of New York, and now of parts unknown, at said Palmer, on the thirteenth day of December, A. D., 1883, that they have since lived together as husband and wife in said Palmer, until the 17th day of December, A. D., 1883, since which time they have lived seperate and apart from each other, and she has ever conducted towards him as a faithful, chaste and affectionate wife, yet the said Frederick M., regardless of his marriage vows and obligations, at said Palmer, in the month of December, A. D. 1883, utterly deserted her and has continued such desertion from that time to the date hereof, being more than three consecutive years, next prior to the filing of this libel; and that, being of sufficient ability, he grossly and wantonly and cruelly refuses and neglects to provide a suitable maintenance for her.

Wherefore she prays that the bonds of matrimony heretofore existing between her and said Frederick M. may be dissolved, and for such further orders and decrees in the premises as to law and justice may appertain. NELLIE S. ABLE.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.—HAMPDEN, ss.
SUPERIOR COURT AT SPRINGFIELD.
August 11th, A. D., 1887.

On the Libel aforesaid, it is ordered, that the Libellant notify the said Frederick M. Able, to appear before the justices of this court, at Springfield, aforesaid, on the first Monday of October next, by publishing an attested copy of said Libel and this order, once a week, in the Palmer Journal, a newspaper printed in Palmer, three weeks successively, the last publication to be thirty days at least before the said first Monday of October, that he may then and there show cause why the prayer of said Libel should not be granted.

BY License of the Probate Court for the County of Hampden, the subscriber, administrator with the will annexed, of the estate of Emellus B. Murdock, late of Palmer, in said county, deceased, will sell at public auction on the premises on Saturday, the 20th day of August, next, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, the store and tenement with about one acre of land, situated in the village of Bondsville, belonging to the estate of said E. B. Murdock. This store is on a very prominent corner and has for a long time controlled the trade of a large section, and a rare chance for business. Also on the same day, commencing at 9 o'clock a. m., I will sell all the personal property remaining, consisting of 1 horse 11 years old, 1 carriage, several express wagons, sleighs, harness, robes, etc. The furniture and household goods, books, pictures and articles too numerous to mention, with the balance of store stock of dry goods, boots and shoes, groceries and fancy goods. Terms made known at time of sale.
T. D. POTTER, Admr. with the will annexed.

How It Happened.

The pitcher fired the ball to twist it,
The batter struck so hard and missed it.

The catcher caught the ball and dropped it,
Then rolled it to the pitcher who stopped it.

The pitcher then to the batter socked it,
The batter shut his eyes and knocked it.

The short stop jumped for the ball from habit,
But jumped not high enough to grab it.

The left field from the ground he picked it,
And to the first base quickly slicked it.

The first base tried, but didn't catch it,
And then raced after the ball to fetch it.

The batter went like lightning greasy,
And made the second and third base easy.

The first base got the ball and roughed it
To the third base chap who muffed it.

The batter scooted for home a-flying,
And tumbled over the base a-dying.

The crowd set up a terrible yelling,
And charged the players with game a-selling.

And first to the umpire gave a cuffing,
Then kicked right out of him the stuffing.

The gate-keeper laughed at the fuss so funny,
And then skipped off with the boodle money.

Many of the old settlers of Mount Desert look back with regret at lost opportunities. A few hundred dollars wisely expended ten years ago would make the happy possessor a millionaire to-day. A land broker here recently told your correspondent that he was offered 150 acres of land a few years ago, located on Main street, for $600. "I thought," said he, "that an enormous price then for a few acres of rocks and stumps. Now, that same tract would sell at least for $500,000." He also said that he could have purchased twenty years ago the entire tract of land which extends from Cromwell's Harbor to Great Head, embracing hundreds of acres, for twenty-five cents per acre. "And," he said, "it was offered me at that figure and the owners fairly urged me to take it, but I refused. See what it will bring to-day. This land is worth at the least calculation $6000 per acre.

NOTES OF TRAVEL.

Correspondence of the JOURNAL.

It is twenty-three days since we left Boston. We had a pleasant passage of just nine days to Queenstown, where we landed. The weather was unusually fine, and the Pavonia made just about 300 miles a day. The number of cabin passengers, 175, was said to be larger than had ever before sailed from Boston in one steamer. It included ex-Mayor Fox of Cambridge, Pres. Seeley and his daughter of Amherst, Miss Prof. Fowler of Wellesley, Rev. Dr. Thomas of Brookline, Rev. Mr. Gordon of the Old South church, Boston, Hon. Mr. Bishop of Newton, and so on, a large part of them going for a summer vacation, and designing to return the first of Sept. Such a company, shut up on shipboard for ten days, naturally become very well acquainted. We had music and readings in the cabin every evening. The Fourth of July was celebrated with as much heartiness as it was anywhere on land. The ship was dressed at 8 o'clock with flags, a national salute was fired, speeches were made, full of patriotism, by distinguished gentlemen on board, America was sung, fireworks were provided in the evening; there was music in the evening, an original poem was read, and the day was truly one of great enjoyment.

Rev. Mr. Hunn, returning to his mission in Luchin, conducted the service in the cabin on Sunday, and gave an address on missions.

We had just a suggestion of a storm the sixth day out, and for a few hours were seasick. But excepting this brief interval there was no excuse for seasickness. Most of the passengers were well, and the days passed pleasantly on deck, in walking, reading and talking. If all sea voyages could be as pleasant as this, no one need dread crossing the Atlantic.

At 7 o'clock Saturday afternoon the steamer anchored in the bay at Queenstown, and a tender came alongside to take the passengers who were to land. It took us an hour to steam up the harbor, and nearly two hours to get through the custom house. We took the train for Cork at 10.30, and reached the Imperial Hotel in that city at eleven. In Cork a large number of Americans spent the Sabbath, resting "according to the Commandment," availing ourselves of the opportunity to worship in the churches of that beautiful, though quaint old city.

From Cork our company began to scatter. The most of them paid a visit to Blarney Castle, a fortification of immense strength, built about the time of the discovery of America, by an Irish chieftain, Morearty the Strong, where they admired the strength of the tower, and still more, the marvelous beauty of the landscape; and then they saw, but did not kiss the famous Blarney stone. Killarney is the next point of interest. Some took the short way, going by rail in three or four hours. Pres. Seeley traveled a much longer route by carriage, over a road that showd the wild and mountain charms of the Irish coast.

From Killarney it is 186 miles by rail to Dublin, and from Dublin to the Giants Causeway as much further. From the Causeway some went directly to Scotland, and they are probably now in Edinburg. Others crossed from Dublin to North Wales. We have had a charming trip among the Welch mountains. We were several days in the vicinity of Snowden, which lifts itself above its neighbors as Mt. Washington towers above the White Mountains. We made Bettws-Y-Coëd our center, and made excursions from there. We visited the castles of the First Edward, at Carnavon, and at Conway, built one in 1283 and one in 1284, to enable the king to hold the Welsh in subjection. They are both of massive strength, yet useless now as a defense against modern cannon. They are well preserved, and overgrown with ivy which hangs in luxuriant festoons from the battlements.

The stone quarries of that region employ five or six thousand men in a profitable industry. I was charmed with the Welsh people. They are industrious and thrifty. Their homes are neat and clean, and though it is a marvel that anybody can wring subsistance from so rocky a country, yet they do live comfortably. The poorest cottages generally have clean lace curtains at the small square windows. I saw not a single beggar in all Wales, though in Ireland the men, women and children were asking alms at every turn. The contrast was very striking. I was for some days among people who spoke only the Welsh language among themselves, though most of them can speak English. English is the only language used in the schools.

From Wales we came by a long railroad going to Warwick, in middle England, and have been visiting the famous Warwick castle, the ruins of Kennelworth, the church of St. Mary's, the charming village of Leomington—the Saratoga of England—and this afternoon we go to London.

HUNGER AND TRAGEDY.

A man walked into the Windsor hotel, in Dallas, the other day, with a valise and a big appetite, and going into the dining room, tried for a few minutes, to work up a beefsteak. He then broke out with:

"What, ho! landlord! Is there a blacksmith within the precincts of this mighty city?"

Landlord—Why, yes, of course.

Tragedian—Then send one hither.

Landlord—What in thunder do you want with a blacksmith in my dining room?

Tragedian—I would have him test his steel and brawny arm by severing in twain this steak from the shoulder of the deceased bovine of many years, and then, for my physical recuperation, I would have him saw, file and chisel off a few morsels from its hardened bulk, for I would dine the while. I pray thee haste and fetch him quickly. Stay thee! Your biscuits you can take to a stone quarry for a blast; these grits I can, with dexterous art and a glass of water, manage to swallow whole. Go bring the blacksmith. Away!

The landlord fainted and awoke almost a raving maniac.—Texas Colonel.

You girls want the earth, said a State street father when one of his daughters asked him for six dollars for a new jacket. No, papa, said the ingenious child of twenty, not the earth—only a new jersey.—Trenton Emporium.

She Kept the Golden Rule.

HAVING BEEN BENEFITTED A LADY TELLS THE GOOD NEWS TO HER FRIENDS—WHY EVERYBODY SHOULD READ THE PAPERS.

By chance I saw Rev. Mr. Hall's letter in the New York Sun relating to his wife's case and her cure of nervous dyspepsia and malaria by the use of Kaskine. The symptoms there given were almost exactly like my own, and I thought I would try Kaskine. I had been afflicted in the same way for about eight years, and had taken quinine until I was almost crazy from its effects. I would have severe pains at the pit of my stomach on eating more than usual, and was very nervous and underwent great mental depression. My head troubled me a great deal, with terrible pains through my eyes and the back of my neck. I also suffered much from sickness at the stomach.

In reply to a letter from me, Mr. Hall said that his wife took, in all, half a dozen bottles of Kaskine, and it cured her. This decided me and I began using it. Up to the present date (March 12, 1887), I have taken several bottles within two month's time, and I feel very much better. The bad sensations in my head are entirely gone; my stomach troubles are very slight to what they were, and expect to be perfectly cured before the warm weather sets in.

Of course I could not keep this good news to myself, and so told my lady friends, several of whom are using this remedy with the same good results as I experienced myself. I need hardly tell you how glad I am that so excellent a medicine for such common yet distressing ailments as mine, has been discovered, and when a good word from me will point out Kaskine, the new quinine, to those who may suffer in the same way, you may be sure I shall not fail to speak.

Yours very truly,
MRS. WALTER H. MITCHELL,
Whippany, New Jersey.

Kaskine, the new quinine, allays the inflammatory conditions, regulates the bowels, promotes the assimilation of food, and subdues the nervous derangements which attend and often are the cause of dyspepsia. It has the exceptional virtue of being easily borne by the most delicate stomachs, and is especially adapted to the use of women and chronic invalids. It effectually destroys malarial poison and never leaves behind it any deleterious effects.

Other letters of a similar character from prominent individuals, which stamp Kaskine (the new quinine) as a remedy of undoubted merit, will be sent on application.

HARMLESS with Sandford's Ginger. The colored brother laughs in anticipation at the feast before him. The melon is tickled beyond expression as it thinks of the kinks it will tie in the darkey's stomach. The owl, wise bird, hovers near, knowing that Sanford's ginger will soon be needed.

SANFORD'S GINGER, compounded of Imported Ginger, Choice Aromatics, and French Brandy, convenient, speedy and safe, is the quintessence of all that is preventive and curative in medicine.

It is sure to check summer complaint, prevent indigestion, destroy disease germs in all the water drunk, restore the circulation suspended by a chill, and ward off malarial, contagious and epidemic influences.

Beware of worthless "gingers" offensively urged by mercenary druggists on those who call for

The Old-Fashioned Kitchen.

The old-fashioned kitchen, with kettles and pans,
And gable-roof reaching above it;
With daisies and lilies and "sparrowgrass" beds
All shattered about—oh, I love it!

At noon what a feast, when the pies nicely baked,
From the oven with fragrance came greeting!
I've wandered all over but never have found
A place so delicious for eating.

The ivy that clings to the old kitchen porch,
Swings gracefully, quiet and steady,
Where expectant I sit as I wait for the call
Which tells me that "dinner is ready."

A sweet little maiden whose elbows are flecked
By the traces of dough and flour;
A china bowl brimming with roses as rare
As e'er graced a queen and her dower.

The pie crust so crispy and biscuits so brown,
The roast-rib so succulent, tender;
The coffee so fragrant and eggs yellow gold;
The waitress, twice over I send her.

The strawberry sauce and the green lettuce dish,
The radishes, "snappy" all lay there;
'Tis a feast for the gods, and I cannot resist,
Quite man-like and hungry, but stay there.

The old-fashioned kitchen, with kettles and pans,
And gable-roof reaching above it;
With daisies and lilies and "sparrowgrass" beds
All scattered about—oh, I love it!

A sweet little maiden whose elbows are flecked
By the traces of dough and flour—
She won the way unto my heart, and I guess
'Twas done by her kitchen's endower.

MADE FOR EACH OTHER.

"Cheston, who do you suppose was the belle of Mrs. Allen's ball?" inquired Mrs. Vincey.

"My dear sister, you know I do not frequent balls, and consequently do not number very many belles among my circle of acquaintances."

"But you know this one, or used to. Have you forgotten little Margaret Castlemaine?"

"Margaret Castlemaine! That child a belle?"

"Why not? She must be eighteen at least, Cheston."

"True; it is four years since I last saw her. Is she pretty, Helen?'

"She is more than pretty," she replied, thoughtfully.

"Handsome, then?"

"No; not handsome. That does not describe her. She is lovely!" exclaimed the lady, impulsively.

"And yet she was a very quiet-looking girl."

"But she always had beautiful eyes, so clear and trusting. She is an undoubted belle, and has improved amazingly."

"You surprise me!" said Cheston Dale. "That little girl a bell?"

"She is demure still, after a fashion. I do not wonder that she is such a favorite. She was engaged in every dance," said Mrs. Vincey, smilingly

"And so Margaret Castlemaine has become a butterfly of fashion"—speaking thoughtfully. "I had supposed her devoted to her studies and her passion for music might have fitted her for something nobler."

"My dear, ridiculous brother," cried Mrs. Vincey, with a half-vexed laugh, "how you do love to rail at our balls and dancing-parties! Believe me, it would be quite impossible to imagine the girl frivolous, merely enjoyed an evening of dancing. I daresay she can appreciate other things all the better for that."

"She is not frivolous, then?'

"Impossible, with such a face. I had a long and pleasant chat with Margaret's mother. I also snatched the opportunity to say a few words to Margaret. They pressed me to call, and I shall gladly avail myself of the invitation. They are delightful people. Margaret interests me."

Her brother arose and went to the window; he stood looking out; at length he said, musingly: "And I presume the young lady is in for a season of balls and parties?"

"And the opera and the theater. Yes, I suppose so. London is a gay city."

"And you think she enjoys such things?" queried Cheston Dale, quietly.

"I was delighted with the sight of her happy face; she showed her enjoyment of it most frankly, and as all young girls should do. She flitted around the room like a sunbeam, and yet—and yet there is a tinge of pretty reserve about her that renders her very fascinating."

"Forgive my curiosity," exclaimed the young man, noticing how earnestly his sister spoke.

"You must meet her, Cheston, although I dare say she will not approve of you. She has her likes and dislikes, I have no doubt," remarked Mrs. Vincey, a little wickedly.

Her handsome brother turned and smiled quietly at her.

"Perhaps she will not approve of me," he said; "she will doubtless think me very tame compared with her ball-room friends."

His sister stole a little admiring glance at him. The word "tame" could never have been applied to Cheston Dale; his dark eyes were full of spirit and energy.

Mrs Vincey took up a piece of fancy work and busied herself with it thoughtfully. At length she said: "How old are you, Cheston?"

"Just thirty-two. Does that seem a great age—or would it, to a young girl, for instance?"

There was a vein of real earnestness under the light tone.

"I can hardly say. However, I believe most young girls delight to converse with men much older than themselves; it flatters their vanity."

"And is Margaret vain?"

"Margaret—arching her eyebrows. Were we speaking of Margaret, dear?"

Cheston flushed and laughed, ran his fingers through his short curly hair, and said, "Helen, you are a sad tease, and I have tarried too long. I must leave you now. I shall be due at the office soon. Good morning."

His sister looked after the tall, erect figure from her seat in the prettily draped window.

"He is a dear good fellow! I am sure any girl would be proud to receive attention from such a man as Cheston," mused she, working many pleasant thoughts into the gay embroidery. "I wish I could interest him in some one—Margaret Castlemaine, for instance. It would prove very beneficial to him. Now society bores him; he does not care to go out, and is consequently losing all his friends. It is a shame for a man to bury himself so completely in business; he needs rousing. Other girls cannot interest him; Margaret's face has won my heart—it will win her many hearts; perhaps Cheston ——."

But the entrance of the lady's husband put a stop to castle-building; their conversation drifted into other channels.

Mrs. Vincy was a lady who usually carried out her plans. She made a most enjoyable call on the Castlemaines, and warmly urged both ladies to visit her, telling Margaret to come just as often as the mood prompted her.

Cheston Dale did not chance to meet the girl for several weeks.

One evening his sister exclaimed, suddenly, "Tom, will you go with me to the Castlemaines'! I must return a piece of music; I promised Margaret she should have it today, but had quite forgotten it."

"My dear Helen," replied her husband, I have some writing I must do this evening; send one of the servants."

"No; that would not do. Will you go Cheston ?"

"To the Castlemaines'?"

"Yes. Please do; I am very anxious Margaret should have the music."

"I will go if you like," replied her brother, very quietly.

"You are a good fellow!" cried the lady, in tones of approval.

And, shortly after, they were wending their way to where the Castlemaines lived.

Margaret was seated in the drawingroom. She arose and embraced Helen Vincy, and then turned and regarded Cheston with questioning eyes.

"Must I introduce you two? Margaret, have you forgotton my brother Cheston?' asked Mrs. Vincy.

"No, indeed!" holding out a small hand.

Cheston took the small hand in his, and then they seated themselves. The three were soon chatting sociably together. Mrs. Castlemaine joined the party, and Cheston found himself conversing earnestly with the young girl. Frivolous? He thought he had never looked into a more earnest or truer face. She was gleeful and light-hearted, too; her merry laugh was pleasant to listen to. Evidently she did not dislike him; her recollections of old times must have left an agreeable impression.

Cheston Dale was not treated as though he were a stranger.

"You were very good to me," she said earnestly. "What delightful rides those were! I could study twice as well for the out-of-door exercise."

"Do you ride still?"

"Oh yes! with brother Hall."

"May I join you some day?"

"We should be pleased to have you."

"And you are foud of dancing, I hear?"

"Yes, indeed! And you?"

"I have not waltzed for three years," he confessed.

Margaret opened her bright eyes at him and evidently thought him a great barbarian.

"You became tired of it?"

"Very tired."

"I cannot imagine it," she exclaimed. "To waltz with a partner who dances well is a dream of pleasure; the gliding motion exhilarates me, and then, you know, I always did love music, and some waltzes fairly throb with melody."

"I know; I used to feel the charm, and, perhaps," glancing down at her—"perhaps, Margaret, my love for it may revive. I am sure I should enjoy a waltz with you."

He spoke impulsively.

The girl smiled in an honest fashion, and and said, naively, "You have no idea how well I waltz."

"Oh, yes, I have! I can fancy a waltz with you might prove a poem," he exclaimed, while a slight flush crept over his cheeks, and his dark eyes beamed with pleasure.

A little shyness stole over Margaret; her friend feared that he had frightened her; he had not meant to speak so ardently. His next remark was quietly spoken.

"And you retain your love for music?"

"It increases with each year," she replied, gravely, "but with each year I feel how very little I know about it."

"A favorable sign. You are progressing, no doubt."

"Yes, I believe I am; but still how much there is to learn!"

A little thoughtful pause ensued.

Mrs. Castlemaine was conversing confidentially with Helen Vincy; she was heard to remark, "You would like Madame Jay; she is an expert; she designed the white embroidered silk dress that Maragaret will wear at the garden party next week."

A bewitching smile stole over Margaret's fair face; she looked distractingly pretty as she cried, saucily "Oh, mamma, pray do not mention garden or dancing parties while Mr. Dale is present! He has given up all such vanities," stealing a very mischievous glance at him.

Something in the smiling look Cheston bent upon Margaret caused her to drop her saucy eyes; the color deepening in her soft cheeks; a very prety picture she made; and then Helen Vincy said, "Yes; Cheston spends his evenings at home—he abhors society."

Margaret had forgotten his momentary shyness. She looked thoughtful for a moment, and then said, in a half-frightened tone, "Then he is a woman-hater!

The remark sounded strangely coming from such sweet lips.

It was no wonder the young man cried with some energy, "Not a bit of it, Miss Margaret! Helen, what a remark! And I have just engaged this young lady for a waltz!"

His sister opened her eyes at him, and then said, discontentedly, "Cheston is a great care to me. I do not like to see him leading such a humdrum life. I wish he would marry."

"That sister of mine is somewhat outspoken," thought Cheston Dale, while a slow flush that was not altogether indignation mounted to his cheeks.

He glanced at Margaret.

"And what is your opinion, Margaret?" he asked, smilingly, as he met the soft rather childish eyes fixed upon him.

"I think those that remain single are much happier," she said thoughtfully.

"And why, child?"

"Because they are free," she said rather earnestly; "they are not caged, you know."

"Caged!" he exclaimed, and he was smiling at her; again his smile, tinged with mischief, brought the color to the girl's cheek. There was some tenderness in the smile, too; it rendered the man's face most attractive.

The mischief vanished, but the tenderness remained, as he said, thoughtfully, "And yet it is the old, old story over and over again. When loves comes, we do not feel that we have lost freedom, but rather that we begin to live at last."

He spoke earnestly, and Margaret thought that she had never seen her friend looking more manly.

She was rather silent for a moment; then springing up, she crossed the room, and seated herself at the piano; and Cheston joined her there.

Picking up a piece of music, he turned the leaves in an idle fashion.

"Margaret, play something for me, won't you," he asked, persuasively.

The small fingers wandered over the keyes for a moment, and she commenced a little selection. It was like the girl herself, tender winsome, with here and there a touch of pathos, and sometimes a deeper chord of passion.

Absorbed in her music, Margaret did not know that she was giving Chester Dale an excellent opportunity of studying her; she did not know that he was thinking hers a lovely face indeed, lit by those trustful eyes. She turned to him when the last chords had been struck, and was prepared for the full, approving glance; a pleasant one to meet, and Margaret favored the young man with a smile of such sunny sweetness that he then and there longed to fold her in his arms.

But it was not until he had left that he realized what an evening of happiness he had had.

His sister's sole remark to him was, "Cheston, don't say after this that everything bores you. Your face was almost as bright as Margaret's this evening."

"Margaret—a pearl—she is well named," he said thoughtfully, and then managed to lead his sister into conversation on other topics.

He soon fell into a friendly way of calling at the Castlemaines. He was not often fortunate enough to find Margaret alone; she had many friends, and treated them all in a frank, pleasant fashion; but Cheston was pleased to note that the shade of reserve, so natural to her, never become apparent when in conversation with him as an old and welcome friend.

The young man was not slow at perceiving what Margaret's inexperienced eye failed to note, that among the many who called upon her two of three evinced more than a casual interest in the piquant warm-hearted girl. It chafed Cheston; he could not endure to think that any other man should dare to think of his Margaret. His Margaret? Yes; Cheston loved his little friend; he was restless enough when away from her, and most unutterably happy in her presence; he realized that Maragret was the light of his eyes. To touch her soft hand, to look into her lovely eyes, was happiness indeed. What a slight child she looked, for all her eighteen years! To meet her, to be near her, Cheston became as gay as any of them.

He was waltzing with Margaret Castlemaine one evening, thinking what bliss it was to guide her little feet through the throng, leading her with that firm steady grace that bespeaks the experienced waltzer, when the girl spoke.

"And so waltzing bores you?"—speaking a little archly.

"No, Margaret, I love it. Is not this music unutterably sweet?"

"And so sad," in a plaintive voice.

"Are you sad, Margaret?"

"Call me Miss Castlemaine, please," in a half-laughing, half-imperative tone.

"I could not; you are just 'Margaret' to me," he replied, simply.

"But remember I am no longer a child; I am quite grown up. I do not call you Cheston.

"I wish you would," he exclaimed.

"But I won't,"—playfully.

"Margaret!" said a deep voice.

"Miss Castlemaine, if you please, Mr. Dale."

"Margaret, don't you wish that this waltz would last for ever?"

"No, indeed!"—with emphasis.

"And why not?"

"I have promised the next to Mr. Graham—he waltzes superbly," said the sweet voice.

"Better than I do, no doubt," said Cheston, regretful, feeling pained.

"No,"—softly.

"No?"

"Not better—almost as well," said Margaret, naively, and half unvoluntarily Cheston Dale drew her closer; the little admission had filled him with pleasure.

Later in the evening he met Margaret coming out of the conservatory. She did not see him. He heard her escort exclaim in broken tones, "And is that 'no' final?"

"It is final," said the trembling voice.

Cheston noticed how pale the girl was. A look of pity and sorrow curved her sweet lips. He was soon hovering around her in a protecting fashion. The joy of the evening seemed to have vanished from Margaret; she was wistful and quiet. Cheston Dale's heart swelled with love as he looked at her.

He could not sleep that night, but restlessly wondered if Margaret would answer him so cruelly; but he refused to think of such a castrophe, and fell at length into a troubled sleep, to dream that Margaret and he were separated by a heartless mother, who had chosen another suiter for her daughter.

He comforted himself the next day by the thought that Mrs. Castlemaine was not heartless, and that dreams are said to go by contraries.

"Cheston," remarked his sister, one evening, "I am of the opinion that Margaret goes out altogether too much. I met her to-day; it struck me that she looked thin and pale."

"She is very gay," observed the young man, quietly.

"Yes; and parties and late hours will wear upon the most robust," pursued Mrs. Vincy, "and Margaret, although not a bit delicate, is not remarkably robust. I must speak to Mrs. Castlemaine about it;" adding, after a pause, "Do you know I heard some one prophesy that Miss Margaret Castlemaine would be engaged by the close of this, her first season?"

The young man was silent; his cheeks colored with emotion.

Before he could reply, his sister continued, "The insufferable gossips mentioned the names of two or three whom they thought might stand an even chance of winning her favor. Yours was not among them," she added, softly, and rather timidly.

"And yet, before the season closes, Margaret will find me at her feet!" exclaimed Cheston Dale; while a luminous expression stole into his fine eyes and the flush deepened on his cheek.

"Cheston," cried his sister," you must win her. You were made for one another!"

Tom Vincy's entrance changed the conversation; in which, let it be understood, Cheston took but little part, and when he did speak, answered at random, drawing the attention of his brother-in-law upon him by his absent-minded replies.

"Old man, you're in love!" Tom announced; and Cheston roused himself, and shook off his pleasant reverie.

It was at an evening reception that the young man next saw Margaret Castlemaine. He was conversing with a witty and beautiful woman, but managed to keep an eye on the door, wondering restlessly what kept Margaret, when she entered with her usual quiet grace. Some one had spoken to her, and she had replied, and was smiling in an innocent fashion. Cheston thought he had never before seen her look so beautiful. But when the smile vanished he noticed her expression was one of sadness. It moved him powerfully; he longed to drive it away.

She was soon surrounded by friends, and to less sympathetic eyes would have appeared happy enough. She greeted Cheston's approach with a bright smile, and for a time the shade of sadness seemed to quite leave her.

Later in the evening, as Cheston stood in the doorway, the man next to him said to another, "Is not Miss Castlemaine lovely this evening?"

"She is exquisite!" replied the other; "but a trifle sad. Did you observe it? I wonder if that young Thornby is not responsible for that?"

"Thornby?"

"Yes; he proposed to her, you know, but was refused."

"Foolish girl! He is enormously wealthy."

"Yes; but it seems Miss Castlemaine is a sensible girl, and looks at the man, and not his wealth. Thornby, of course, did not come up to the mark, and she refused him. It seemed he raved and tore his hair in true melodramatic style, and even threatening to put an end to his life if she would not have him. He made quite a scene, I believe."

"The cowardly pupy! Fancy badgering a girl like Margaret Castlemaine!" cried the other, indignantly.

"She need not alarm herself; he is too much of a coward to do himself serious injury. Upon my word, there he is now, looking remarkably well, too, considering the blow to his vanity. Ah, he has advanced to speak to her."

But Cheston crossed the room and reached Margaret first. She took his arm with a smile of relief. He led her away, conflicting emotions rendering it difficult for him to speak.

With a little fluttering sigh the girl exclaimed, "Oh, how tired I am of it all!"

"Would you like to go home, Margaret? I will take you there if you wish."

"Yes—take me home," she said, looking relieved. "But we must search for mamma."

That lady was soon found. The three had rather a silent ride home. Once there, Mrs. Castlemaine mounted the stairs, and Cheston Dale followed Margaret into the drawing-room. A good fire glowed in the grate, the tinted lamps shed forth an attractive light.

With a sigh of relief Margaret sank into one of her favorite cushioned chairs, and Cheston exerted himself to amuse and divert her. He succeeded well; her smiles returned, the old merry laugh rang out. But when at length he arose to go, the sober expression stole over Margaret's face. It touched Chestoh amazingly; he had not meant to tell her of his love so soon, thinking she had had excitement enough; but he longed to comfort her, and with a sudden impulse went to her side, and put his arms around her.

"You wan't to cry," he whispered, "and don't dare, even before your old friend, Cheston Dale. Margaret, I love you dearly."

The answer to that was a shower of tears. Cheston noticed with delight that she did not shrink from him; perhaps the protecting clasp of that strong arm round her comforted the girl. Her tears did not last long; she was quiet for a moment, then made an effort to release herself, but Cheston held her fast.

"No, I can't let you go, Margaret; you must tell me that you love me, darling," in a half-pleading, half-wistful tone.

And somehow, although it cost her many blushes, Margaret managed to confess that she did.

As Cheston's wife she is a great deal happier than when an acknowledged belle. She is the joy and delight of her husband's life, and that knowledge keeps Margaret supremely content.

SOME ADVICE TO CAMPERS.

Those who expect to spend a season in the woods expect, too, of course, to be deprived for that season, of many comforts, and to depend on makeshifts in their place. But there is a right way and a wrong way of camping, as of all else, and it is astonishing how easy the work can be made, and how pleasant the surroundings, when the right way is chosen. It is an axiom of outing that one must go once to find out how to go again; but, when the wisdom comes at second-hand, it may prove just as profitable as that bought by experience.

First, then: Don't renounce all luxuries. A steamer-chair won't take up much room in packing, and, in a week or two of woodlife, you will grow very tired of sitting on the ground, or even in hammocks. That hint is more especially for the chaperon's benefit. Further, (if you have no manservant in ordinary), don't let the women get all the meals! It will not only prove "confusion worse confounded," but very confining to the ladies as well. If there are six of them in the party (if not, eke out that number with some of the men), let the three couples take a meal each day—the entire charge of providing and setting it upon the table—and let it be a progressive service, where the care of breakfast one day means dinner the next, and tea the next, with a proviso that those who get a meal do not wash its dishes. This plan reduces the hardest work to a very simple fashion.

If it is possible, have one of the men knock up a table and benches for the mahlzeit. Take dishes enough to set this table decently, and, except, in case of rain, they can be kept there when not in use. Should one of the party be at all ingenious, (and, if you camp in New England, he is sure to be), he might make a stove, which seems truly much more formidable in the telling than in the deed; one of which, I wot, was a square, bottomless box of sheet-iron, with an opening in front for feeding the fire, and another in the back for stove-pipe. The top was removable, and had two round holes, on which we set our kettles or gridiron, and were able to do all things but bake, as easily as on the home range.

A soap box, with partitions run in by way of shelves, makes a capital cupboard to hold salt, sugar, flour, etc. A small, low table, to stand near the stove and hold cooking utensils, is a help on the slippery wood ground, where every step seems to tell.

In the ladies' tent, I should strongly advise one of those folding sewing-tables, which can be easily transported, and will prove invaluable where there are several women and their belongings packed in together. Don't forget a small hanging mirror and pin-cushion, nor some of those little wall-bags which are used for "catch-alls" at home, and will wonderfully economize space and time in searching here. If two or three will carry a small trunk, instead of a number of satchels, it will prove much better in the same way, and the trunk, closed, also serves as a seat by the day and a repository for one person's garments at night. You will probably be made to understand at the outset that nothing should be hung or pinned up about your tent which touches the canvas, if you wish to preserve it water-proof. Still, there will be available places, and to each of these should be appended receptacles for the thousand and one trifles a woman has need of, and which must be, at such a time, kept in as small a space as possible and out of the way.

Take plenty of blankets and pillows, if possible, and don't forget the pillow cases nor sheets; but folding cots are not very cumbersome or expensive, and, having tried both kinds, I would advocate this last sort of couch, certainly for ladies.

Of course the men know what to wear, and will wear it. For women, an iron-gray flannel is by far the best thing, with, if convenient, one change of dress, in case of need. A box of tourist ruffling is the concisest lingerie, or a long, black lace scarf, wound about the neck, looks pretty, and is handy. A soft cap—Tam o' Shanter or the like—is the most appropriate and convenient headgear. Don't carry a lot of pretty things with you, for they will only be in the way, and, if your heart is set on "dressing up," you had better stay at home.

If your camp is near enough an ice house to get a supply once in a while, a covered barrel sunk in the ground, makes a refrigerator for butter, etc. Unless the expedition is to be into a veritable wilderness—of malice prepense—and if it be more for the fact of camping than for any particular situation, let me strongly urge that you pitch you tent not too far from some farm-house, where fresh food can be obtained once in a while. If the deprivations are necessary—and some are—bear them with all grace, but make the holiday as easy as possible for a holiday season to be.

A few glass lanterns will be needed, and then as many of the Chinese variety as you have a mind for, will add much to the beauty and pleasure of the evening.—Good Housekeeping.

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, AUGUST 19, 1887.

THE Democrats will hold their state convention at Worcester, September 20.

IF ex-Gov. St. John is a true prophet the prohibitionists will control national politics in 1892. Rather a large "If," we suspect.

MRS. CLEVELAND delighted the people of Marion and vicinity by holding a public reception Monday, which was attended by more than 1000 people.

SPAIN is preparing to celebrate the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America. It would seem as though this country ought to have a finger in that pie.

QUEEN VICTORIA has just found the time to send a brief but friendly acknowledgement of President Cleveland's congratulatory note on the occasion of her jubilee celebration.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN, the pugilist, is to give an exhibition at Nantasket in aid of a new Catholic church. A church calling the prize ring to its aid presents a spectacle more novel than elevating.

GOV. AMES attended the Bennington celebration Tuesday, with his staff, and then did a little sight-seeing up in Berkshire county, at the same time improving the opportunity to look after his fences a little.

THERE is trouble among the Ute Indians in Colorado, near the Utah line, and there are apprehensions of a serious outbreak. The redskins are armed with the most approved rifles, and would doubtless be aided by the Mormons in the event of a war.

THE 110th anniversary of the Battle of Bennington was celebrated with more than usual enthusiasm and display Tuesday, there being the added attraction of the laying of the corner stone of the monument, 300 feet high, which is to mark the battlefield.

U. S. SENATOR RIDDLEBERGER of Virginia was sent to jail at Woodstock, Va., last Friday, by an angry judge, for contempt of court. He was released the same night by a mob of friends, but went back again. The judge finally set him at liberty Monday, physicians having certified that he was not in condition to bear confinement.

GEORGE M. STEARNS gives the people of Massachusetts an unpleasant surprise by resigning the office of U. S. district attorney, on account of his health; and he informs a reporter, in response to a suggestion that he take the nomination for the governorship, that his determination not to accept that or any other office is "final, absolute, unqualified, irreversible, irrevocable."

THE Scotch yacht Thistle arrived at New York Tuesday morning, after a voyage of twenty days, her best day's run being on the 2d inst., when she logged 247 miles. Her trim outlines are greatly admired by all who see her, and it is evident that the yacht which gets ahead of her must have extraordinary speed. Meantime the Volunteer goes on winning every race she is in, and if she cannot show her heels to the Thistle evidently no other Yankee yacht need apply for the job.

WHEN President Cleveland starts on his western tour next month he will, according to the present programme, go first to St. Louis via Indianapolis, and then to Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Kansas City, Memphis, Nashville and Atlanta, perhaps returning home by way of Savannah and Charleston. Some of the Western farmers are silly enough to call upon the president to resign his office and salary during this trip; but they will get over it. It will do both president and people good to meet in this way, and he is not likely to get more of a vacation than he needs.

A COUPLE of Sundays ago a stranger speaking at the Springfield jail ruffled the feelings of Catholic prisoners by an unwise allusion to their religion, which they resented by various noisy demonstrations. Thereupon Sheriff Brooks decided that the Sunday school should be discontinued, in the interests of good discipline. For many years this school has been conducted by Dr. Ames and others with the single aim of doing the prisoners good, and many have been helped to better lives through their disinterested efforts. These Sunday school workers assert that the services have been disturbed frequently by indecent noises, which the officials have made no effort to suppress. Sheriff Brooks had better brace up, instill a little healthy respect for authority into his prisoners, and not to be too hasty in removing what few influences there may be about them calculated to make better men of them.

AN address to the temperance Republicans of the state has been published this week, which sets forth the record of the Republican and Democratic parties on the temperance queston, showing what temperance legislation was passed by the Legislature at its last session by Republican votes, and what has been accomplished in other states under Republican lead. The unwisdom of the Prohibitionists in standing aloof and through a third party doing what they can to help the Democrats and defeat temperance legislation is pointed out, and they are invited to turn in and help send to the Legislature men who will symyathize with and vote for temperance measures. The address is signed by Senators Dawes and Hoar, Representative Long and others, and is worthy the thoughtful attention of every man who desires to see the cause of temperance promoted by proper legislation. The address has called out a tart rejoinder from Rev. Dr. Miner of Boston. He gives the Republicans no credit whatever for anything they have done toward the suppression of the liquor traffic, but says "we have summered you and wintered you, and you cannot be depended on to do any effective work in suppressing saloons." The party, state and national, is thoroughly bad in his opinion. He says —

> The national party is not and cannot be made a prohibitory party. All hopes built upon it have been and will continue to be disappointing. Its death, followed speedily by the death of the democratic party, is the only hope for an honest prohibitory law, thoroughly executed.

We fear the Doctor will not live to see "an honest prohibitory law thoroughly executed" under the conditions he names.

Dr. William Holbrook has had the interior of his office thoroughly repaired this week.

Road Commissioner Loomis is working industriously on the thoroughfares throughout the town.

Jeweler Barton has added another piece of choice stationary to his domestic bric-a-brac this week.

There will be no preaching or Sunday school services at the Baptist or St. Paul's churches next Sunday.

The Palmer orchestra is considering the expediency of holding a ball at the Park street rink September 14.

Mrs. J. A. Hawks is considering the advisability of building a two-tenement block on her lot, on Knox street.

Quite a large number from Palmer attended the paper makers' picnic and reunion at North Wilbraham Saturday.

The teachers at the state primary school returned from their vacations last Saturday and resumed duties Monday.

W. R. Milligan has in contemplation the erection of a four-tenement block on the corner of Knox and Pine streets.

Twenty-two young men from this town were at Monson one Sunday recently visiting some of that town's fair maidens.

The directors of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society will hold a special meeting next Monday afternoon.

M. J. Dillon has been resetting the large boilers at the mills of the Warren Cotton Company at West Warren this week.

The Palmer Water Company has been laying pipes to the park this week, so that water may be obtained there hereafter.

A tea-party was held at the residence of Mrs. John Blanchard last evening. A large number of ladies were in attendance.

Mrs. L. M. Shaw tendered a reception to a party of friends and acquaintances at the Converse House parlors yesterday afternoon.

The Star base ball team will play a match game of ball with the Three Rivers second nine on the latter team's grounds to-morrow afternoon.

A large number of the local base ball enthusiasts went to Worcester Wednesday, to witness the match game between the Bostons and Washingtons.

C. L. Alexander has procured a new frame for his presses and made other necessary improvements at his West Brimfield brick yard this week.

The local base ball enthusiasts continue to occupy the greater portion of the sidewalk to discuss the situation of the local and national league games.

The indications are at present that Labor Day will be well observed. Some of the local organizations are already making arrangements for this event.

Mrs. May Allen, the unfortunate woman who was burned to death at the Nassowanno house last week Thursday, was buried at Worcester the following day.

The Knox Hill Water Company has now decided to extend its pipes to Knox street and Foster avenue, in order that the people who reside thereon may be supplied.

It is asserted that the local officers have obtained a clew that will lead to the arrest and conviction of the parties who burglarized the post office at Thorndike recently.

The Palmers are matched with the Springfields for a game of base ball on the park at 3 o'clock to-morrow afternoon. An unusually exciting and interesting contest is expected.

The New London Northern road will run two excursions to Block Island this week from Brattleboro, Vt. One occurred today, while the other will be run to-morrow morning.

The excursion to Lake Pleasant Saturday evening, over the New London Northern road, was well attended. The pyrotechnic display in the evening at the lake was very elaborate.

The season at Forest Lake, the local resort, will terminate September 1st. The past season has not been an especially successful one, due in a measure to the unfavorable weather.

Dr. William Holbrook expects to open a new street on his land near the Point of Rocks. Providing this scheme should be brought about, it will furnish several very desirable building sites.

A Monson saloon-keeper holds some $200 which Palmer sports bet on the Palmer-Monson game last Saturday, and refuses to give it up until the New York Clipper decides to whom it properly belongs.

The clerks of the town assembled at the Nassowanno House last evening and organized a base ball team, which will play a match game with the clerks of Monson on the park next Wednesday afternoon.

The sporting men in this section are wagering large sums of money on the result of the series of races to be contested by Murphy of North Wilbraham and St. John of Indian Orchard, this month.

The railroad commissioners, who are to locate the proposed passageway to the union passenger station, have taken no action upon the matter yet, and indications are that it will remain undisturbed for the present.

Do any of our officers ever make any effort to ascertain whether the law against selling cigarettes to minors is observed in town? Apparently not, judging from the boys who may be seen smoking them on our streets.

The local officers are searching for Foreman Tobin of the Central Massachusetts at Bondsville, who, it is asserted, has suddenly disappeared, leaving numerous unpaid bills which his creditors are desirous of having settled.

Mrs. Margaret Duggan, employed at the Converse House, accidently stepped off and fell down the elevator pit Sunday night to the cellar below. Dr. Flynn was summoned and found her to be badly brusised, but otherwise uninjured.

The funeral of Mrs. M. J. Cunningham, who died Monday, was held Wednesday at Woonsocket, R. I., where her remains were taken for interment. A solemn requiem mass will be celebrated at St. Thomas Catholic church later.

The ball games on the park each Saturday afternoon are unusually well patronized, and those who cannot afford to attend the national league championship games at Boston, can witness some very interesting and excellent playing right at home.

The Boston & Albany railroad company will run an excursion from Palmer to Boston and seashore resorts, September 2. All who were prevented from attending before, by a limitation of the tickets, can avail themselves of the opportunity this time.

The Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society is perfecting its plans as rapidly as possible for its annual fair, September 13 and 14. The society expects to have numerous attractions this year in addition to the number provided in years preceding.

The picnic which was to have been held in Northrop's woods Thursday afternoon, in honor of Miss Eva Burrows, who is visiting in town, was posponed until to-day on account of the rain. About 25 young people participated and enjoyed the afternoon immensely.

An excursion to Block Island will be run from Brattleboro and stations in that section, tickets good the 19th and 20th going and returning the 20th and 22nd, giving an opportunity of staying over Sunday at the Island. Probably one will be run next week to accomodate Palmer.

Janitor Morey of the bank block, while busily engaged in work last Saturday, hung his vest, containing his watch and chain, upon a tree. When he called for his vest the watch and chain were missing, but he thinks he has a clew which may have a tendency to lead to the recovery of his stolen property.

The firm of Loomis Brothers has been dissolved, J. S. Loomis retiring after an experience of over forty years in the business in this place, to enjoy a well-earned rest from business cares. H. G. Geo. W. Ely, tax collector, is at Three Rivers this afternoon, and will be at Bondsville to-morrow forenoon and Thorndike in the afternoon, to give the tax-payers in those parts of the town an opportunity to save the six per cent discount. The remainder of the month he can be found at his office in this village.

Palmer now has eight base ball teams organized in its midst. The latest to organize is the Star base ball club, which is composed of the following players: Manager, H. L. Holden; captain, George Tracey. Dockery, pitcher; Tracey, catcher; Ober, first base; Burns, second base; Murphy, third base; Cross, short stop; W. Wilder, right field; J. Wilder, center field; Higgins, left field.

An alarm at 12.45 p. m., Wednesday, called out the fire department to extinguish a fire which consumed the wood-shed in the rear of the Commercial street house owned by the New London Northern Railroad. The blaze was quickly subdued by a good stream of water, which also prevented the adjacent buildings from being damaged. The loss is estimated at $25. The fire is supposed to have been set by children who were playing inside of the shed.

It is a matter of regret that a reading-room cannot be established here permanently. There seems to be a perceptible lack of enterprise on the part of the citizens and people in contributing to the support of one. Through the courtesy of the members of the Crescent Club, they have consented to solicit funds among the people in town to be expended for the maintainance of such an institutou. At present more daily papers should be on file, together with books, magazines and other literature.

The weather record for July as reported by the state experiment station at Amherst is of interest.

The mean temperature (73.71°) is the highest of the same month since 1839, when it was 74.40°. July, 1863, was the nearest approach to it, when it was 70.87°. The rain fall (8.93 inches) is also the largest for July since 1839, when it was 9.56 inches, and 1863 is also the next highest, being 8.63 inches.

DISTRICT COURT.

This has been quite a busy week at the district court in the line of civil matters. To-morrow is civil term, and a number of entries will probably be made upon the docket. The case of Frank Gardner of Wales, for illegal liquor selling, was heard last Monday and continued. The case of James A. Gardner of the same place, for a similar offence, was also heard and the decision upon the matter reserved. J. J. Sugrue had a prolonged hearing Tuesday, charged with two cases of illegal liquor selling. He was convicted, and ordered to pay a fine of $100 and costs; appealed. He also had to answer to the charge of another case of liquor selling, one for keeping a common nuisance, and one for the violation of the Lord's day, together with three more cases for illegal keeping. The last six cases were continued to August 26th. George Ormiston of Thorndike was taken into custody this week for contempt of court, and had his case set down for hearing the 26th. David Brown of Wales, for an alleged assault upon Mrs. Jane Fagan, had a hearing Wednesday and paid fine and costs. The liquor cases of C. P. Stone, J. J. Moynahan, Mrs. Honora Dunn, Samuel L. Ferry and John Feeney, were tried before Judge Robinson to-day.

YESTERDAY'S STORM.

Much damage was done throughout this section yesterday by the rain, which came down in such floods. The railroad bridge on the New London Northern road between Belchertown and Amherst was badly weakened by the flood so that it was rendered unsafe for trains to pass over last night. The reservoir at Amherst also broke away doing more or less damage to property. The tracks of the same road were badly washed near Roadmaster Shanks' office at this place, and a locomotive came very near being derailed while passing over this dangerous place. The road-bed of the Central Massachusetts railroad at "Whipple's," was washed to some extent so that repairs were necessary. The bridge of the New London Northern road near the Ware River engine house was weakened, while the road-bed was badly washed in several places along the northern division of the line, and near the union station. The banks of the Boston & Albany railroad between North Wilbraham and Indian Orchard were washed to such an extent that trains were delayed somewhat. The farmers in this section also report considerable damage done to their crops, notably that of corn, which is lying flat. Unripened fruit was also blown from the trees, and is considered a total loss in some instances.

ANOTHER VICTORY OVER MONSON.

THE PALMERS DEFEAT THEIR NEIGHBORS BY VERY EFFECTIVE WORK.

The match game of ball on the park last Saturday afternoon was unusually well attended, the number present being estimated at 600 people, who witnessed the contest with interest. The game was between the Palmers and Monsons, and the usual delay in starting the contest was very perceptible, especially to those who termed themselves sporting men, and had large sums of money wagered on the result. After much unnecessary agitation regarding the composition of both teams, the game was finally called at 4.35 o'clock. The Monsons were very handy with the word "victory" at the start and were confident to the extreme of winning the laurels. However, that team took its first inning and was shut out very easily by the Palmers. Manager Holden had secured catcher Sugrue, who officiated behind the bat with marked ability, allowing no balls to pass. The visitors were apparently surprised, but immediately took their respective positions in the field, and prevented the local team from bringing in a run. The second inning for the visitors was only a repetition of the first, so far as a run was concerned, due in a measure to Rooney, of the Palmers' battery, who never pitched a better game. The second inning for the local team was enough to solve the enigma of Carey's pitching, for the boys batted him easily all over the field, and brought in five runs which kept the scorers busy. Excitement was intense at this point, and the supporters of the local team cheered vociferously. The cause of these runs was very fortunate batting, which sent the ball out of the reach of any player several times. The Monsons were practically "rattled," although the team took its third inning and batted little until McGrath made a base hit and brought in the first run for the visitors. Carey threw a swift ball in the third inning for the Palmers, but it was evidently not difficult to hit, as they batted him fiercely again and brought in two more runs. Carey did an unusual amount of kicking in this inning to the umpire, as he continued to do throughout the game. The Monsons went to the bat in the fourth, and the able work of the Palmers' battery struck out every one. The Palmers went to bat again and were put out while stealing bases. The score at end of the fourth stood 7 to 1 in favor of the local team. The Monsons in the fourth inning demonstrated the fact that Rooney was too effective with his stylish curves to make any headway whatever with him, but two players reached first on balls, and stole second and third. The Monsons, by the way, are excellent base runners, but the local ball tossers usually stopped them before reaching third. During Palmers' 5th Sugrue made one of the handsomest flies of the season, Betts, the efficient short-stop made an easy two-base hit and sent in Kane. "Rad." then walked up to the home-plate, took up one of those home-run bats, and sent the ball away over to the fence, making a home run himself without the remotest hesitation and sending in the men on bases besides. The Palmers added 3 runs to their score that inning. The Monsons were again shut out by their foul flies which Miller caught on third, and a striker who was stopped short while running to first by the ball arriving there before he had recovered his bearings. The Monson's seventh amounted to the same as the inning preceding it. In this only one man reached second. The eighth was a fortunate one for the Monsons as McGrath made another base hit and stole second and third bases. A wild throw then brought in a run. The Palmers were shut out in the sixth inning, but brought in their last runs in the seventh. The eighth was simply a repetition of the sixth, while after the Monsons had come to the last inning the new battery was put in to test it one inning. It worked excellently, and the Monsons were about to order some spectacles of an optician who was on the grounds in order that they might see the ball as it passed over the home-plate with great velocity, while it was fastened upon as soon as it had gone behind the bat. This was the last chance, and the team from Monson were shut out for the seventh time. The assertion that Carey sold the game has been verified, but he put the boodle in his inside pocket, and pitched to the very best of his ability, and moreover represented the team so far as kicking was concerned. He has been discharged for his misdemeanor, as has McGrath, his accomplice, who made the only two runs for that team during the contest. Much credit is due Dr. Sawin, of Brimfield, for just decisions in the position which he filled as umpire. The score follows:

DEATH OF DR. CHONINARD.

Dr. P. A. Choninard died at his home on Main street the 12th inst. He came to Ware 15 months since from Waterbury, Conn., apparently in perfect health. His gentlemanly deportment and pleasing manners soon made him a favorite and brought to him a large professional practice. During the latter part of last fall and winter the large number of scarlatina cases among his patrons so largely increased his practice that he worked beyond his strength, and early last spring the symptoms of the disease began to develop that proved fatal. Dr. Choninard was a scholarly man and well learned in his profession. He was formerly a newspaper writer, and ten years ago was editor of the Lowell Sentinelle. The disease that proved fatal was stricture of the æsophagus. His funeral was held Monday and was largly attended, Rev. John T. Sheehan of the Church of Notre Dame officiating. The body was buried in the French Catholic cemetery. He was born in Canada, was 38 years of age and leaves a widow.

RESOLUTIONS ON THE DEATH OF COMRADE GEO H. PATCH.

Resolved, That in the death of our Post Department Commander and Comrade George H. Patch, the G. A. R. has lost one of it staunchest members, as well as the community in which he live a true and loyal citizen. He was ever found at the post of duty and ever ready to aid in whatever way he could the advancement of our order and the cause of the old soldier.

Resolved, That our sympathies as a post and as members of the G. A. R. are respectfully tendered to those whom his death is most keenly felt. And while we sympathize with them and also mourn his loss as a member of our order, let us not forget that for him the earthly warfare is ended and that he is at rest on the eternal camping ground, in the presence of the Supreme Commander.

—Edison claims now to be able to produce electricity directly from coal.

—A public type writer is the latest convenience for lazy guests at summer hotels.

—Cholera is ravaging India, 70,000 people dying of the scourge in June and July.

—California expects a raisin crop of 1,000,000 boxes this year, of the best quality.

—Four persons were killed at a railroad crossing near South Norwalk, Ct., Tuesday.

—Cotton mills in two Southern states exported 31,000,000 yards of cotton cloth last year.

—A big California redwood tree furnished 24,000 feet of lumber for Pullman car interiors.

—A Jersey City butcher took his bed into an ice house one hot night, and was dead in two days.

—Bridgeport, Ct., has a summer toboggan slide, which sends the toboggans far out into the shallow water.

—W. L. Gilbert of Hartford has given $400,000 for an institution for friendless boys and girls in that city.

—A workman in an Albany stove foundry was baked to death in an oven Saturday, probably having fallen asleep before the door was shut.

The first reports from last week's terrible accident on the Teledo, Peoria and Western road, near Chatsworth, Ill., were somewhat exaggerated in the number reported killed. The number of deaths fully authenticated at latest accounts was 87, but the exact number of casualties may never be fully known. It will probably take nearly $1,000,000 to settle the claims for damages growing out of the accident, and the road will have a narrow escape from bankruptcy. The coroner's jury exonerates the railroad company, but holds Timothy Coughlin, foreman of the section where the accident occurred, for the grand jury.

In 1871, when Mrs. Julia A. Lennon was on her wedding trip, she lost her engagement ring while washing her hands in the toilet-room of a Pullman car. A few days ago a Toledo fishmonger, while cleaning some whitefish, found the ring inside of one. It still bore the inscription "J. A. B., Chicago, '69." It is supposed to have passed through the waste pipe as the train was crossing the St. Lawrence and to have been snapped up as it fell.

The public debt reached its highest point in August, 1865, just twenty-two years ago, when it was $2,381,530,295. It is now, not including the Pacific Railroad bonds, $1,001,976,750. In other words, more than one-half of the debt has been paid within that period. It has been reduced at the average rate of $62,706,975 each year.

A young man working in an aqueduct shaft at New York fell to the bottom of the shaft, a distance of 160 feet, Tuesday, but in his descent managed to grasp the elevator rope, and so materially improved the comfort of his sudden stop at the bottom. He was not seriously injured.

Another successful train robbery occured on the Southern Pacific road at Pafago, a small station thirty miles east of Tucson, Arizona, last week. The gang consisted of four men, who rifled the express safe of more than $10,000.

The new Canadian Pacific bridge over the St. Lawrence at Montreal is a finer structure than the celebrated Victoria bridge at the same point. It is one mile and a half long, cantilever in design, and cost $1,500,000.

The son of Kit Carson, the great frontiersman, has just died with his boots on. He was deputy sheriff of Conejos county, Colorado, and was killed while making an arrest.

Emil Schoenberg, a missing Philadelphian, is charged with defrauding his business associates by means of forgeries and otherwise out of nearly $300,000.

Luther Bodman, a prominent citizen of Northampton, president of the Hampshire County National Bank and of the Smith charities, died on Tuesday.

The Dow liquor law of Ohio has closed more than 5,000 saloons in that state. The prohibitionists are against the law because it has not closed more, and the whisky sellers are against it because it has closed so many.—Philadelphia Press.

HAY FEVER.

I have suffered greatly from periodical returns of hay fever. At the suggestion of Covert & Cheever, Druggists, I obtained Ely's Cream Balm, and used a portion of it during a severe attack. I can cheerfully testify as to the immediate and continued relief obtained by its use. I heartily recommend it to those suffering from this or kindred complaints.—(Rev.) H. A. Smith, Clinton, Wis.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhoea, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the perscription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists hroughout the world. Price 25c. a bottle. 1y21

A Certainty.

Steele's Little Bile Pills are without an equal for stimulating the liver to healthy action, and creating a proper secretion of bile, thus removing from the system the germs of malaria, curing constipation, indigestion, and inducing a healthy circulation of the blood, without which no one can enjoy sound health. They are small, but effective; free from nauseating propensities and griping pains, and do not interfere in their action w th the ordinary routine of daily life. Heavily sugar coated. To be had of LeGro & Lynde, for 25 cents per bottle. 1yseow

Don't Experiment.

You cannot afford to waste time in experimenting when your lungs are in danger. Consumption always seems at first, only a cold. Do not permit any dealer to impose upon you with some cheap imitation of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, but be sure you get the genuine. Because he can make more profit he may tell you he has something just as good, or just the same. Don't be deceived, but insist upon getting Dr. King's New Discovery, which is guaranteed to give relief in all Throat, Lung and Chest affections. Trial bottles free at LeGro & Lynde, Palmer, and C. ASTONISHING SUCCESS.

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing consumption, severe coughs, croup, asthma, pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle, as 80,000 dozen bottles were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask you druggist about it. Sample bottles to try, sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in the United States and Canada. 47eow

TO THE HONORABLE THE JUSTICES of the Superior Court, holden at Springfield within and for the County of Hampden.

Humbly shews Nellie S. Able of Palmer, in said County of Hampden, that she was lawfully married to Frederick M. Able, then of the city, county and state of New York, and now of parts unknown, at said Palmer, on the thirteenth day of December, A. D., 1883, that they have since lived together as husband and wife in said Palmer, until the 17th day of December, A. D., 1883, since which time they have lived seperate and apart from each other, and she has ever conducted towards him as a faithful, chaste and affectionate wife, yet the said Frederick M., regardless of his marriage vows and obligations, at said Palmer, in the month of December, A. D. 1883, utterly deserted her and has continued such desertion from that time to the date hereof, being more than three consecutive years, next prior to the filing of this libel; and that, being of sufficient ability, he grossly, and wantonly and cruelly refuses and neglects to provide a suitable maintenance for her.

Wherefore she prays that the bonds of matrimony heretofore existing between her and said Frederick M. may be dissolved, and for such further orders and decrees in the premises as to law and justice may appertain.
NELLIE S. ABLE.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.—HAMPDEN, ss.
SUPERIOR COURT AT SPRINGFIELD.
August 11th, A. D., 1887.

On the Libel aforesaid, it is ordered, that the Libellant notify the said Frederick M. Able, to appear before the justices of this court, at Springfield, aforesaid, on the first Monday of October next, by publishing an attested copy of said Libel and this order, once a week, in the Palmer Journal, a newspaper printed in Palmer, three weeks successively, the last publication to be thirty days at least before the said first Monday of October, that he may then and there show cause why the prayer of said Libel should not be granted.

BY License of the Probate Court for the County of Hampden, the subscriber, administrator with the will annexed, of the estate of Emelius B. Murdock, late of Palmer, in said county, deceased, will sell at public auction on the premises on Saturday, the 20th day of August, next, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, the store and tenement with about one acre of land, situated in the village of Bondsville, belonging to the estate of said E. B. Murdock. This store is on a very prominent corner and has for a long time controlled the trade of a large section, and a rare chance for business. Also on the same day, commencing at 9 o'clock a. m., I will sell all the personal property remaining, consisting of 1 horse 11 years old, 1 carriage, several express wagons, sleighs, harness, robes, etc. The furniture and household goods, books, pictures and articles too numerous to mention, with the balance of store stock of dry goods, boots and shoes, groceries and fancy goods.
Terms made known at time of sale.

When you can buy the Best Blood Purifier and Nerve Tonic for Fifty Cents.

THORN'S

Hop and Burdock Tonic

STANDS AT THE HEAD OF ALL

SARSAPARILLAS, BITTERS, TONICS,

And Similar Preparations.

It is prepared with the greatest care by I. B. Thorn, who has had twenty years of acutal experience in compounding Physicians' prescriptions, and is warranted not to contain a particle of aloes or any injurious drug.

It is composed of Sarsaparilla Root, Burdock Root, Prickly Ash Bark, Mandrake Root, Golden Seal Root, Dandelion Root and the best Northern grown Hops, the proportions of which when properly combined make the best preparation in existance for curing all blood diseases.

It is the Best Tonic and Invigorator, as Hundreds can Testify.

It cures Biliousness, Sick Headache, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, General Debility, Mental and Physical Exhaustion, and Nervous Prostration.

There is no other preparation like it, and no other that has had the sale in so short a time. Its merits have sold nearly Seventeen Thousand Bottles in the last two years.

THORN'S

Hop and Burdock Tonic

SULPHUR BITTERS

THE BEST AND PUREST MEDICINE EVER MADE.

It will drive the Humor from your system, and make your skin clean and smooth. Those Pimples and Blotches which mar your beauty are caused by impure blood, and can be removed in a short time, if you are wise and use the great blood purifier, SULPHUR BITTERS.

DON'T GIVE UP! What makes you tremble so? Your nerves are all unstrung, and need a gentle, soothing tonic to assist nature to repair the damage which your excesses have caused. Sulphur Bitters is NOT a cheap rum or poor whisky drink, to be taken by the glass, like other preparations, which stimulate only to destroy. Why suffer with Boils? Why rave with that terrible headache? Why lay and toss on that bed of pain with rheumatism?

If you have failed to receive any benefit from other medicines or doctors, do not despair. Use Sulphur Bitters. They will cure you when all others fail. No person can remain long sick who uses SULPHUR BITTERS.

The dose is small—only a teaspoonful. It is the best and cheapest medicine. Try it, and you will be satisfied. Get it of your druggist. Don't wait, get it at once. If you are suffering from Kidney Disease, and wish to live to old age, use Sulphur Bitters. They never fail to cure. SULPHUR BITTERS.

Some Impertinent Questions.

Oh, what makes the chimney sweep?
And why did the codfish ball?
And why, oh, why did the peanut stand?
And what makes the evening call?

Oh, why should the baby farm?
And why does the mutton chop?
Can you tell me what makes the elder blow?
Or what makes the ginger pop?

Say, why does the terrible bed spring?
And why does the saddle horse fly?
Or what does make the pillow slip?
And why do the soap boilers lye?

What made the monkey wrench?
Or why should the old mill dam?
And who did the shoemaker strike?
Or why did the raspberry jam?

Or, why should a tree bark?
And what makes the wind howl?
Can you tell me what makes the snow ball?
Or what makes a chimney foul.

Calling Them Up.

"Shall I go and call them up—
Snowdrop, daisy, buttercup?"
Lisped the rain; "they've had a pleasant winter's nap."
Lightly to their doors it crept,
Listened while they soundly slept.
Gently woke them with its rap-a-tap-a-tap!
Quickly woke them with its rap-a-tap-a-tap!

Soon their windows open wide,
Everything astir inside;
Shining heads came peeping out in frill and cap.
"It was kind of you, dear rain,"
Laughed they all, "to come again;
We were waiting for your rap-a-tap-a-tap!
Only waiting for your rap-a-tap a-tap!"

—St. Nicholas.

WANT OF ADAPTABILITY.

These hot days throughout the country have been more fatal than a battle. The dead and injured are counted by the thousands. And in most of the cases the fatal results might have been prevented by ordinary prudence. But the fact is that we do not know how to behave in tropical weather. It is always an exceptional thing in our latitude, and we do not readily adapt ourselves to it. We are used to being frozen, and, consequently, few persons are frozen to death. We prepare thoroughly in dress and in our houses for extreme cold; but we do not prepare for the occasional extreme heat. And we continue in hot days the habits of our ordinary weather.

There are several good reasons for this. One is that climate is so uncertain that we do not know how to prepare for it. Another reason is that we cannot, most of us, afford to prepare for it, as our climate is the most expensive on earth to live in. It requires more change of diet, more variety of clothes than any other. And it costs money to change diet with the weather, and to have clothing suitable to all the whims of our weather bureau.

In Egypt people can eat the same sort of food, practically, the year round, and wear the same light suit, or garment, in all the months. And they do not, when they regulate their own lives according to nature, have sunstrokes and much increase of mortality on account of the heat. When some tyrant interferes and forces them to labor on canals or railways or to build pyramids, they suffer for it and die. No doubt hundreds were daily prostrated by the heat when the great pyramid was in process of construction. Under ordinary circumstances the Egyptians know how to take care of themselves. Most people in hot countries do. They do not expose themselves in midday to the direct rays of the sun; they do not labor excessively; they dress properly, and they do not eat stimulating, heating food.

It is difficult for us to learn the lesson. We go right on with our labor, we continue our heavy diet, we wear oppressive clothing when the thermometer is above 85° and 90°. Our work in building, in hot factories, on railway construction and all industries continues, regardless of the heated term. And above all, we do not change our diet and our clothing. We swelter in woollens, and we eat meat and drink strong liquors. Our excuse for not changing diet and clothing is that the weather will probably change to-morrow, and then we shall be caught out and exposed to another danger. A hot summer would not be unhealthy if it were continuously hot and people could trust it, for they would soon learn to live in accordance with the laws of hot weather. But the expense of this uncertainty! A man provides himself with neat linen suits—at an extra expense above his ordinary outlay. He may not have a chance to wear them half a dozen times in the whole season. If he is economical and tries to rub along with the thick clothing which he absolutely needs most of the time, there will come, perhaps, a period like that we are now in which will kill him. Whereas, if he could conform in point of raiment, and could modify his diet, and go slow generally, he would be none the worse for being warmed through and would be even benefitted by the heat that opens his pores and works a change in his system.

We are not reproaching men and women, and we are not complaining of the weather. We are merely regretting the want of adaptability. In regard to the weather we do not show our ordinary shrewdness. The Chinese are more civilized in this respect. China, the larger part of it, is a land of varying temperature. But the Chinese dress in accordance, and do this without great additional expense. We have yet to learn the trick of living in our latitude.—Hartford Courant.

WHEN THE MOON CHANGES.

During a long storm persons who are well versed in weather lore are often heard to console themselves with the prediction that there will be a change of weather when the moon changes. Nasmyth and Carpenter characterize as a popular error in its most absurd form this belief that the gradual turning of the moon's face toward and away from the sun could, at certain points, upset the existing condition of our atmosphere, generate clouds and pour down rain. In England (and the same may be said of much of America) the weather changes about every three days, and there is a change of the moon every seven days, so that many coincidences must occur. Those who believe that "the moon rules the weather" always credit such coincidences to lunar influence. But the theory is untenable unless it applies to every case, and unless the same effect is always produced by the same cause. To suppose that a change of the moon will turn dry weather to wet, or wet to dry, indiscriminately, is the merest childishness. and contrary to all meteorological records.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

PLAYING WITH A TIGER.

I was in charge of a party making a survey for a railroad between Nagpoor and Hyderpoor, India, and as there was no hurry about the work, our party was as much a hunting as a surveying party. We numbered about thirty-eight people, ten of whom were white men. We were traveling along the north branch of the Gadavey river—sometimes upon its bank and again a couple of miles from the water, sometimes traveling five or six miles a day, and again halting for a couple of weeks to fish or shoot—when a most singular incident befell me individually. I had left camp at an early hour in the morning to fish. While I carried my rifle with me I had no intention of going out of my way to find game. On the previous afternoon I had observed what seemed to be a capital fishing spot in the bend of the river, and it was to this place I hastened as I left camp. Some of the native servants were astir and saw me set out, but I did not want their service. It was a pretty thick jungle between the camp and the bend, but at the bend there was a clear spot an acre in extent with a heavy forest growth and a ledge of rock for a background. As I took a look around before sitting down on the bank to my sport, I remarked that it was a good spot for wild beasts, but as there was nothing moving, I went right to work with my fishing tackle. Catching a frog for bait, I flung in the hook, and it wasn't five minutes before I was meeting with such luck that all thoughts of tigers, snakes and hyenas were driven out of my mind. I had landed half a dozen good-sized fish and was then playing a large one, when a slight noise startled me, and I looked around to see such a sight as has seldom come to the eyes of a sportsman. A full-grown tiger was within five feet of me, playing with one of the fish. It was the last fish pulled out, and in its dying agonies it was jumping about on the grass. Every time it moved the tiger would reach out a paw in a playful way, and once or twice he struck hard enough to move the fish three or four feet. I tell you I was a badly frightened man, and all I could do was to sit there with mouth and eyes open. The tiger had crept down from the bluffs, and why he hadn't attacked me was a mystery. He went from fish to fish, turning them over with his paw, and time and again brushing me with tail as he moved about. My rifle was ten feet away leaning against a bush, and I might have been idiot enough to try to reach it but for a warning. My personal servant had followed me to see what luck I had. He came into the neighborhood while the tiger was playing with the fish, softly climbing a tree, he uttered the call of a bird to attract my attention, and then sung out: "Do nothing to provoke the tiger, master. He is a biloweele, and if you do not cross him he will go away." He meant that the spirit of a good native had been transformed, and it was clearly commonsense to follow his advice. As the beast gave me no attention, I turned to the fish tugging at my line and landed him. He was of good size and full of vitality, and the tiger waited in a playful way until I removed the hook and threw the fish on the grass. Then he sprung for it as a cat for a ball of yarn, and he played with it in the same way. It was laughable, in spite of the circumstances, to witness his actions. He would run around in circles, as you have seen a young dog, sometimes almost leaping over me, and then again he would become the cat and creep softly forward to pounce upon one of the fish. Each one as caught was flung to him, and it was a full half hour before he grew tired of the sport. I expected he would turn to me sooner or later, but the native saw the change of demeanor, and called: "Master, the biloweele is going to play with you! Be as clay in his power." The tiger suddenly left the last fish landed, and came stalking up to me, purring like a cat and acting very playful. His first move was to worm his head under my left arm, and I'm telling you the solemn truth when I say that I smoothed down his fur as if he had been a favorite dog. I had on a big straw hat, and this he got hold of in his teeth and played with for ten minutes, or until he had torn it all to pieces. I had no more bait to fish with, and drew in the line and sat there waiting for the tiger's next move. When he had finished the hat he came over and rubbed against me, and purred in a pleased way, and I rubbed him with my hand from nose to tail. I gradually got over my scare, but was yet very anxious to know how the affair would end. The sun was getting way up and very hot, and the beast would soon be seeking his lair. In about thirty minutes from the time he appeared, the tiger began to show a change of demeanor. He acted nervous and uneasy and the hair on his back stood up at intervals. I judged that he had got the scent of my servant, and such proved to be the case. I dared not rise to my feet, but I made up my mind that if the tiger attacked me I should spring off the bank into the river. It was infested with crocodiles, but there was not much choice between being eaten by beast or saurean. Once the tiger glared at me and growled, but the next moment whined, as if afraid, and edged up toward me, as if for protection. The servant had been keeping a watchful eye on my strange playmate, and he now believed the time had come for decisive action. He therefore fired his pistol and shouted at the top of his voice. The effect was immediate. the beast dropped his tail, uttered a long-drawn whine, and with a sort of farewell glance at me bolted for the forest and disappeared.—Cor. New York Sun.

And will you let me go away without an answer, dear? he said, gently, though his heart was throbbing double throbs. It is all so strange and unexpected, George—the words came soft and low. If sometimes in my dreams the thought has come that you might some day call me—Ah, dear, you must read your answer in my eyes. And the answer read: I'll not let you go away. —Harper's Bazar.

John C. Scarborough,

The Ex-Superintendent of Public Schools, North Carolina, writes as follows:

SELMA, N. C., Feb. 11, 1887.

Gentlemen—Yours inquiring whether or not I had been benefitted by Kaskine, and if so to what extent, etc., to hand. In reply will say that my health has not been as good in twenty years as now. I suffered with chills from malarial poison contracted while serving in the Confederate army on the Peninsular campaigns in Virginia. Did not miss having a chill at least once in twent-one days, and more frequently once in seven days, for more than fifteen years. The result was very poor health and a general letting down of the system which only those similarly affected can appreciate.

In this condition I visited New York in November, 1885, on business. While there I stopped with Mr. E. D. Barker of the University Publishing company. I told Mr. Barker of my condition. He called my attention to your Kaskine and procured for me a bottle. After my return home I took the pellets as directed and found much relief afforded thereby. Of this change I wrote Mr. Barker, who sent two or three bottles during the past year. My health greatly improved. I increased in weight from 165 pounds to 200 pounds, my present weight. I believe the Kaskine did it. Quinine had failed, as had other remedies usually administered in such cases.

Now, unless in case of exposure to bad weather, I do not have chills, and my general health is quite good. I turned over half a bottle to a young lady friend a few weeks since. I learned from her mother that she was much benefitted by it while it lasted.

I trust that you may be able to introduce Kaskine generally in this country, in which many suffer from diseases consequent upon malarial poison in the system. From our own experience I can emphasize its excellence for such diseases. If I can serve you call on me.

I am very truly yours,
JOHN C. SCARBOROUGH.

Other letters of a similar character from prominent individuals, which stamp Kaskine (the new quinine) as a remedy of undoubted merit, will be sent on application.

"His Care."

God holds the key of all unknown,
And I am glad;
If other hands should hold the key,
Or if he trusted it to me,
I might be sad.

What if to-morrow's cares were here
Without its rest?
I had rather He unlock the day,
And as the hours swing open say,
"My will is best."

The very dimness of my sight
Makes me secure,
For, groping in my misty way,
I feel his hand—I hear Him say,
"My help is sure."

I cannot read His future plan,
But this I know,
I have the smiling of His face,
And all the refuge of His grace,
While here below.

Enough; this covers all my wants,
And so I rest;
For what I cannot He can see,
And in His care I sure shall be,
Forever blest.

LAUREL CAMP.

"Oh, boys, how I wish I were going with you!" and dainty Bess Fleming perched herself disconsolately on the arm of the lounge in what her brothers called their "boudoir," and gazed with big, wistful gray eyes on the animated scene before her.

The festive preparations are indeed almost enough to make one wish one had been born a boy. Floor, chairs and tables are covered with a choice, but varied collection of hunting boots, fishing tackle, entomologist's paraphernalia of waxen headed pins, chloroform bottles, and butterfly nets, favorite authors, hammock and other evidences of a "right royal good time." The masculine occupants of the room were all so very deeply engrossed that their envious sister's plaintive wish fell on almost unheeding ears.

Hail muttered: "W-wish you could!" Tom gazed at her through the microscope glass he was polishing, with an eye enormously enlarged thereby, and smiled in conscious masculine superiority; and only good-natured Steenie paused in his struggles with his knapsack (which seemingly declined to accomodate his blanket, a work on anatomy, a gossamer coat and a dismembered gun) sufficiently long to say with genuine brotherly good will:

"And you should go in a minute, Popity—it would be worth ten seasons to you—if it were not for Val Graham."

"Val Graham! Who is he? Let him stay at home, then. To make coffee in a dear little kettle swung on three sticks, to sleep in a hammock, and be out of doors all summer!" cried Miss Fleming, enthusiastically. "Oh, I will go! What's the matter with Mr. Graham! Is he one of your fossilized professors who would pretrify a simple maiden? I don't care what he is, you need not imagine I would find time to look at him. I (magnanimously) won't mind him a bit."

"But, b-b-bless you, my child," ejaculated Hal, energetically, "it's not a question of whether you would mind Val, The boot is on the other leg. It's Val would mind you. There's some romantic story about his being brought up by an uncle who had been cruelly treated by some lovely flirt. Youthful affections trampled on, and all that kind of thing. Takes to the life of a hermit, and educates the ingenuous Valentine to regard with horror the whole female sex. Val would sooner face a 'wenomous wiper' than a woman, and I am confident that if he suspected we meditated such treason as the introduction of the dreaded element, he would flee to the uppermost parts of the earth rather than go with us; and he, the prime suggester of the camping scheme, too! Lastly, and finally, how could such a luxurious little lady rough it with a lot of boys among the jungles of New York State? It's impossible."

"Oh, you can say impossible; but I could go, and you would take me, if it were not for that odious creature. How I hate him!" cried Bess, stormily.

"A letter for you, Mr. Stephen," and the dignified butler steps solemnly over the debris, and looks with stern disapproval at the disordered room.

"From Val himself, is it not, Steenie?" asked Tom.

"Yes. Too bad, he can't go, after all—attack of malaria fever—knows you will have a jolly time. 'Almost desperate when I think of your starting without me," reads Steenie, disjointedly.

"Now I am going!" and Bess starts up impetuously.

"How can you?"

"You'll see. I'll take Martha to take care of me. I'll be ready in an hour, Martha and her budget included," and Bess vanished like a small whirlwind, leaving the trio too much astonished to do ought but stare at each other in silence.

Did she accomplish it? Of course; what other result was possible to so much energy and spirit? By the time the others had finished their remarkable masculine packing, Bess, bubbling over with merry anticipation, was soothing the dazed Martha, who was vibrating between a feeling of gypsyish delight at what seemed to her a mad escapade and gloomy presentments of inevitable rheumatism.

* * * * * * *

The scene shifts to the wilds of the Empire State and a camp established in their depths. This is no mere fashionable tabernacle in the wilderness, but a real camp, with amateur cooks, with spicy hemlock bed, and with a smoke-blackened kettle swinging over as napping fire, the smoke of which curls lazily upwards, making misty the delicate tracery of the waving trees against the soft summer sky, and hammocks swinging like huge coons between the trees, inviting to drowsy repose.

A few yards away an unseen mountain brook tumbles its ice-cold water into the rocky river, and the two sing together in low monotone, telling of fern-fringed pools and gliding trout. Through archways cut in the glossy laurel thicket can be seen the paths that the feet of the straying campers have already worn to the woodland haunts beyond.

But the glory of the camp is the structure variously known as the "house," "shanty" or "Laurel Lodge," Built against a little knoll, its support living trees, its roof of slabs (which the busy little river obligingly strews along its banks from lumber regions further north), slopes almost to the ground at the back. Its sides are a thickly-woven mat of hemlock boughs, held in place by horizontal boards. The facade of the building presents a portal of magnificent proportions from which the portiere of gorgoous quilt (early English) is looped aside, disclosing a floor of slabs, the knapsacks and stores and odorous regions beyond. The dining-room is a leafy roof under which a table is made with the smooth side of the ubiquitous slab uppermost, the supports being trees sawed off at the needed hight. Along the sides of the table seats are arranged, and occupying these seats just at present, are the campers, finishing the noonday meal and discussing with absorbing interest plans for securing a great store of logs and planks which Steenie had discovered in a bend of the river, wedged in among the rocks. To raft them down and bring them in to add to the large pile already drying a few feet from the fire (protected by sloping slabs) against the proverbial rainy day, would be an afternoon's work for the boys. Careful Martha, pail in hand, has started for the blackberry patch a few rods away.

Left to her own sweet company, Miss Fleming proceeded to enjoy herself in her own way. With an armful of books within reach, she ensconced herself in her own particular hammock, with Czar (who was evidently everburdened with a sense of his responsibility in this unusual state of affairs), very wide awake, lying on the ground at her side.

Dipping here and there, now into one book, then into another, and varying the monotony by occasionally slipping out to replenish the fire, she finally became enamored of "Hiawatha" and read it steadily to the end. Folding her idle little hands under her fanciful little head, she was soon lost in a waking dream, in a repose that was almost sleep. The lofty trees were the forest primeval, the "lodge" a wigwam, and she herself a dusky maiden awaiting the return of the stately redskinned warriors from the chase.

She was roused from her reverie by a low growl from the watchful Czar; in the one moment she heard a crackling of twigs, and the next saw, with startled eyes, a masculine figure emerge from one of the side paths, and heard a surprised, "I beg your pardon, madam, but I have been wandering in this infer—this beastly laurel thicket the greater part of the day. Can you direct me to the—"

By this time Bess, fully awakened, had decided with womanly intuition that the intruder was a gentleman in the fullest sense of the word, and noting the weariness in the quiet words and the steady brown eyes she rose quickly, with hospitable purpose intent; but with her thoughts still tinged with "Hiawatha," she said, whimsically:

"If the pale-faced stranger tarry by this camp-fire until the warriors return, they will guide him through the forest to the wigwam he seeks."

"I think I will not trouble you—" began the other, uneasily; but the brave daughter of the forest, made as usual more determined by opposition, said firmly:

"But the child of the bald-headed eagle will he obey," and, seconded by Czar, who was plainly divided between the conflicting desire to swear eternal friendship to the newcomer or to spring upon him with felt intent, she motioned him to the hammock she had just left.

Bess watched him with puzzled eyes as he flung himself upon her cushions. Seeing the pallor about the firm mouth that told of physical suffering, an inspiration, born of her experience as the sister of three brothers, came to the rescue, and with hopeful face she said: "Watch him, Czar," and moved quickly away.

In a few minutes the fragrant odor of coffee was wafted to the straggler with such reviving effect that he opened wide his nearly closed eyes and gazed with deep interest on the busy figure at the fire before him. Aside from her occupation so pleasing to the manly contemplation, the figure itself was well worthy of study. The slim lithe young form was clothed in a dark-green flannel, without furbelows or snarls of any kind to perplex the eye. The rebellious dark hair hung in a heavy braid behind and escaped in wavy locks on the smooth forehead. The fire had flushed the sweet face that was brooding with such an absorbed expression over the coffee-pot.

In a second more the coffee-pot was steaming on a hot stone by the fire, and Miss Fleming disappeared in the direction of the murmuring river, to reappear with cool water. From one of these some trout were soon gaily sputtering over the fire; then from a mysterious chest appeared fresh bread, and from other pails golden butter, cream and blackberries, and our traveler was soon partaking of a most appetizing little repast, under which reviving influence he forgot the embarrassment that had nearly consumed him. Soon a responsive chord was struck by two nature-loving hearts, and they were chatting like old friends. Bess produced a curious bug that puzzled her natural history, and the brown hair and the dark bent over it. At this thrilling moment the raftsmen, each with an armful of planks, arrived on the scene. The biologists turn.

"Boys, this gentleman——" began Bess.

"Val Graham!" exclaimed the three, in startled chorus.

"Who? Not Val Graham!" cried Bess, with horror-filled eyes and paling cheek; but, reading confirmation in the faces before her, she drops hastily the precious bug, flashes an angry glance at the owner of that name, and turning runs swiftly into the weeds.

"What have I done? Who is she," he asks with a perplexed look.

"Why, its our Bess, and she knows you hate girls and won't want her here. How did you hapen to come? Thought you were sick!" questioned the boys.

"So I was, but I am better; only I lost myself in this maze and nearly tramped myself to death—if it hadn't been for her coffee," he continued, awkwardly. "How could I hate to have her here?" he adds so enthusiastically, that Hal retires suddenly behind the house and remarks: "Well, I'll be b-b-blesed!" to his boots.

How can the days that follow be described? Golden, sunshiny days, filled with simple pleasures. But, as a reliable chronicler, I am very sorry that I cannot say Miss Fleming's temper was all serene. Toward the unoffending Valentine she bore an enmity that neither time nor familiarity seemed to soften. Occasionally she would unbend so far as to allow that gentleman to assist in her investigations into the flora of the region of country in which they were.

Can you guess what a revelation this sweet, tantalizing girl was to a young man who had never known a woman's love? Day after day to watch the merry petting of those big brothers, and then to recall his lonely childhood and youth. Is not the fate of this poor Val easily surmised?

Tramping alone by the riverside, Val at last discovers and acknowledges to himself the cause of the vague wretchedness of the past weeks—acknowledges with a sickening realization that his happiness for life is in the hands of a girl who has only an unreasoning hatred, or, at best, a supreme indifference, to give him; and he grinds his boot-heel into the soft turf as he goes slowly toward the camp.

A sudden turn around a clump of fringed hung birches, and Mr. Graham beholds a spectacle which drives away from him all thoughts of his own troubles.

Upon a gnarly old tree, leaning far out over the river, sits Miss Bess, plainly disconsolate. In the pool below her, her hat is slowly sailing around like a gondola of new design. At the sound of footsteps she raises her head; but as her eyes met his, the welcome gleam of hope in them gives way to a flash of ire, and she says petulantly:

"Oh, I hoped you were Steenie."

"I'm sorry," he says, gently, "but Steenie would not help you more gladly than I would, were it in my power."

After a pause, during which the girl's tears puzzled him, he continued, quietly:

"Let us go home to the boys and our camp-fire. It is getting late. You will take cold there; and you have lost your hat, too."

"Not at all," returns Bess. "I am only leaving it there till I come down. I am waiting for the sunset, but you need not wait too."

"But I should like to."

A long pause ensues. Miss Fleming apparently gives rapt attention to some soft, fluffy little clouds flushed to a rose-pink by the setting sun. Mr. Graham as intently gives his whole mind, aided by his good right arm, to the recovery of the truant hat, which eludes his impromptu fishing-pole with an agility which seems to prove it endowed with the spirit of its owner.

"I wish you would come down now," he breaks forth, landing as he speaks his dripping and somewhat dilapidated prize. "You don't look comfortable up there."

"Well, I'm not," she replied, with unlooked-for energy and a hysterical mingling of tears and laughter. "The branch that helped me up here broke off, and then floated down the river. Every time I have tried to get down I have nearly pitched into the water, so I have sat here for hours like a graven image, and my two feet fast asleep. I'd have jumped in long ago, before you found me sitting here like an idiot," she concludes, vehemently, "only it looks so deep down there."

As she finishes he had found a firm footing among the roots of her tree, and with a gravity which causes Bessie to regard him with suspicion, says, in a business-like way:

"If you will lean forward a trifle, I will place you on terra firma and we will go."

But Miss Fleming has resumed her contemplation of the sky, and without glancing at him, says, wilfully:

"I told you before that I intended to stay here to see the sunset. You are so evidently in haste, you may go. But be sure and tell Steenie I want him."

Valentine's arms fell, his face whitens, and his voice rings with passionate anger.

"So I may not even touch your hand, and I would give my life for you! You have nothing but undeserved contempt for me, and I—I love you!"

He folds his arms upon the tree and drops his head upon them, as if the end of all things had indeed come.

Bessie's eyes are looking far away, and within them a new sweet light of self-revelation grows and deepens.

The little clouds are growing gray; the cool twilight seems to creep closer, with its soft, cool languor and its blurring shadows. The wind sighs through the trees in low, sad whispers; the murmur of the river sounds clear and loud. A saucy bird, very near, suddenly gives a shrill, startling cry, and Bess stirs uneasily, and with her eyes dropped to the helpless little boots, says nervously, with an argumentative air:

"This out-of-door life is very healthful, don't you think?"

At this apparently irrelevant remark Valentine raises his head and looks at her in great amazement.

"I have grown so very stout and heavy," she continues, bravely, "that I do not think you could lift me down."

"I am quite willing to try," he says, with an eager sarcasm; and with the color flushing her sweet face, she leans toward him with outstretched hands.

I cannot tell you anything more, except that, as they came into camp arm in arm, with a new light in their faces, Hal's boots received an especial benediction; Martha knocked over the coffee-pot in a fit of bewilderment, Czar upset Steenie in the exuberance of his joy; while Tom, in an aside asked: "What will Uncle Ralph say?"

A VICTIM OF THE DROUGHT.

On the ever glourious Fourth a confiding shop-keeper on Michigan Grand avenue mixed up a tubful of lemonade and took his seat behind it, with the exclamation to the public:—

"Nice, cool lemonade and the old-fashioned tin dipper! Come and drink all you can hold for five cents!"

He was s[illegible] patronized, but the tenth or eleventh man who came up was a negro. He was built with a basement and bay-window, and he had a mouth on him which would take in Billy Kersand's whole head.

"How much for five cents?" he carelessly inquired.

"All you want."

"No chokin' off?"

"No sir. Pick up the dipper and drink away."

The stranger put down his nickle and took off his hat and drank a full quart.

Then he uttered a long-drawn "y-u-m!" and took off his coat and got away with two more dippers.

"Hain't you about full?" anxiously inquired the owner of the tub.

"Purty full, but not quite, sah."

Off went the vest and the dipper was filled and emptied three times, with only a breath between.

"Say! you've got away with a whole gallon!" called the lemonade man as a thunder cloud worked along his brow.

"I specks I hev, sah, but dar was to be no chokin' off. All dese gem'len heard de bargain."

He sat down on a barrel, removed his shoes, crossed his legs, and it did seem as if he imbibed another gallon before he let up long enough to remark:—

"Does seem powerful good to hev Fo'th of July come again."

'Say, man, do you propose to empty the tub?"

"Can't say, sah. Reckon I'll put in about an hour mo' heah."

"Are you a hog or a man?'

"A man moas' allus, but when I strike a snap like dis I kin drap a few pegs. Please stir up dat mixture, fur I'm awful dry again!"

"I'll be hanged if I do! How much to quit?"

"Fifty cents, sah."

"I give you thirty."

The negro swallowed another pint, explained that he had been dry for six weeks, and he finally took thirty cents, six pieces of lemon and a chunk of ice and agreed to haul off, saying to the crowd:—

"Gem'len, I reckon I'ze got to fill up de rest of de space wid cl'ar water, an' if any of you kin tell me whar' dar' is a hydrant open I shall be greatly obleeged."—Free Press.

LIFE IN SARATOGA.

It costs a snug sum of money to spend a summer in Saratoga. During the regular season the hotels consider that they are doing a losing business if they charge less than $5 a day for a single room and board. Some of their cottage suites, which consist of a parlor and two or three bedrooms, are rented at $250 a week. Most of these apartments at both the larger hotels, are already taken. There are three specially fine rooms in the Grand union, now occupied by a gentleman and his daughter. They pay $40 a day for their fun. Many families here who enjoyed special advantages in the size and location of their apartments are taxed in simular figures. When to this is added the expense of their servants and their horses and carriages, it may be seen that to do the lordly act in Saratoga is not cheap. The private stables are a great feature of the place. In the fashionable parts of the town the residences occupy one street, and the next one is given up to stables. Nearly every family occupying a cottage uses its own equestrian establishment. Judge Hilton keeps no less than twenty-six horses of proud degree. He has a great family coach drawn by four large bay horses, which he uses on exalted occasions. Signor Garcia, whose name on a cigar box promises a pleasant hour, drives a couple of breezy black mares, who would feel ashamed of themselves if they finished a mile in more than 2:30. "Ed" Kearney keeps as many steeds as he has fingers, and drives them all the time. Josiah Belden dashes around in a Victoria drawn by a bay and a gray. George Bless, the banker, employs five nags, three of them being Kentucky sorrels trained to the saddle and full of Blue Grass fire. These are among the owners of notable horses. When it comes to those that drives the ordinary fashionable turnout, their names would easily fill a column.—New York Tribune.

DADDY WILLIAMS'S BIBLE TRICK.

There lived near Alexandria, in Virginia, an old colored man and woman, whom their acquaintances called Daddy and Mammy Williams. He had had educational advantages, and could read in a fashion peculiarly his own: but his wife, although lacking as regards erudition, possessed great force of character, which she often displayed in a manner that was very irritating to her husband. When she became particularly fractious, Daddy would take the Bible, and open to that chapter in Revelation beginning: "And there appeared a great wonder in heaven, a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet," etc.

With impressive solemnity he would read as follows: "An dere 'peared a great wonder in heben, a woman!" Slowly closing the book, he would gaze sternly at his now subdued wife, for the passage never failed to produce the desired effect.—Harper's Magazine.

Just So.

The tide comes in and the tide goes out,
And a hundred tides are the same as one,
For who can say what I am writing about,
And what is it all when all is done,
But dipping my pen in the ink, and then,
Oh! nothing but taking it out again!

For people must read a great deal of rot,
(And rubbish and rot are the same as one,)
They may as well read what I write, why not?
But what is it all, when all is done?
Some lines of type, and the meter rough,
And not an idea in the whole of the stuff.

THE TRUTHFUL MARINER'S YARN.

"Talking of life-preservers," said the truthful mariner, as he knocked the ashes out of his pipe, "you remember the old steamer Roustabout that used to run from Buffalo to Chicago. I was mate on her the year before she was lost. We were about 60 miles out from Chicago when Mike Lanagan, who was doing something up on the mast, fell, struck his head on the roof of the cabin and bounced clean out into the lake. Well, the captain he see him fall and he stopped and backed that old Roustabout quicker'n you could say 'scat.' Mike went down like a plummet, for he was knocked insensible, and I knowed there was no use to heave a life-preserver for him, so I just hurried up the boys in getting the boat down, although I didn't expect it 'ud do much good. We had Jim King on board. Passenger from Chicago. You remember Jim King, don't you?"

"Can't say that I do," remarked by a bystander.

"Well, Jim was champion quoit thrower in them days. He's dead now, poor fellow, but Jim was a hoss on throwing quoits. I tell you quoits was a great game them days. Every village had a quoit club, and the boys on the farms used to throw horse shoes. It was somethin' like base ball in those times, although I never could see as much fun in base ball as I could see in a game o' quoits."

"Oh, come off," cried the impatient listener. "What did Jim do? or did he do anything? Did the man drown?"

"Now, don't be too fly. Who's tellin this yarn?"

"Well, you don't seem to be."

"Go on! Go on!" said the crowd.

"Well, you know, in quoits a 'ringer' was when you put the quoit around the stake. It counted double. Well, Jim, he picks up the round life-preserver, it's like a great big quoit, you know, and as the cap'n came runnin' aft, Jim he sings out, 'Cap'n, I'll bet you $5 I'll make a ringer on that man if he comes up within the length of this line."

"'Bet you $20 you can't," said the cappen.

"'Take you," said Jim, and jest at that minit up bobs Mike's head about 60 feet astern. Jim threw, and I'll be durned if that life-preserver didn't go plump over Mike's head clear down on his shoulders and there it stuck. We got down the boat and when we got to Mike he hadn't come too yet and didn't for some time after. He'd been agoner if it hadn't bin fur that ringer, although it took the skin offen his nose."

"Did the captain pay the $20?"

"Pay it? You jist bet he did. And Jim he handed it over to Mike, and Mike he blew it all in when he got to Detroit. I wish some of it was here now fur I'm mighty dry. Thanks. Don't mind if I do. —Detroit Free Press.

SOME THINGS TO REMEMBER IN HOT WEATHER.

Remember:

That a conversation can be carried on just as well on either side of a screen door, as with standing with it half open;

That sulphur burned weekly at the rate of a half-pound or so at a time in your cellar, tightly closed for the purpose, will sweeten it, and kill many germs of disease which may be lurking there to poison you;

That if you will only think so, a good standard book will make you forget the heat, just as well as will one of these trashy productions called the "summer novel;"

That keeping busy is the best antidote for the heat;

That toast, eggs, rice, macaroni, fresh fruit and vegetables, milk and creals, are far better for summer eating than meats, cakes, or rich "made dishes,"

That it is well to put some plain goodies in your bag for strange children and a great deal of love and charity in your heart, when you start on a journey in the heat and dust;

That the water-pipe and drains should be flushed and scalded, and well filled with copperas or some other good disinfectant as often as once a week at least;

That a week or two of rest now, in different air from that of your home, may save you from a fit of sickness in the fall or winter;

That half the divorce suits are said to begin in August and that we must all keep constantly in mind its reputation as the most trying month of the year for the body and the temper.—Congregationalist.

A DRAMA IN ONE ACT.

Curtain goes up. Young woman discovered seated on young man's lap. They embrace noiselessly. Door at back opens. Husband appears in traveling suit. They do not near him. He lays down his valise and umbrella, and taking out a revolver, fires.

Ping (woman falls dead).

Ping (lover falls dead).

Husband advances, puts on his eye-glass, and gazes at them.

Husband—"Heavens! I'm on the wrong floor."

In Yorkshire, when the clergyman asks the bridegroom if he will have the woman to be his wedded wife, the man will not unfrequently turn to the woman and say: "Wilt tha' black my boots?" and the woman will invariably say, "I wilt," and the man then rejoins, "Now, tha'st said it," and he holds her to her word.—Exchange.

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, AUGUST 26, 1887.

COL. JONAS H. FRENCH has been selected to preside at the Democratic state convention.

AN average corn crop is now promised for the West in spite of the terrible drouth, thanks to late rains.

OF the 55,157 postmasters in the country over 45,000 are now Democrats, appointed by President Cleveland. Hurrah for Reform, with a big, big R!

A PROCESSION over six miles long, containing 50,000 veterans, 1000 musicians, 200 drummers and so on, is the spectacle which St. Louis expects next month, at the Grand Army reunion. It will be worth seeing.

It has been decided that President Cleveland will start on his western trip in season to reach St. Louis October 1, and he will remain there through the three following days, leaving for Chicago on the night of the 4th.

IT is said by scientists that the sun is losing its heat. That's the natural result of improvidence. If Old Sol hadn't been so extravagant with his caloric during the past few weeks his reservoir would be a good deal fuller.

INDEPENDENT political action in state affairs this year is proposed by the Knights of Labor, and a convention of Knights and other labor organizations is called to meet in Boston Septempber 10, for the purpose of nominating state officers.

The British government has proclaimed the Irish National League as a dangerous association, and Irishmen can now be thrown into prison for the simple expression of a political opinion in a political club. This unwise step is likely to make the dominant party a good deal of trouble, and will undoubtedly hasten the return of the liberals to power.

HERE is a temperance lecture in short meter from last week's Springfield Homestead:—

A young man of about 30, who was once an Apollo in form and feature and had the best of health, died a drunkard within a few days, so bloated that one would hardly know him. He had never worked for a living, being supported by well-to-do relatives, and spent all his spare time in saloons, drinking constantly. The last few months of his life he had to drink, and did drink two quarts of whisky a day to keep him up, yet he never seemed intoxicated as far as speech and coherency go. His body was poisoned through and through with alcohol.

HENRY GEORGE, the Labor candidate for mayor of New York last fall, when he polled 68,000 votes, has got himself nominated as the candidate of the United Labor party for secretary of the state, on substantially the same platform. But he will lose the socialistic vote, and with the labor interests of the state divided into several factions he will have hard work to secure a very heavy vote, even with the help of Dr. McGlynn.

ALVAN CLARK, the celebrated telescope maker, whose lenses are the finest in the world, died at Cambridge last Friday, at the age of 83. Mr. Clark left his father's farm in Ashfield at the age of 22, and became a designer in Lowell print mills, subsequently becoming a portrait painter, and it was not until he was 42 years old that he took up the work in which he made so brilliant a reputation. He leaves two sons in the business.

AT the recent session of the American Association for the Advancement of Science a resolution was passed urging the president not to deprive the scientific branches of the public service of the services of scientific men to direct them. This action was due to the weakening of the Coast Survey service by the removal of Prof. Hilyard, one of the ablest men in that branch of service, while his successor was simply a clerk. But the scientists must learn that to be a Democrat in the quintessence of all science when it comes to office-holding.

TRADE DOLLARS will not be redeemed by the government after September 3, and holders of the coin must present it speedily if they would receive par for it. When the redemption act was under consideration in Congress the director of the mint estimated that there were 7,036,792 of these dollars in the country, and there have been redeemed up to date a little over 7,400,000 of them, showing a very nice estimate. It is quite probably that some of this excess is due to imports of the coin from China, some 30,000,000 of the dollars having been sent there when they were coined.

Regarding the failure to secure a two-thirds vote for the prohibitory amendment to the constitution at the last session of the Legislature, the Worcester Spy talks sensibly as follows:

As to the prohibitory amendment, the action of the Republican party was straightforword and honest. In its platform it recommended the submission of this amendment to the people. In the Legislature the Republicans, with a few exceptions, voted to submit it. The resolve failed because a few Republicans did not think with their party that the question ought to be submitted to the people, and did not recognize the right of a party convention to control their action as legislators. But to say that the Republican party was not sincere in its attempt to pass the resolve because it could not compel every one of its members to vote for it, is as unreasonable as it would be to deny that the Republican party in Congress was opposed to the Morrison Tariff bill because three or four Minnesota Republicans voted for it.

A sad event occurred at New London last Friday, in the death of Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Miller of New York within two hours of each other of pneumonia, leaving five young children. Mrs. Miller was a sister to Vice President Rumrill, of the Boston & Albany Railroad.

Judge Augustus Lord Soule, a distinguished member of the Hampden county bar, and a former justice of the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts, died at his home in Franconia, N. H., yesterday morn- at the age of 60 years.

The English steamer Madrid, which sailed from Norfolk, Va., June 16th for London, has not been heard from since, and is given up for lost, with her crew of 25 men.

St. Gaudens, the New York sculptor, is said to be modeling a bust of Mrs. Cleveland, who has been giving him sittings during her visit at Marion.

A stay of proceedings has been granted in the case of Boodler Sharpe, so he will not go to Sing Sing at present.

The Vermonters are a very careful set of people, as demonstrated by a party of 210 which came down from Brattleboro last Friday on an excursion to Block Island. They made the Block Island train wait 15 minutes for them at this station, until they had procured traveler's accident insurance tickets.

The horse attached to White & Eppley's marble team became frightened by the breaking of a thill this morning, at the corner of Church and Main streets, and ran, throwing Mr. Eppley out and somewhat bruising his face. The horse brought up in Clark & Hastings's wagon shed, unharmed except for a few small cuts.

John Thayer, of Thayer & Royce, proprietors of Forest Lake, has exchanged his half of the property for a restaurant in Keene, N. H., with Miss Mary Oliver, the new firm to be known as the Forest Lake Company. The season at the Lake will not close September 1st, as reported by some, but will continue until the first of November at least.

The item in last weeks' JOURNAL regarding Foreman Tobin of the Central Massachusetts road appears to have done an unintentional injustice to Mr. Tobin, as James Tobin of Ware comes forward as the person referred to, and indignantly denies his reported disappearance. He says he has no money to throw away, but he has always paid his debts and always proposes to.

A team owned by Superintendent Stockwell of the Palmer Wire Manufacturing Company collided with a yeast cart which it was trying to pass at Thorndike Tuesday, and the former was badly smashed. The team contained two or three female occupants who were thrown to the ground and somewhat cut and bruised. The horse ran to this village where it was stopped.

DISTRICT COURT.

The cases of C. P. Stone, John Feeney and Honora A. Dunn, for illegal liquor keeping, were heard before Judge Robinson at the district court Monday. Each was convicted and fined $50 and costs. All appealed to the superior court, furnishing $200 in sureties. Willie Brisette of Palmer was called to answer for an alleged assault upon Nelson Dupell. He paid costs amounting to $3.43 for the offense. Brisette also had a hearing for another assault upon Joseph A. Sweet. He was convicted and paid $4.50 additional. S. L. Ferry had a preliminary hearing on the matter of a search-warrant which was returned to the court, and the liquor was ordered forfeited. In a civil case of Lynch vs. Hitchcock, for an action of contract, the decision was rendered in favor of the former, the latter paying $18.75. Joseph Griffin, of Hartford, was arraigned Thursday morning, charged with an assault upon Silas Collis, and also charged with drunkenness. For the first offense he was ordered to pay $8.97, and for the second, $7.45. He was committed to the county jail for failing to meet the demand. These entries were made at the recent civil term: Joseph Langlois of Three Rivers vs. Russell Jenks, for action of contract; Gardner for plaintiff, no appearance for defendant. Annie Lanphear of Monson vs. Harriet Chaffee, for action of contract; Day for plaintiff, Gardner.

THE ANNUAL FAIR

OF THE EASTERN HAMPDEN AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The directors of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society held a special meeting Monday and perfected nearly all the arrangements for the annual fair, excepting the matter of engaging a band of music. It was arranged to have a game of ball the first day between the Palmers and Thorndikes, and the second day between the Palmers and the Monsons, for a purse of $25 each day. The various committees in charge of the horticultural department are working diligently, and propose to have the best exhibition of farm produce ever seen in the hall. The following is the programme for both days as well as it can be arranged at present: Tuesday forenoon will be devoted almost entirely to the exhibition of fancy cattle, while in the afternoon there will be a one-mile bicycle race open to all riders in Eastern Hampden, for two prizes. The first prize is a fine photograph album, and the second Byron's complete works. Following this will be the exhibition of the members' trotting class, to trot nearest to 3½ minutes. First premium, $10; second, $4; third, $3. There will also be other races, while prior to the above will occur the exhibition of single and double work horses. First premium for double, $4; second, $3; third, $2. First premium for single, $3; second, $2. Single carriage horses follow. First premium, $5; second, $4; third, $3; fourth, $2. Wednesday forenoon will be devoted to the exhibition of gentlemen's first class single driving horses, not having made better time than three minutes, first $50; second, $25; third, $10. Second class: First preminm $75;, second, $35; third, $15. All horses which have never made better time than 2.45 will be admitted to the above class. Third class: First premium, $100; second $50; third, $25. All horses not having made better than 2.30 will be admitted to this class. The distance will be one-mile heats, best three in five to harness, national rules to govern. The exhibition of colts, mares and draught horses will take place the same day. In the afternoon there will be a five mile bicycle race. First prize, a gold medal; second, three volumes of Shakespeare's works; third, a three-fold mirror. The next event will be a greased-pole contest, for a prize of $15. Succeeding this is a hurdle race, open to men and boys. First prize, $6; second, $4; third, $2. There will also be a gymnastic exhibition by the children from the state primary school, with, perhaps, a few minor athletic events. The society has adopted new rules this year in many instances, one of importance being that the same animal cannot compete in more than one class. All entries on stock must be made one day prior to the fair. "Our Cattle Show," a four-page paper devoted to the interests of advertisers and the society, will be issued from the JOURNAL job department during the fair, and distributed gratuitously. The attractions this year are intended to surpass anything of the kind held in years preceeding. Dr. William Holbrook is president, O. P. Allen secretary, and C. W. Johnson chief marshal.

BASE BALL.

THE PALMERS DEFEAT THE HOMESTEADS OTHER GAMES.

Nearly 400 people witnessed the game between the Palmers and Homesteads of Springfield on the park last Saturday afternoon, when the former team added another victory to the ones already attained. The game was somewhat loosely contested, although the visiting team has a good reputation and should have made the game close and interesting. The Homesteads took their first inning. Cunningham reached first by a wild throw to McManamy who allowed the ball to pass. The runner stole second and subsequently third, and finally brought in the first run. Three others went to the bat and were struck out by Rooney. The first inning for the Palmers was not a profitable one. Rooney hit well but was caught out by short stop. Kinare went to the bat and made a base hit, but was put out while stealing bases. McGrath made a safe hit and reached second and third, but closed the inning by getting out while running between third and home. Keegan and Tatro went to the bat in the Homesteads' second inning and were quickly struck out. Kennedy followed and made a base hit. A wild throw by McGrath to first allowed the runner to reach second, but he was stopped short while attempting to reach third. The Palmers' second inning was a fortunate one. Betts went to the bat first, but struck out. M. Rooney made a safe base hit, and had little trouble in reaching second and third. A pass ball then brought in the first run, and Woodard got out, while prior to this McManamy brought in the second run. In the Homesteads' third inning one man reached second bag, while the others got out at bat. The third was a very successful inning for the Palmers, for Guess, the Homesteads' pitcher, was batted terrifically. Rooney brought in the first run in this inning by a fine hit which allowed him to reach third by stolen bases, while Kenare's pretty fly in center field also sent him home. McGrath hit safely and reached first, but was put out while stealing bases. Betts made first bag by a safe hit. Rooney knocked a pretty fly out of the reach of any player and got his first, while Betts brought in a run. Sugrue made an unfortunate hit and got out, while the effective hit of McManamy brought in Rooney, who had stolen second and third bases. McManamy also came in. Miller hit the ball well but a good short stop and an assist to first shut the side out after scoring five runs. The visitors were "rattled" at this point, and the crowd cheered loudly. The fourth inning for the team from Springfield proved a "Jonah," due to the effective work of the local battery. In the Palmers' fourth inning Tatro caught, as Griffin could not hold Guess, who pitched a very swift ball with a very perceptible drop curve, while otherwise his in and out shoots were considered far ahead of any pitcher excluding Cotter, that has been on the diamond this season. Rooney brought in the only run that was scored in this inning, the others failing to make connections while stealing bases. In the Homesteads' fifth inning McCarthy struck out, while Cunningham hit to Miller who stopped the ball nicely but then made a wild throw to first. Guess brought in a run this inning, by poor judgment of the local team in throwing to bases. The others struck out. Betts made the only run in the fifth inning for the Palmers by a safe hit to left field. The others struck out or were captured while trying to steal bases. The Palmers did excellent work in the sixth, seventh and eighth innings, Betts getting every man out in the sixth. Kenare caught a difficult fly in the right field the next inning when there were two men out and three men on bases. The score in the sixth inning stood 9 to 2 in favor of the local team, the visiting team having been shut out during the last three innings, while before the Palmers' sixth terminated two more runs were added making the score read 11 to 2. The Palmers made one in the seventh by loose fielding and two in the eighth by fortunate batting. Tatro went to the bat in the Homesteads' ninth and made a hit to Betts who assisted to first, but McManamy dropped it and the runner was safe. He stole second and third and brought in the only score made in that inning. The game was an unusually quiet one, and much credit is due the visitors for good conduct. The score follows:

The Baptist parsonage is being painted and otherwise repaired. It will soon be occupied by the minister whom the society has lately called to the pastorate of the church.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

Many of the members of Grace church are improving the opportunity to hear the neighboring preachers while Rev. Mr. Dudley is away.

The ball club that went to Thorndike last Saturday came home with crape instead of laurel on their hats, but feel that one tally is better than nothing.

The "oldest inhabitant" never heard of so much water in the river at this season of the year. It looks like the spring freshet. The Collins Mfg. Co's. dam is in rather a bad fix. The water had washed a big hole under the apron and had loosened the timbers. A gang of men with a diver was at work on it when the hard showers of last week brought the water up again and washed about seventy-five feet of the apron away from the dam. Fears were entertained that the dam itself might go, but it is not thought to be in immediate danger. The section of the apron washed away is anchored on the rocks down stream, and is pretty well covered with wheelbarrows and tools.

BRIMFIELD.

Miss Carrie E. Bacon is visiting at Lyman Webster's.

Samuel B. Clapp of Brooklyn, N. Y., is stopping at Mrs. E. T. Sherman's.

Rev. Father Lee returned from his European trip Wednesday evening. He was met at the depot by a procession, escorted to Central Hall, and presented with a purse of $200. The usual amount of speech making was indulged in, and a social dance followed.

WARREN.

There is quite a fever in real estate just at present.

Messers Gould, Heritage and Jones have gone on a trip to Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Morgan and Carlotta returned to Hartford to-day.

Mr. and Mrs. Jenks have returned from their summering at Cottage City.

A. L. Converse has started on a western trip, and will go as far as Denver.

Dr. J. W. Hastings attended the reunion of his regiment at Fitchburg, Tuesday.

Rev. Jesse Forbes returned to New York Wednesday after having spent his vacation in Warren.

Quite a number of those who failed to go on the last excursion to Boston are planning to go on the next one.

The roads and walks have been badly washed by the heavy rains, and there are calls for repairs in many places.

Professor Hitchcock of Strait University gave a very interesting address at the Congregational Chapel Sunday night.

Edward Fairbanks has gone on a trip to the Adirondacks, and hopes to be able to tell some big fish stories when he returns.

The small boy is happy over the prospect of a circus, the first that has visited Warren for many years. Surely this is a sign that Warren is growing.

WEST WARREN.

Mrs. M. J. Weston is visiting friends in Springfield.

Mrs. Elizabeth Carter and her daughter Alla, are visiting friends in Bristol, Conn.

Joseph F. Davis and Henry Brann, camped at Forest Lake last week with friends from Thorndike.

Edward Vigneaux has bought John Merritt's barber shop on North street. Merritt intends to move to Springfield.

Henry S. Howe of Warren has taken some five views of the four mills that are meeting with ready sales among the employes.

The Warren Cotton Mills are being troubled by back water, a very unusual thing at this time, when they are usually on short time, owing to low water.

The new railroad bridge west of the station has just been completed, and is pronounced the strongest bridge for its size in New England. It was built by R. F. Hawkins of Springfield.

The West Warrens will play ball at Gilbertville to-morrow. The team has been recognized and with the addition of some new material they are capable of making a good showing against the other clubs.

A French family by the name of BeLair was arrested Monday for fishing on Sunday at No. 4 mill pond. Better take up some of the noisy, lawless berry grabbers, scaling the lots seeking what they can devour.

The villagers will have their fill of amusements next week. Groton's New Orleans minstrels occupy the boards at Washington hall Monday night, and Walter L. Main's circus will exhibit Friday afternoon and evening, and the excursion to Boston Friday will probably attract a good many.

WALES.

The recent rains have washed our roads badly.

Mrs. Lydia Shaw of New York is visiting friends here.

Miss Abbie Parker of Springfield is spending the week among friends.

Miss Mamie Royce has returned from a three-weeks' trip to the White Mountains.

The painters are busy putting the finishing touches on the school houses in town.

J. M. Lyon found two of his sheep dead this week, supposed to have been killed by dogs.

Miss Anna Clark of Hartford has arrived for her annual visit among old acquaintances.

Miss Susie A. P. Back and daughter, of Warren, are spending a week at Samuel B. Perry's.

The tax collector gives notice that the six per cent discount will expire with the month of August.

Charles A. Royce has returned to Boston after a visit of two weeks among the scenes of his native town.

E. Shaw and wife and Miss Anna Burly returned from the Vineyard Tuesday, where they have been for a few days.

O. C. Switzer's coach is kept busy taking the city company to picnics and places of note. He will try a route to Pisga's lofty heights next week.

The Chaffee place in the west part of the town has been sold at auction to Isaiah Hiscock by the Wales Savings Bank, under foreclosure of mortgage.

Rev. W. Stubbert of Putnam, will preach at the Baptist chuech next Sunday, morning and evening. This will close his month's labor here. Schools commence next Monday.

Aaron Shaw of Philadelphia has arrived with his span of bays to spend a few weeks among the hills of his boyhood, and many a sad heart is made glad and happy by the pleasant rides his team affords.

George S. Rogers has a 4½ months old Plymouth Rock pullet that has laid an egg a day for three successive days this week.

The ladies' aid society of the Baptist church held a pound social Monday evening in the vestry, by which the treasury was replenished about $15. An interesting program was gotten up to entertain the company for an hour, which was very pleasing to all who attended. It consisted of recitations by Miss Edith Boyden of Worcester and Miss Kate Rogers of Rochester, N. Y., and music and singing by local talent assisted by Mr. Chapin and Charles Royce of Boston, Mrs. Pervale of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Miss Nellie Needham of Brooklyn, daughter of H. M. Needham. Mr. Harry Needham of Brooklyn, N. Y., officiated as auctioneer, and kept the boys cheerful and ready to bid by his social and easy manner. Although it rained furiously without, all seemed to have a good social time, and went away feeling that they had enjoyed a very pleasant hour.

WARE AND VICINITY.

W. L. Main's show and museum is to be here on Saturday, September 3d.

Rev. L. Holmes of Charlton will exchange pulpits with Rev. B. V. Stevenson next Sunday.

The Dalys played their new piece, "Upside Down," in the town hall on Monday evening to a fairly full house which seemed to enjoy the entertainment.

John F. Robinson has put in an entirely new lot of furniture in his hardware store. The stock which was damaged by fire and water has been entirely disposed of.

Saturday morning Peter Strahan, while driving Wesson's team down Steven's hill, fell to the ground and the loaded team passed over his arm near the shoulder, badly breaking it. The arm was treated by Dr. D. W. Miner. He is a little more comfortable now, but in a bad condition, and it is feared that it will be necessary to remove the arm.

Lucius Gibbs, a farmer living about two and one-half miles out of the village on the Palmer road, was badly beaten last Friday by William Bradley of Warren. It seems that there had been some dispute the day previous, concerning the wages that Bradley was to receive, which became quite animated. On Friday morning they were both in the barn milking when Bradley took a milking stool, knocked Gibbs over, and beat him about the head quite seriously. He was not expected to live, but has improved. Bradley was arrested by the sheriff of Warren near Brimfield, and has been taken to Northampton.

THE NEW PAROCHIAL SCHOOL.

The new convent and parochial school connected with the church of Our Lady of Mount Carmel is approaching completion, the carpenters, painters and finishers putting on the last touches. By the kindness of Rev. J. T. Sheehan, under whose superintendence the buildings have been erected, we are able to give the following description: The buildings are most pleasantly located in the northerly part of the village, on high ground overlooking a large tract of surrounding country, between North and Church streets, and are reached for the present from North street by a lane running by the old Lathrop place. The convent or teachers' residence, is 38 by 38 feet, two stories, beside basement and rooms in the French roof. It faces the west and is entered on the front by broad steps and a pleasant piazza. The basement contains the kitchen, dining room and pantries, laundry and storeroom. The walls here are 8½ feet high. There are wide passages leading to the different apartments. At the right of the entrance on the first floor is the reception room, connecting with the chapel by folding doors, while to the left is the parlor, in the rear of which is the sacristy. The rooms on this floor are all 10 feet in the clear, with broad halls and stairways leading to the rooms above. On the second floor is the infirmary, the Sister Superior's room and sleeping apartments, a spare room and a sewing room. On the upper floor are seven sleeping rooms and a store room. A passage 18 feet long connects this building with the school building, in which are four school rooms, two of which are 25 feet 6 inches by 22 feet, the other two being 31 by 22, and 33 by 22, with cloak rooms, closets and passages between them. The desks for the school rooms are of the latest pattern furnished by W. A. Choat & Co. of Albany. The building has entrances on both sides, with play grounds for the boys and girls on each side of the building. In the upper story of this building is a fine hall 85 by 52 feet, which is the whole size of the building except stairways and lobby. This hall has a nice stage with circular front, with dressing rooms on each side. The hall is to be used for entertainments, exhibitions, etc., for the school, and has a front and rear entrance with abundant room for getting out quickly and safely. The buildings are remarkably well lighted. The woodwork is stained in cherry, and the newel posts and stair rails are of the solid wood in modern styles. The buildings are heated by steam and lighted by gas manufactured on the premises. There are to be five teachers: Sisters of Saint Ann, from Lacine, Canada. The studies to be pursued are the English branches in the English language with enough French that the children may not forget their mother tongue. The institution is expected to be open to pupils Monday, September 5th.

Rear-Admiral Craven, a distinguished naval officer during the Rebellion, died at the Charlstown navy yard Tuesday, being nearly 80 years old.

The Congregational church at Naugatuck, Conn., is about erecting a building for parish work, entirely separate from the church. It will have 24 rooms, exclusive of hall, cloak rooms and closets. On the first floor will be the assembly room, reception room, parlor, Sunday-school, library and seven class rooms. On the second floor will be eight class rooms, reading rooms, kitchen, dining room and coat and cloak rooms. On the third floor will be the pastor's study and a large room suitable for a gymnasium. Many of these rooms are to have fire places and such other furnishings as will make them attractive and convenient. The grounds are to be beautifully laid out. There are suggestions of immense possibilities for good in such a building, which churches generally might do well to consider.

An old negro woman going out to work, and walking along the track of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Indianapolis road, near Glenwood, Ind., early on the morning of the Chatsworth disaster, found on turning a sharp curve that a bridge 650 feet long and 95 feet high had been consumed during the night, and she barely had time to signal an approaching express train in season to stop it before plunging into the awful gulf. She was so overcome with delight at the escape of the train that she danced and hugged the people, but absolutely refused to accept a generous purse that was made up for her.

Two locomotives collided in the yard of the Pennsylvania road at Philadelphia last Friday, fatally injuring the engineers. The shock threw the throttle of one of the locomotives wide open and it went flying westward, finally colliding with another locomotive, opening its throttle and throwing off the engineer. Both engines started on a race, but fortunately ran on a side track and were ditched before further harm was done.

The steamer City of Montreal, of the Inman line, was burned at sea on the 11th inst, The passengers and crew got off safely in the boats, and were soon picked up by passing vessels. The fire started in the cotton stored in the hold. The steamer carried no first-class passengers.

LIFE SAVED.

Mr. Frank Hill of Wales, Mass., writes as follows:

My little boy three years old has been very ill for six months with Epilectic fits. He would have from 18 to 20 per day and his mind was gone so that we could do nothing with him. I employed two of the best physicians around here, but nothing was the result. Some four weeks ago I placed him under the care of Dr. E. W. Royce. When he had taken the medicine two weeks he was cured completely and is how as bright as ever. Mr. Hill wishes this published that it may reach the eyes of some anxious parent, and he will be glad to answer all inquiries by letter or in person.

THE TORTILITA MINES.

BETTER THAN REPRESENTED AND AS GREAT AS THE COMSTOCK.

What a New York Star Representative saw—The Richest Mining Property in America—Vast Ore Deposits.

The New York Star has made a careful investigation of the property of the Tortilita Mining company, heretofore referred to in these columns, and the following is published from its report, showing the enterprise to be one the best ever brought to the attention of investors:

(Special Dispatch to the Star.)

TUCSON, Ariz., July 16.—Agreeable to instructions from The Star to investigate the Tortilita mines, that are now attracting so much attention throughout the country, your representative has made a careful examination for the benefit of your readers.

At the mines I inquired for the superintendent, and was shown to Mr. D. T. Elmore, and cordially received. Raised in the East, he originally worked on the Comstocks, where he saw property increase in value from a few thousands to hundreds of millions. In reply to a question, Mr. Elmore said:

When I had satisfied myself of what we had after three years of patient labor, I went to New York, and in connection with some friends organized the Tortilita Mining company in New York city, composed of reliable and competent business men, for the purpose of raising capital to erect hoisting works and additional machinery. I have seen all the best mines in America, and worked in them, and I tell you here and now that the Tortilitas are the greatest and best on the American Continent.

THE PLANS OF THE COMPANY.

Asked what improvements were contemplated, Mr. Elmore said: "We can easily supply three twenty-stamp mills for an indefinite period on these properties. They would work 180 tons of ore per day, at an average of $50 per ton. At a low estimate this would be $9000 per day.

"With the proper machinery this can be worked at an expense of $10 per ton, which would be $1800 a day, leaving net per day $7200, or for thirty days $216,000, or for a year $2,592,000, which will be over two and a half times our capital stock each year; but at first we shall start with a twenty-stamp mill, which should give us $800,000 per year net, or 80% per annum on our capital stock. I am now bending every effort toward attaining these results. We are negotiating now for hoisting works and a twenty-stamp mill, and I hope soon to obtain them. Meanwhile we shall continue to run our little five-mill and develope and improve the property all in our power. I know of no inves tment in America that will pay as well as the shares of our company."

AN ABSOLUTELY GREAT PROPERTY.

After a week's time spent at the mines in daily examination of the work, in seeing assays made, watching the battery samples, and seeing the ore retorting and running into bullion and stamped, and reading certificates of $150,000 for bullion shipped to the Bank of California in the last two years, and seeing one bar of 2400 ounces sent forward while I was there, I felt impressed with the fact that the Tortilita deserved the confidence of the public, and that the management in New York had far underestimated its value in their statements. I found property worth anywhere from $10,000,000 to $50,000,000, and possibly $100,000,000, as the Comstocks have proven to be and have made thousands of men rich.

THE TORTILITAS POPULAR AT HOME.

Driving back to Tucson I remained there a short time, and found the Tortilitas exciting more attention than any other mining property in the Territory, and there are some rich ones here. For example, the Silver King, not far distant, has paid three million dollars in dividends from one mine alone, while the Tortilita company has twelve. The Reymart and Vikól, in another direction, have turned out millions and made their owners rich, as have the renowned Tombstones and Quijotoa. The Tortilitas are on the tongue of everybody, and Mr. Elmore is looked for with bullion every month as regularly as the month comes round.

In conclusion, The Star representative found the statements concerning the Tortilita more than verified. The company having not only one but twelve great mines, including the four that are now being worked, any one of which latter is easily worth more than the entire capitalization of the company, and it has a mill and two mill sites besides. The property only needs additional machinery and development to pay handsome dividends.

The subscription books of the Tortilita Mining company are still open at their office, No. 57 Broadway, New York city. For the present, subscriptions are received at par of $2 per share. It is expected the stock will sell at a higher figure after it is called upon the Exchange, where it is already listed.

As a legitimate business enterprise Tortilita is second to none, and attractive to all who have even a small sum for investment.

HAY FEVER.

I have suffered greatly from periodical returns of hay fever. At the suggestion of Covert & Cheever, Druggists, I obtained Ely's Cream Balm, and used a portion of it during a severe attack. I can cheerfully testify as to the immediate and continued relief obtained by its use. I heartily recommend it to those suffering from this or kindred complaints.—(Rev.) H. A. GIVE THEM A CHANCE!

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air passages but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, croup, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else has failed you, you may depend on this for certain. 1y46eow

TO THE HONORABLE THE JUSTICES of the Superior Court, holden at Springfield within and for the County of Hampden.

Humbly shews Nellie S. Able of Palmer, in said County of Hampden, that she was lawfully married to Frederick M. Able, then of the city, county and state of New York, and now of parts unknown, at said Palmer, on the thirteenth day of December, A. D., 1883, that they have since lived together as husband and wife in said Palmer, until the 17th day of December, A. D., 1887, since which time they have lived seperate and apart from each other and she has ever conducted towards him as a faithful, chaste and affectionate wife, yet the said Frederick M., regardless of his marriage vows and obligations, at said Palmer, in the month of December, A. D. 1883, utterly deserted her and has continued such desertion from that time to the date hereof, being more than three consecutive years, next prior to the filing of this libel; and that, being of sufficient ability, he grossly, and wantonly and cruelly refuses and neglects to provide a suitable maintenance for her.

Wherefore she prays that the bonds of matrimony heretofore existing between her and said Frederick M. may be dissolved, and for such further orders and decrees in the premises as to law and justice may appertain.

NELLIE S. ABLE.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.—HAMPDEN, ss.

SUPERIOR COURT AT SPRINGFIELD.

August 11th, A. D., 1887.

On the Libel aforesaid, it is ordered, that the Libellant notify the said Frederick M. Able, to appear before the justices of this court, at Springfield, aforesaid, on the first Monday of October next, by publishing an attested copy of said Libel and this order, once a week, in the Palmer Journal, a newspaper printed in Palmer, three weeks successively, the last publication to be thirty days at least before the said first Monday of October, that he may then and there show cause why the prayer of said Libel should not be granted.

BY License of the Probate Court for the County of Hampden, the subscriber, administrator with the will annexed, of the estate of Emelius B. Murdock, late of Palmer, in said county, deceased, will sell at public auction on the premises on Saturday, the 20th day of August, next, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, the store and tenement with about one acre of land, situated in the village of Bondsville, belonging to the estate of said E. B. Murdock. This store is on a very prominent corner and has for a long time controlled the trade of a large section, and a rare chance for business. Also on the same day, commencing at 9 o'clock a. m., I will sell all the personal property remaining, consisting of 1 horse 11 years old, 1 carriage, several express wagons, sleighs, harness, robes, etc. The furniture and household goods, books, pictures and articles too numerous to mention, with the balance of store stock of dry goods, boots and shoes, groceries and fancy goods. Terms made known at time of sale.

A Woman's Way.

Among the water lilies, one golden afternoon—
Golden in the sunshine of a perfect day in June—
The trees in all their beauty, so fresh and passing green,
Cast trembling, fleeting shadows, which dimmed the river's sheen.

Among the water lilies
I didn't tell him "Nay,"
And yet, I say emphatic,
I never said him "Yea,"
I've heard the world say, smiling,
"Oh, that's a woman's way!"

We talked about the river and how it slid along,
We talked about the stirring birds and listened to their song;
I plucked two water lilies, with broad, green, drip ping leaves,
As we sailed 'neath trees which sheltered like over-hanging eaves.

Among the water lilies
I didn't tell him "Nay,"
And yet, I say emphatic,
I never said him "Yea,"
I've heard the world say, smiling,
"Oh, that's a woman's way!"

Our boat went slowly drifting with wind or with the tide,
Crushing down the water lilies anear on every side;
The swallows almost touched us, as they skimmed the water o'er;
We drifted and we drifted by the reedy, flow'ry shore.

Among the water lilies,
I didn't tell him "Nay,"
And yet, tt seemed unmaidenly,
To say emphatic "Yea,"
I've heard the world say, smiling,
"Oh, that's a woman's way."

I do not know what love is, of which the poets sing—
I know 'tis something serious, a most important thing—
But I know I'm happy, just as happy as the birds in June,
And God grant our lives be always one golden afternoon.

Among the water lilies,
I didn't tell him "Nay,"
I said, with all my heart and soul,
A most emphatic "Yea,"
I've heard the world say, smiling,
"Oh, that's a woman's way!"

LUCK IN OPALS.

The most popular thing in the way of gems just now is the opal. Not that anyone objects to presents of diamonds, but the opal is enjoying a boom in the best society. A veracious Maiden Lane jeweler says the reason for this is that late researches into ancient lore have entirely reversed the old notion that the opal is an unlucky stone. The exact contrary is the fact. A man may have all kinds of luck with the biggest diamond that was ever found. Nothing but good fortune goes with the opal. Young women who are going to Europe get a set of opal jewelry, this jeweler says, to keep them from going to the bottom. Gentlemen who are going to Coney Island to take a flyer on a race buy a pair of opal sleevebuttons, and win on a short horse.

"A customer of mine," he went on, "came in here the other day and told me a little story which illustrates the power of the opal. Last Christmas his wife made him a present of a scarfpin, set with one of these marvellous stones. At that time he had a mortgage on his house; his business—he is a coffee broker and had been fooling with the wrong end of the market—was in a desperate condition; he was threatened with paresis, and things were going wrong with him generally. Pretty soon, coffee began to rise. It kept going up and carried this man right along with it. He got his business into shape, paid off his mortgage and went along swimmingly. Now here's the most remarkable part of the story. Some one slipped the pin out of his scarf one day in a crowd. The very next day he fell down stairs and broke two ribs; his wife upse a bottle of purple ink all over his new summer clothes; his little boy played truant from school and got arrested for tying a package of firecrackers to a dog's tail; the parlor maid smashed the new chandelier to flinders with a steplader; one of the horses developed glanders, and the hired man poured a ladle full of melted lead down his boot leg.

"During the next week a shutter fell off the front of the house and hit a policeman on the head; the gas metre brought in a bill for 767,000 feet for the month; the cook set the house on fire with a pan of melted grease, and moths got in the new parlor carpet. When things came to this pass the man saw that he would have to draw the line. He sent for two detectives and told them to get that opal back if it took all the money in New York. The next day they found the opal in a pawn shop. And do you know, sir, that man just got his opal back in time to get out of the coffee market before the panic, and if he hadn't got out he would have gone higher than a kite. There's nothing in the world like an opal. Horseshoes and four-leaved clovers are nothing to it."—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

THE ADVANTAGE OF THINKING.

To have learned to think, whether learned in the schools or out of them, is to have attained the most valuable of all acquirements. Hard and stubborn facts in letters, sciences or mechanics, however desirable in themselves, cannot be of the best practical value to their possessor until he has learned to think, and so is able to adjust his information to the constantly varying conditions and necessities of his occupation.

Any system of instruction which does not teach a man to think falls very far short of the best results of instruction, and leaves him without the most vital element of success. The Jeweller's Journal repeats what has been often said; that is, what a mechanic most needs to-day is to know how to think. He who can do this is never at a loss for ways and means, and is ever and always equal to every occasion, and can meet any emergency without hesitancy or confusion. He finds real pleasure in conquering a difficult job, for he can always conquer it, inasmuch as he is an inventor and can create a way where there was none.

A man who has learned to think continually, separates and combines, and from the scraps which he gathers as he goes he constructs. Material is ever at his hands and whether he is on a journey, in the shop, or the factory, his eye is ever observant and his senses alert.

Having learned how to acquire knowledge, the Journal further adds, he never finds himself anywhere that something does not appear which he wants to see, and, having seen, will not sooner or later put to practical use. The setting of a lathe tool, the adjusting of a band in a machine-shop, even the turning of a crank or the skilful handling of a file, is more than likely to suggest some new "kink" to him, wholly unlike anything he is observing. He finds treasures unsuspected by the man whose mind, being simply a storehouse of blank fact, moves mechanically forward, observing nothing but that which is already constructed and complete. These treasures he stores as he gathers them, and at the call of a necessary occasion or an emergency they are combined into a complete whole by a process of which he himself is quite unconscious.

Having learned to think, he sends forth every moment freightened with some sort of effort. He has learned "the value of work as a means of happiness and of change of work as a means of rest," and idleness is neither necessary nor recreative. He can catch an idea on the wing, and an idea gained is a source of true happiness. Such a man does not easily weary, and it is late in life before he grows old. He goes on gaining knowledge to the end, and his knowledge assimilates and becomes wisdom as he gains it.

HOW THEY PRAY IN DAKOTA.

On Wednesday evening about two months ago a prayer meeting was held by the members of one of the leading churches in Aberdeen, this territory. Owing to some repairs being made in the church building, it took place at the residence of a prominent member of the church, named Dawson, who was also a leading real estate dealer. The city was at that time in the hight of a boom.

Rev. Bagley had charge of the meeting, and, after a number of those present had offered prayers, the reverend gentleman called on Brother Dawson. He accordingly knelt by a chair and, after a fitting introduction, said:—

"And we desire to further thank thee this evening for allowing me to put my new north-side addition upon—"

"Hold on, brother, hold on," interrupted Rev. Bagley. "It hardly seems to me proper for you to introduce private real estate deals in a supplication at a prayer-meeting. Don't do it, Brother Dawson."

But Brother Dawson was of a stubborn disposition, and this only made him more determined. He continued:—

"As I was saying, I desire to return thanks for thy providential guidance while placing my north-side addition on the market. As thou probably knowest, I have thrown the entire addition on the market at $450 per lot, though they are all well worth—"

"How's that, brother?" put in Rev. Bagley, eagerly, as he took his face out of his hands and peered sideways over his spectacles from where he was kneeling in fron of the sofa.

"Four hundred and fifty dollars a lot cider," answered Brother Dawson.

"Good gracious!" replied the minister as he arose, "there's money in those lots at that figure—just put me down for a block of about six—I'm willing to put my pile in north-side dirt at that rate at any time! Here, Sister Dawson, bring us a pen a minute till we draw up the deed—I don't propose to take any chances on monkey business on as good a deal as this. Just remain kneeling, friends, this matter won't take but a moment's time."—Dakota Bell.

THE DISCOVERER OF SPECTACLES.

Fewer inventions have conferred a greater blessing on the human race than that which assists impaired vision. Dr. Johnson rightly expressed his surprise that such a benefacter as the discoverer of spectacles should have been regarded with indifference and found no worthy biographer to celebrate his ingenuity. Unfortunately, however, his name is a matter of much uncertainty; and, hence, a grateful posterity have been prevented from bestowing upon his memory that honor which it has so richly merited. But it may be noted that popular opinion has long ago pronounced in favor of Spina, a Florentine monk, as the rightful claimant, although some are in favor of Roger Bacon. Monsieur Spoon, in his "Researches Curleuses d'Antiduite," fixes the date of the invention of spectacles between the years 1280 and 1311, and says that Alexander de Spina, having seen a pair made by some other person, who was unwilling to communicate the secret of their construction, ordered a pair for himself and found them so useful that he cheerfully and promptly made the invention public. According to an Italian antiquary, the person to whom Spina was indebted for his information was Salvino, who died in the year 1318, and he quotes from a manuscript in his possession an epitaph which records the circumstances: "Here lies Salvino Armoto d'Armati, of Florence, the inventor of spectacles. May God pardon his sins. The year 1318."—London Standard.

A WISE MAN.

A Boston capitalist, who is a leading merchant as well as a large owner of real estate, is noted for the interest he takes in young men in clerical positions. Once a frightened bank cashier waited upon him to say that, by the mistake of one of the clerks, a check of the merchant's had got into the pigeon hole marked "protested." As Mr. Millions might have heard a rumor that his check had been protested, the cashier hastened to explain and said that he would discharge promptly the young man who made the mistake.

"And why discharge him, sir?" mildly asked Mr. Millions.

"Because he put your check in the 'protested' box."

"It is a good many years," said Mr. Millions as he tilted back in his office chair, and after his fashion harpooned his blotting-pad with his pen, "since I was a young man, but my memory is that I sometimes made mistakes. If I had been discharged for every mistake I made, I should not have made my fortune. The young man whose mistake is pointed out to him and forgiven is the most careful man in the office ever afterward. I think my business relations with your bank are likely to be prolonged if the young man is not discharged."

And the young man was not discharged. —Boston Transcript.

Along the Hudson River.

An Old-Time Pilot Spins a Yarn—He Buttons His Overcoat to the Chin and Sticks to the Wheel.

About twelve years ago I was master and pilot of the steamboat Sarah Brown, that ran between Peekskill and New York, carrying freight. At Peekskill we lay up at a dock near which one of the main sewers from the village emptied into the river. The bad air and gas from the sewer was fearful. It was so foul that I often slept in my bunk on the boat with the door and window tight shut rather than breathe it; and that, too, in hot weather. I used to notice that the water set over night in a basin or bowl to drink, would be in the morning covered with a sort of slimy coating, if the sewer air could get at it.

It was in this way I had my first attack of malaria. Before that I had never been really sick in my life, and I could stand any amount of work, and sleep like a healthy child. But as the malaria took hold of me my appetite began to fail and my good sleep went with it. Sometimes I could hardly eat enough, and then again nothing seem to tempt me or to taste good. And as to sleeping, I would often toss and tumble in my bed nearly all night, then fall asleep about daylight, completely tired out. This irregular and broken fashion of eating, drinking and sleeping soon brought on symptons of indigestion and dyspepsia. In fact, after a while it came to be what is called—and very properly, I think—nervous dyspepsia and exhaustion.

At the very start, as soon as I told my physcian how I felt, he began giving me quinine, and I often took sixteen grains a day. It didn't cure me, and so far as I know quinine never does really cure malaria. But as neither the doctor no anybody else could tell me of anything better I kept on taking it. Then I commenced having sick headaches, or browaches, and felt fagged out and low spirited. With he idea that quinine might possibly help me if I took larger doses, I increased the dose from four to ten grains at a time.

This kind of thing went on for six years—and six very long years they were to me. You may be sure of that. Of course my business involved almost constant exposure to the weather, which greatly increased the severity of the attacks. I have stood in the pilot house, steering, with my overcoat buttoned to the chin, shivering in the hot summer sun.

All this time I kept on taking quinine in large doses, and as I had become very weak my physician told me that the malarial poison was making my blood thin and poor—abstracting the very life from it. After a few months I began to feel the effects of the large quantities of quinine I had used to break up the malaria. First I was troubled with ringing and buzzing in the ears, I began to grow hard of hearing, my eyesight became weak, and from enjoying the use of a pair of eyes clear and strong as anybody ever had, I soon had to help my vision with a pair of glasses—while yet a young man. This I was informed on medical authority was what is called malarial iritis, or loss of the iris due to malarious infection. My eyes watered easily at night on attempting to use them, and seemed to lose the deep, clear color which was natural to them.

Bleeding from the nose was about this time a common thing with me—so much so that the doctor plugged up the nasal orifices to stop it.

On my return from the West, where I had gone in hopes that a change of scene and air might do me good, I first saw an advertisement of KASKINE in a New York daily paper. It was called "The New Quinine." "That meets my idea," I said. "Anything to take the place of the old quinine, for between that and the malaria I shall be completely used up before long."

So I began on KASKINE, taking about fifteen pellets at a time four times a day, and in a few days I felt much better. I slept much better, food tasted more natural and I digested it, and got my strength back by degrees; and, briefly, in the course of a reasonable time it worked a perfect cure of the malaria with all its symptoms and evils—the headaches, debility, &c.

Keep a Stiff Upper Lip.

My boy, as you travel this mundane sphere,
You will find many things exceedingly queer,
That often will cause you to open your eyes
In a manner of great surprise.
When you arouse from a golden dream,
And discover that things are not what they seem;
If fickly Miss Fortune should give you the slip,
Look her square in the face and keep a stiff upper lip.

If folks pass you by with a cynical sneer,
Because in fine clothes you cannot appear;
Never be cast down by trifles like that,
Though ragged your jacket and napless your hat,
If your heart is all right, and level your head,
Supposing that you can show "nary a red;"
They have dollars, you sense, and that's the best grip;
Meet them square in the face with a stiff upper lip.

If your girl should forsake you for some other fellow,
Don't act like a calf and foolishly bellow,
For girls handle their cards with a gambler's art,
Of playing the deuce with a fellow's poor heart;
Let them play a lone hand awhile at the game;
If it's diamonds they seek, let them work for the same.
There are just as good fish in the sea as ever did nip,
Your luck may yet turn, keep a stiff upper lip.

So, my boy, when you buffet the wind and the wave,
Remember life's voyage should ever be brave.
Though tempest may gather and breakes may roll.
Keep your boat in deep water and look out for the shoal;
When the waves are dark, look aloft to the stars;
If the vessels is wrecked, why cling to the spars;
Heed the old maxim, "Don't give up the ship"
Whose anchor is hope; keep a stiff upper lip.

MONSIEUR LE CURE.

I met the cure one evening as I was returning home from the wood, where I had been sketching. The fine old man had been standing on the doorstep of his presbytere, looking toward the sea, which at that moment was glorious beneath the setting sun. I bowed to him as he passed, for his presence had always inspired me with sympathy and respect, and I knew how much this tribute from a foreigner would gratify a member of that class, which the republican government is bringing into disrespect by constant persecutions.

He returned my salute with such kindly courtesy that I took the opportunity, which I had long desired, of speaking to him.

"A lovely sight, M. le Cure," I said, pointing to the sea.

"It is indeed, monsieur," he answered without turning round.

After awhile he added: "It is such sights that reconcile one to this earth. And yet I do not know, one has always the bitter certainty that very soon the night will come, and all will be dark."

"And en attendant," I said, trying to laugh away his evident melancholy, "If I do not get home soon the night and darkness will come, most certainly; and it's a breakneck path to my house,"

"But monsieur," said the cure, "there is no hurry. I heard from the village-people monsieur had expressed the desire to visit our church. There is, indeed, little to see, but if"—

"I should be most delighted," I answered."

"I will get the key," he said, leading me into his simple parlor and bidding me sit down while he went up-stairs to fetch it.

The room was one of the poorest in point of decoration and furniture that I had seen in any house in the village; and yet there was one object which by its great beauty compensated for all the unloveliness of the rest. It was the picture of a young woman painted in oils, and signed by a painter who, about thirty years ago, had been at the summit of his art. The girl represented was most lovely, and it seemed that her face was one which had been the model of many other artists as famous as the one who had painted this portrait. A royally feminine face, and here clothed with that expression of timidity, blushing and afraid which in some women is so sweet and so strongly appeals to all that is noble and most manly in man.

That was my first impression; but, as I looked at it longer, the timidity, from being subjective, merely seemed to be objective. It was not a timid girl, it was a girl afraid. Her eyes seemed to look with horror—for on closer observation that fear grew into horror—on something that was not represented in the picture. How could it be, seeing that those fearful eyes were looking out of the panel, straight over my head, who stood facing her at the wall behind me? The picture was by far too fine a work of art for one to suppose that any attempt had been made to enhance its interest by an extraordinary and theatrical mis-en-scene, and I felt it would be an insult to the grand painter to turn round and see if anything was visible to explain the expression that held me, not the reason thereof. I am not one of those who seek in every picture an illustration.

I had stood before it some time, sadly envious of the technique of the departed hand, and wondering what angel-hand—the angel Raphael's perhaps—had guided the painter's fingers, when he had mixed that color of sun-kissed auburn that sung—and colors sing—from those clustering curls of hair, when the cure came back into the room.

I turned as I heard his step, and as I did so my eyes fell on the wall on which my back had been turned. Directly opposite the picture and in point of vision of its eyes, hung a rapier. As I looked closer, I saw that the point of the sword was black—of that ill-omened black that blood long since shed does take. I almost felt angry. Blood-stained rapier, or chromo-lithograph of some hoboblin, ghoul or spectre, it annoyed me to think that any one should have ventured, with the most vulgar taste of melodramic effect, to complete what was already so sublimely and perfectly complete. It was the act of a bourgeoise—of the bourgeoise uneasy and disturbed if the Sevres china statuette of a Watteau shepherdess on this side of his Louis IV timepiece had not on the yon side of it, fronting her as a pendant, a languishing Corydon. My annoyance was so real that I paid but little attention to all that the cure, who had now greatly sunk in my esteem, showed me and told me. I vaguely remember that he led me through a church-yard when by the grave of his predecessor, he pointed out the plot of ground where he was to rest himself; that he told me the church was many hundred years old, and had been, dans le temps, the lodge of company of Knight Templars whose bodies laid shrouded in stone sepulchres in a remote part of the cemetery. The church was very uninteresting to me in my pre-occupation. There were some fine Louis XI candlesticks in massive copper on one of the altars. The cure had bought them from a dealer in old metals, to whom an ignorant colleague had sold them at the rate of ninepence per pound.

"Then you have some taste," I thought.

"But that only makes it more inexcusable."

I was examining these candlesticks when a peasant-girl came up to us, and with many clumsy courtesies told M. le Cure that his supper had been served.

She had a motherly tone with the old man, this girl of 15, and would not hear of showing me the vestry.

"That will be for another day," she said. "The important thing now is that M. le Cure should not let that beautiful trout get cold. One has opened a bottle of Chablis to drink with it, and there will be an omelette aux fine herbes and some peaches in the second service."

"She seems a very intelligent child," I said, as I accompanied the cure to his door. "Is she your servant?"

"Oh, no," he answered with a smile. "That would not be allowed. My servant is in bed, and this girl is taking her place. But no, monsieur, I cannot let you go now. You must come in and share my supper. Jennette, lay another cover."

"I did that in advance," answered the girl. "When M. le Cure has visitors—"

"He insists on their becoming his guests. You are right, and monsieur sees it."

The trout, perfectly cooked, was firm and sweet; the Chablis, cool and fragrant, with a faint scent of the violets, gleaming like livid gold in my glass; the table was exquisitely laid; the silver, the plate of peaches, the yellow rose very beautiful to the eye; the cure with his melodious voice full of caressing notes, charmed my ear as his anecdotes and wit delighted my mind. But all these delights were very powerless to distract my attention from the annoyance I had experienced. My calm was marred. I barely listened to my host, yet gave him enough attention to regret my pre-occupation. At another time his conversation would have charmed me, who now for many, many months had heard only the sordid bargainings of the Norman peasants in their drawling and inharmonious patois.

He had been speaking about the Oxford revival, and had quoted the pope's remarks on the Puseyites, that like bellringers they invited the world to come into the holy church, but themselves did not enter it, when, unable to control myself any longer, I rudely interrupted him, saying: "But why vulgarize her glorious passion? Why make her sublime fear paltry and ridiculous? One annoys the timidity of children with blood-stained rapiers, skulls or chromos of Fox Martyrs. They cannot explain her terror. They only insult her."

The cure smiled and seemed at once to understand what it was I was referring to.

"You are right, monsieur," he said. "it is in bad taste. But it is Bette's fault, not mine.

"Bette," he continued, "is my old servant, the one who is lying up-stairs. She has been most faithful and devoted to me ever since she came to this place, not twenty years ago. I used to keep that rapier in my bed-room, but it was not long before she found it out, and then she insisted on hanging it where you saw it. The arrangement has always rather spoiled my pleasure in the picture, and my reason is the same as yours; but I could not find it in my heart to thwart the good old woman's wish. She would have it thus and would take no contradiction on this point."

"I suppose," I rejoined, "the good woman was vexed at the girl frightened at nothing. The blood-stained sword would explain the fear and make the tableau complete. It is natural in a peasant-woman. But I should have been better pleased with Bettie if she had completed it in another way. For instance, if she had hung opposite those terrified eyes a picture by Delacroix or another classic, that would have explained, and charmingly, the horror of a creation of M—'s."

"You are severe on Delacroix," laughed the cure. "In my day he was to us what Meissonier is to you to-day."

"May I ask, monsieur," I said, "if there is any connection between the picture and the weapon?"

"A terrible one," said the cure.

His tone was so sad and there was such a sorrowful expression on his face as he answered me, that I regretted my indiscretion and apologized to him for it.

"It is strange," he continued, after a pause, "that you should ask me this to-day, for all this day my thoughts have been going back to the most terrible scene of my life. Nay, do not ask my pardon. I am glad to speak to you of it. Silence does not kill a sorrow; it nurses it—I know it. For thirty years I have not spoken of it, and the wound in my heart has deepened all the more. Never, never be reserved in the troubles of your life. Rather cry them aloud on the housetops. Does not a cry relieve bodily suffering? Then why should not the same relief be afforded in the same way to the tortures of conscience? Ask for sympathy, and, whenever you get it or not, the mere asking will comfort you. I will tell you about that rapier and the picture. My heart has been very full to-day."

Then bending over the table towards me he said:

"That picture is the portrait of the only woman I have ever loved, and that rapier is the sword with which I killed my best friend. The blood on its point is the blood of the only heart of man that ever beat in love and sympathy with mine.

"Ah!" he continued, "you look surprised. One does not suppose any romance can be enshrined beneath the soutane of a village cure, and perhaps to look at me I appear to be the very last person to have a drama of so terrible a kind in my life. Yet I am told that they made a very good play of it at one of the boulevard theaters in Paris. The world had the comedy, the tragedy was for me. It was just, quite so. My story! Oh, a common one. He was my friend, and she, the lovely woman, was his wife. We had both paid court to her, but he had won her. He was richer than I, and in France, you know, that is the first consideration of parents in giving their daughter. Well, though I loved her with all my heart, when she became his wife I was as loyal to her as to him, as a gentleman and a friend.

Of course I sought her society—it was natural, was it not, that I should do so! Ill-advised! Oh, ill-advised—nobody sees that better than I do now. But I swear, if swear I might, that my loyalty to him and to her never, even in thought, wavered an instant. The world, the wicked world, thought differently, and wicked tongues wagging. He was my best friend, and I loved him like a brother, and all the more dearly that he was her husband. Yet, how could I act otherwise than I did when one day, urged on by those wicked tongues, he rushed up to me on the boulevard and struck me in the face, calling me a liar, traitor and coward? It was done in the eyes of Paris, and I was hot-blooded in those days. It was a provocation, a challenge, which I was forced, I thought then, to accept. We fought the next morning in the Bois des Vincennes.

It was an accident—yes, that thrust of mine was an accident—I shall always say so. He ran upon my point. I could not help myself. But, oh, the horror of that moment! The artist who painted that portrait was one of those who carried my Paul home. He told me that she looked thus when she saw him as I made him. As for me, I went many months a crazed man. I think it was my great-uncle, the bishop of T——, who first suggested to me that if any atonement of my crime there could be, it would be in the devotion and service of a lifetime. I took his advice, for I was weary of the world, passed through the ordeal of the novitiate and was ordained. My uncle gave me this presbytere, and here I have lived and worked for thirty years, humbly, securely and penitently. I have not atoned—no, no, I have not atoned; but I sometimes think Paul knows all, now, and—perhaps has forgiven me.

"I never saw her again. I never heard of her. Is she dead? Did she marry again? Did, she, as some say she intended to do, return to a convent? I do not know. I have never ceased to love her, as I did then, loyally and devotedly; not as the woman I had wanted to marry, but as the wife of my friend—as my dear Paul's wife."

I said nothing. I felt sorry now to have called forth this confession. The quiet despair of this old man, as he told me of the misery of his ruined life, was a poignant sorrow to the eye and to the ear. When he had finished speaking, he sat with his hands covering his eyes. I fancy there were tears in them.

We were sitting thus in silence in the darkening room, when the little maid came running in.

"M. le Cure! M. le Cure!" she cried, "come quickly! Old Bette is dying! She calls for you!"

"Oh! do not say that," cried the cure, starting to his feet. Do not say that. My old Bette! My faithful old servant! No, it cannot be that after twenty years of loyal service and sacrifice, I am to lose her now."

"It is very certain, mon pere," said the trembling girl, "that old Bette is dying. She says so herself, and I can see that she is right, for she looks just like la mere Manon did before she died and she begs M. le Cure to come to her without delay."

"I come, I come!" cried the old man, in tones of deepest anguish. "But the doctor, Jeannette, the doctor! Run for him. Oh, that is useless, of course. He lives ten miles away. What shall we do? What will become of us?"

"I have studied medicine," I said. "I may be able to be of some assistance. If M. le Cure will permit, I——"

"Come, come!" he cried, clutching me by the arm. "It is the blessing of Providence. Is there anything you want? It is disease of the heart. No—then come. But first, Jeannette, run up-stairs and see whether monsieur can enter."

The girl turned to obey, when through the silence of the house rung the awful notes of a dying woman's voice.

"Roaul, Raoul! where are you? Je me meurs, mon ami." It was the voice of a high-born lady. For what reason I know not, I turned toward the picture. It seemed the cry that should come from those lips.

The cure had started like a man who is suddenly stabbed.

"Mon Deiu, mon Dieu!" he cried—"whose voice is that?"

And with this cry he turned toward the picture.

"Raoul, Raoul! you must come quickly, or it will be too late."

"It is old Bette that is calling you, M. le Cure," said Jeannette, pointing to the room above. "It is her voice, is it not?"

"Bette's?" stammered the cure, "the old peasant woman's? No, no, no! It was Mireille's. But—"

"Meanwhile, monsieur," said Jeannette, "the old woman dies."

"I go," said the cure.

I did not follow him; I had some feeling that there would be something solemn—something sacred was to be revealed in this last interview of the cure and his dying servant. I knew that, great as may be the devotion and self-sacrifice of the man, the devotion and self-sacrifice of the woman who loves him or who has loved him, can be immeasurably greater, and I believed that the cure would find out that his life-long penance had even on this earth its passing great reward, and that the love of the woman he had worshipped in his youth had been with him and around him, silent, watchful, all these years.

"It would have been a splendid devotion," I said to myself, as I made my way home," and one possible only in a woman, to humble herself as he had humbled himself—yet lower, to leave the boudoir of the woman of the world for the kitchen of a village-presbytere—to put off the elegant toilet and to put on the peasant's gown, aye, and more than all this, to live by his side unknown to him, respecting his loyalty to the dead—it was sublime."

A year later I visited P— again. They told me that the old cure had died about two months ago. I saw his grave in the church-yard, but it was not in the spot that he had laughingly pointed out to me when he had shown me the church. I found it hidden away in a corner, from which a splendid view of the sea could be obtained. There was another grave by its side, adorned with a simple white cross, on which was written the one word—"Mirielle."

I had fashioned forth no untrue romance. —Robert H. Sherard.

NEATNESSS IN DRESS AT HOME.

The importance of neat and tasteful house dressing cannot be over estimated. The matron who appears before the members of the family in a shabby, soiled wrapper, and makes the excuse—if, indeed, she takes the trouble to make any at all—"that it is so much more comfortable," has little idea of the possible consequences of such a course. Could she but realize that her dress is an evil example to her daughters, and one that will reach far beyond her own span in life; that husbands and sons are apt to draw comparisons between her dress and that of ladies they meet in other homes, and that these comparisons cannot help but increase their disrespect for her, she might be induced to give more attention to her personal appearance.

Not even the burden of care and the constant employment can furnish sufficient excuse for careless personal habits, for few things are more important to the well being of a family. There is an old saying to the effect that an untidy mother has disobedient children, and while parents nor children may realize the wherefor of it, yet there is always a lack of respect and indifference to the authority of a mother who takes no pride in her personal appearance.

And it is not the mother alone upon whose shoulders rests the responsibility for home neatness and order in dress; the father has his duties to look after as well, and should never fail to insist upon the younger members of the family presenting themselves with well kept hands, clean faces, neatly brushed hair, and orderly dress, at least every meal where the family assemble.—Brooklyn Magazine.

THE DARK SIDE OF THINGS.

Some people will persist in taking a gloomy view of everything. There is a man of that kind in Austin, living in Ward No. 13. A neighbor happened to drop in to see him the other day and found everybody lively except the head of the household.

"How are you all?"

"We are all tolerable well except Bob. He is laughing and joking because he is going fishing. I just know that he is going to come home drowned, and howling with a fish hook sticking in his finger or somewhere else."

"Well, the rest seem to be exceedingly cheerful?"

"Yes, sorter. Jeminy is jumping and skipping about because she is going to a candy pulling, but I know something will happen to her. I read of a girl in Philadelphia only last year who was coming from a candy pulling, when a drunken man threw his wife out of a three-story window and killed her."

"Killed who?"

"Jemimy."

"Why, no; there she is."

"Well it might have been if she had been on the pavement below where the woman fell."

"Well; you are looking healthy."

"Yes, I feel just like the man did who dropped dead in New York last week from heart disease. He was in high spirits and had a good appetite, and them's just my symptoms.—Texas Siftings.

BOY RELIGION.

Religion in its essential peculiarities will always be the same for boys as for men, but in peculiarities not essential it will show the age of its possessor, even as a stream the soil it runs through. It is correct, then, to say that there is such a thing as boy religion. With a boy's religion will be likely to go considerable noise and fun. He will sail his toy-ships with as intense interest as a man of fifty his grown up craft. He may play base ball with as much fervor as a philanthropist will run a charitable society. He will pop his fire-crackers before daybreak on the Fourth and sound his fish-horn as long as the police will let him. Old age is not likely to sail toy-ships or play base ball, and its answer to the seductive fish-horn may be a cotton-stuffed ear; and as for fire-crackers, it may like to drown them under five miles of Atlantic sea water. Be patient with any boy's religion, accompanied with the crudeness and irrepressibility of youth. Religion should be natural. Suggest and train, but don't make the boy-Christian an artificial being. It is unwise and wrong to force his experiences into something beyond his years; and, alas! if you try to make an old man of him. When a youth begins to smother his enthusiasm and cultivate the manners of mid-century he is in training either for a hypocrite or a namby-pamby saint, and we don't know which is the worst.—Sunday School Journal.

Look for Joy.

Trip lightly over trouble;
Trip lightly over wrong;
We only make grief double
By dwelling on it long.

Why clasp Woe's hand so tightly?
Why sigh o'er blossoms dead?
Why cling to forms unsightly?
Why not seek joy instead?

Trip lightly over sorrow;
Through all the day be dark,
The sun may shine to-morrow,
And gayly sing the lark.

Fair hopes have not departed,
Though roses may have fled;
Then never be down-hearted,
But look for joy instead,

Trip lightly over sadness,
Stand not to rail at doom;
We've pearls to string, of gladness,
On this side of the tomb;

While stars are nightly shining,
And heaven is overhead,
Encourage not repining,
But look for joy instead.

A GOOD CONUNDRUM.

I cannot refrain from telling a conundrum that was propounded to the four ministers, when the bluefish party went ashore at the "Pint," and took their picnic dinner under the shade of a fisherwoman's hut. It was: "If Solomon was the son of David, and Joab the son of Zeruiah, what relation was Zeruiah to Joab?" Every man among the clergymen said "father" at once, and when assured that the answer was wrong, there was much curiosity excited. "Will you state that again!" asked Mr. Collyer, lying down his fork. It was restated. "Well," said he, "David and Solomn had nothing to do with it, but Zeruiah was Joab's father." "No; guess again," was the reply. The clergymen all insisted that the answer was right, and Mr. Collyer said. "He certainly must have been his father, and I won't eat another mouthful until you tell me where the catch is." When told that "Zeruiah was Joab's mother," he was much amused and expressed his surprise that his brethren of his cloth didn't know their Bibles better. Their forgetfulness was as amusing as the ignorance of the critic who alluded to Paul's friends, "Priscilla and Aquilla," as old maids.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

A WOMAN'S WINNING SMILE.

A car-driver had just passed Sixth avenue when a tall, slender and handsome young woman waved her parasol for the car to stop. She had her arms full of parsels and look tired and weary enough to appeal to the gallantry of even a street-car driver, but he bluntly called out to her: "The car is full, madam; I can't stop." Most women would have responded to this rebuff with a withering look of scorn, but this young lady seemed equal to the accasion. She put on her sweetest smile, and there was a wonderful debth of pathos in her voice as she exclaimed to him: "Do please stop. This is the third car that I have tried to catch. They are all full." The driver glanced back through the crowded aisle and platform of his car, took a second look at the pathetic young woman, with her sweet smile, and finally pulled his car up short. "Move up there," he shouted to the people inside. "Make a little more room." And so the young lady got a place and rewarded him with another sweet smile that seemed to make him jubilant. It was a touch of human nature worth witnessing.—New York Tribune.

Senator Nye of Nevada went to Secretary Stanton one day to make a petition for some dead soldier's orphans. It was in the darkest days of the war. Stanton said: "I have not time, Mr. Nye, to see what you want." "Suppose you take time, Mr. Secretary." "You are unreasonable, Mr. Nye, in pressing such a thing at this time," said Stanton. "Permit me to say that you are the unreasonable man," answered Nye. "If you were not a United States senator I should say that you were very impertinent," said Stanton haughtily. "If you were not a great secretary of war I should be tempted to say you were making a blanked fool of yourself," replied the old Gray Eagle, with his eyes blazing. Stanton looked at him for a moment, and then, softening, said: "Maybe I am, Jim, who knows? Come inside and tell me all about it." "Now, Ned, my boy, you are growing sensible," said Nye, and the business was quickly arranged.—Ben: Perley Poore.

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 2, 1887.

THAT marvel of horseflesh, "Maud S.," made another record last Saturday, trotting a mile to wagon in 2.13¼, and that on a three-quarter mile track, driven by Mr. Bonner, who is 30 pounds heavier than the regulation weight.

THERE was quite a rumpus on the sun Sunday morning, an immense tongue of white flame appearing on its eastern edge, surrounded by other flames, and covering a space of 50,000 or 60,000 miles in diameter. The commotion was followed by a disturbance of the magnetic needle.

WIGGINS, the weather prophet, has not been hear from for some time, but he comes to the surface long enough to predict the biggest blow of the century on the 19th inst., when two counter storms will meet on the Atlantic. Wiggins himself is one of the hardest blows this country has had.

GEORGE M. STEARNS'S successor as United States district attorney is Owen A. Galvin, who has been Mr. Stearns's first assistant. This appointment is in harmony with civil service reform ideas, but Mr. Galvin will have to get up very early in the morning if he expects to make good the place of George M. Stearns.

Robert T. Lincoln would not accept a nomination for vice president, and does not want the nomination for the presidency. He considers the White House a "gilded prison," but it would not be the strangest thing in the world if he should some day be called to occupy that same prison. The American people have a very kindly feeling for the son of Abraham Lincoln.

SOME five thousand members of the Grand Army went out of their way to insult President Cleveland at a demonstration in Wheeling, W. Va., last Friday, by refusing to march under his picture, which was suspended over the street. If the Grand Army can stand this sort of thing, the president can undoubtedly, but it is a sorry blot upon the fame of the Army boys.

ANOTHER foolish fellow has passed safely through the Niagara whirlpool, C. A. Percy, a young wagon maker of Suspension Bridge having made a life boat with air chambers at each end, in one of which he made the dangerous trip in safety last Sunday. He had no practical knowledge of boat building, but was so pleased with his trip that he how proposes to try for a patent on his craft as a life-saving boat.

SACO, Me., furnishes the most amazing defalcation of the day. Frank C. McNeely, 19 years old, clerk in the Saco and Biddeford savings institution, was left to close up the bank Monday afternoon, and improved the opportunity to skip across the Canadian line with nearly $300,000, mostly in bonds. He was not supposed to know the combinations of the safe, but had learned them in some way. His friends think he is deranged.

NATURE is arrayed in garments of unusual comeliness for the season, and observant travellers find fresh revelations of beauty at every turn. June, in her balmiest seasons, rarely gives to the verdure-clad hills and valleys a brighter or more attractive coloring than is to be seen in these early autumn days, and it is only here and there that an occasional touch of autumnal tints is to be seen, as a hint of the more glorious coloring soon to follow.

AN attempt is to be made to settle the dispute between this country and Canada by the appointment of a joint commission by the United States and Great Britain to consider the question. Joseph Chamberlain, the prominent radical member of parliament whose disagreement with Gladstone drove him over to the tories, had been appointed president of the British commissioners, the balance of whom, with the American members, are yet to be named.

JESSIE POMEROY, the boy fiend confined in the state prison at Charlestown on a life sentence, for torturing and murdering children when he was only twelve years old, has made several almost successful attempts to escape in the eleven years he has been in confinement. The last one was discovered by the merest accident a few nights ago, two sets of strong bars being found sawed through, while two fine steel saws and some gelatine, used in covering up his work, were found on his person. How he came by them is a mystery, as he is closely confined in the strongest cell in the prison, and his only visitor is his aged mother, who is allowed to call once in two months and converse with him through the bars, in the presence of a keeper. Pomeroy has repeatedly declared that his only ambition was to kill his keepers and escape, and it is evident that only the closest watch will prevent this tiger in human form from carrying out his purpose.

The president has appointed Prof. G. Brown Goode, assistant director of the national museum, to be commissioner of fish and fisheries. Prof. Goode is a well-known scientist, and was associated with Prof. Baird in many important scientific duties.

President Lincoln's house in Springfield, Illinois, has been conveyed to the state and is now in charge of trustees. Valuable memorials of Mr. Lincoln will be preserved in the house, which will be kept just as he left it to assume the office of president.

Charleston, S. C., had two more shocks of earthquake early Sunday morning, that being the anniversary of the preliminary shock which preceded the disastrous earthquake of August 31st, last year.

C. H. Campbell & Co., prominent coal dealers of Boston, have suspended, with liabilities of $350,000 and assets of $250,000.

The Connecticut River lumber mill at Holyoke was burned Sunday morning with its contents, at a loss of about $50,000.

The selectmen will meet at the town house next Tuesday, instead of Monday, for the transaction of the regular monthly business.

District Deputy Grand High Priest Wilber of Greenfield will pay an official visit to Hampden Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, the 15th inst.

The Boston & Albany road ran an excursion to Boston and the beaches this morning. A large number from Palmer and Monson attended.

The Converse House has been filled to its utmost capacity nearly every night this week, and one night several who desired lodging could not be accommodated.

Charles Royce of Forest Lake has accepted a position as night clerk in the office of the American Express Company at Springfield. He began his duties Thursday.

Labor Day, our new holiday, will put in its first appearance next Monday. The banks will be closed, and all persons having notes due that day should attended to them to-morrow.

J. K. Knox and C. T. Brainerd have filled their silos this week, and C. E. Dewey has re-filled his, it having settled considerably. Selectman Kerigan and J. O. Hamilton have also filled silos.

W. P. Delehanty, for several years conductor on the Ware River road, has purchased the Montlake House and large livery connected, at Brooklyn, Ct., and takes possession to-morrow.

Rev. A. W. Weeks and wife have returned from their vacation at the Weirs, N. H., and the White Mountains, and preaching services will be resumed at the Baptist church next Sunday.

A pleasant musical was given Tuesday evening by Mrs. E. L. Wallace and Mrs. L. E. Moore, at the residence of the latter on West Main street, assisted by Mrs. H. E. Huntley and Edmund A. Wall.

Patrons of the telephone exchange will be pleased to learn that a long-distance transmitter has been put in, enabling conversation to be carried on with Boston and other distant points with ease.

Frank Merriam's little son, about seven years of age, fell from a toy wagon Saturday while at play, and broke his arm, besides dislocating his elbow. The lad was attended by Dr. W. H. Stowe.

Commercial street has been undergoing extensive repairs this week in the matter of grading. Road Commissioner Loomis has also found the other thoroughfares in town to be sadly in need of repairs.

The front of Lasalle & Provost's barber shop on Main street has been taken out this week and re-located, the door now being on the right. The arrangement of the chairs inside has also been changed.

One of O. C. Marcy's livery horses which was left standing in front of Brown & Abbe's market Wednesday afternoon made a sudden dash for the barn, and succeeded in getting there without doing any damage.

The law was "off" on grey squirrels, hare and rabbits yesterday, allowing these animals to be shot now—if the sportsman can find them and is expert enough with his gun. Ducks are also included in the list.

An examination of pupils for admission to the Palmer high school will take place to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock. Twenty new desks have been ordered by the school committee, as the entering class will undoubtedly be unusually large.

Several cases of hog cholera have been discovered among hogs at Three Rivers, and no little alarm is felt by farmers in that vicinity. Six animals have already been killed, and others are sick. The selectmen have engaged Prof. Stockbridge of Amherst to investigate the matter.

The Prohibitionists held a caucus at the town house Wednesday evening and chose these delegates to attend the state convention to be held at Worcester: J. W. Fulton, C. F. Gegenheimer, Hubbard Lawrence, Roscoe Milliken, F. A. Bowen, F. H. Proctor and George F. Wright.

An observant citizen remarks that in some portions of the village there are quantities of weeds allowed to grow unchecked, and suggests that the healthfulness of the community would be greatly enhanced if they were cut down and burned, and not allowed to go to seed and decay.

J. T. Fay & Co. of Northboro, the rubber manufacturers who bought the water power at Blanchardville a few years ago and spent several thousand dollars in improvements with the intention of starting a branch of their business here, and then abandoned it, have recently failed, with liabilities of $35,000.

Officer Healy brought before the district court Monday a vagrant whom he found upon the streets, and who proved to be a demented pauper by the name of Rider, who escaped from the Monson town farm some two years ago, and had not been heard from since. The man was cared for by the Monson authorities.

Next Thursday and Friday, the last two days of the Springfield races, an extra train will leave Springfield for Palmer at 6.25 p. m., and the 6.10 train on the Ware River road will be held until its arrival, thus giving those who wish an opportunity to see the races and still make connections on the other roads out of Palmer.

The Palmer Water Company is in receipt of the following bids for the privilege to cut ice from its reservoir and store the same upon land of the company for a period of five years: W. W. Leach, $102; George A. Griffin, $75; Hastings and Hatch, $40; C. T. Brainerd, $31. The above is the rate of bids per year for the privilege.

Next Monday is Labor Day, and it is expected that all business will be suspended in recognition of the event. The indications are that ball games will be numerous in town that day, and some good ball playing may be witnessed between the local and outside teams. The day at Thorndike will be a notable one, perhaps more so than at any of the other villages.

New passenger cars are soon to be put in use on the Ware River road. It is interesting to note what competition will do in the line of public benefaction. The Boston & Albany company apparently like the appearance of the bright new coaches run over the Central Massachusetts road daily, and consequently desires to be on an equal basis with the new competitor.

The following business has been transacted at the district court this week: James A. Gardner of Wales had a hearing Monday for illegal liquor selling. He was fined $50 and costs of court but appealed. The case of Frank Gardner of the same place, for keeping a liquor nuisance, was continued until to-morrow morning, as was also the civil case in which H. A. Northrop is involved for action of tort.

The poor service of the Western Union Telegraph Company at this place has prompted the business men and citizens to pledge themselves to the patronage of a new company which they are trying to have establish an office in town. A petition will probably be circulated in a few days to secure the signatures of the people who advocate such a project. The companies in view are the United Lines and Rapid Transit.

The Boston & Albany road will run its last excursion of the season to Boston and various shore resorts next Thursday. Tickets will be sold at all points between Barre Plains and Palmer, inclusive, and North Brookfield and Jamesville inclusive, and are placed at the low rate of $1.45 for the round trip, and the number limited to 1000, so that those who intend to go will need to secure tickets at once.

Housewives who have not yet bought peaches for canning will probably get "left," as this week has been the peach week, and few good peaches are expected after to-morrow. Good Crawfords have sold at $1.75 to $2.50 per basket, according to quality. The peach season this year has been very short and unsatisfactory. Good fruit has been scarce, dealers who last year received carloads daily having received about as many during the whole season.

The New London Northern road offers an opportunity to visit Mystic Island, Watch Hill and Block Island next week at the low rate of $1.50 for the round trip. Wednesday and Thursday from Palmer to South Coventry, inclusive, tickets good to return either Wednesday or Thursday. Friday and Saturday from all points between Amherst and Three Rivers, inclusive, tickets good to return either Friday or Saturday. As this will be the last excursion of the season, tickets should be secured at once.

By a vote of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society at its annual meeting, it was decided to charge admission to members as well as others on the second day of the fair this year, in order to pay off the deft incurred by building the grand stand, so long needed to accommodate the public. The Monson band has been engaged to furnish music for Wednesday afternoon. Plenty of good water will also be supplied from the pipes of the Palmer Water Company. The Monsons play ball with the Palmers Tuesday forenoon, and the Three Rivers Wednesday forenoon.

Count Mitkiewicz, who made such a sensation in this section some years ago by marrying a niece of Prof. Tyler at Amherst against the wishes of the family, has accomplished a big stroke of diplomacy for American capitalists, according to dispatches from San Francisco, where he has just landed with letters for Secretary Bayard from the Chinese viceroy, and accompanied by a special Chinese envoy. He has secured for a syndicate of capitalists, headed by Wharton Barker of Philadelphia, concessions of great importance—the right to establish a Chinese bank with a capital of 50,000,000 taels, with numerous branches, which will conduct the finances of the empire, coin money, build railroads, telegraph lines, and exclusive right to operate telephone lines for 50 years. These concessions have long been sought by English, French and German capitalists.

E. L. Maxwell, living in the vicinity of Silver Street, disposed of some cattle to a farmer who resides some distance from his place last spring. Among the number was a stag which at the time of sale the owner supposed to be free from any imperfection whatever, according to his version of the story. The animal was unfortunately taken sick, and a friend of the party to whom it was sold endeavored to exchange it with Mr. Maxwell, its original owner, but failed in the attempt. Last Friday night the mutilated head of the same animal was found in a carriage on Mr. Maxwell's premises, and to its horns was attached an anonymous letter which contained prose and poetry regarding the sale and decease of the animal. Mr. Maxwell hesitated somewhat prior to opening the letter and perusing the document, and brought it to Palmer and left it in charge of a newspaper man who had it in safe keeping at last accounts. The affair has caused quite a little sensation among the rural residents of Silver Street.

IS IT AN ELOPEMENT?

The scandal lovers of this village have been discussing the above question for the past week or ten days, and are still in the dark as to the correct answer. The facts in the case are these: Three weeks ago the wife of an employe at the carpet mill went to Boston on the excursion train, giving out that she should remain a week visiting relatives. The week went by and she did not return, so after a lapse of several days the husband took a trip to the city, and found that at the appointed time she had started for home, since when nothing has been seen or heard of her, although the husband has spent time and money in the search. About the same time a carpenter of the village disappeared, and a few days afterward his wife was moved out of her tenement because of six weeks' unpaid rent. Then it was said to be a case of elopement, especially as the carpenter had been observed of late to be paying more or less attention to the woman who was missing. This is denied by his friends, who claim he was at work in Stafford last week. In the meantime the abandoned wife has moved to Chicopee, and the husband is still looking for the missing wife.

BASE BALL.

A TIE GAME.

The most interesting and hotly contested game of the season was played between the Palmers and Three Rivers on the park last Saturday afternoon in the presence of over 400 spectators. The Three Rivers took their first inning, with Sullivan at the bat, who fouled out to Sugrue. Howard followed with a base hit and stole second, while John Manning hit to Miller who assisted to first and got the runner out, while McManamy returned the ball to Miller who put out Howard, making a double play. In the Palmers first inning Miller went to the bat, made a base hit, but was captured while stealing second. Betts and M. Rooney followed and were struck out. In the visitors second inning Rattell reached first by a base hit, King followed but struck out. Dupell bunted the sphere to Rooney who assisted it to first and put the runner out. Warriner then struck out and thus left Rattell on third. Rooney and McManamy struck out in the Palmers second inning, while Sugrue fouled out. Nolan made a base hit in the Three Rivers third inning but was fastened upon while stealing second bag, while Sullivan struck out and Howard hit to Betts who threw him out at first. In the Palmers third inning Kenare struck out, Ranahan hit a foul fly to third and got out, while Woodard hit to Nolan, who assisted the runner out at first. Both batteries did excellent work as it will be perceived, the pitchers of each team proving very effective. When the visitors took their fourth inning John Manning and James Manning struck out. Howard terminated that inning by a hit to second, who assisted the ball to first and retired the runner. Miller opened the Palmers fourth inning with a fine base hit. A wild throw of the pitcher and a pass ball allowed him to reach second, while another base hit by M. Rooney gave Miller his third, and another wild throw to the catcher sent Rooney to second and Miller home. This was the first run that had been made during the contest, and Miller was loudly applauded. Rooney stole third on a pass ball while Betts fouled out to the catcher. McManamy made a safe base hit which was followed by a fumble for the pitcher, short stop and second baseman, and sent in Rooney, who was waiting patiently on third. Captain Rooney went to the bat and got his first by a base hit, while McManamy was decided out on second by the umpire. Rooney was also thrown out on third by the catcher. King sent a fly to Woodard in the Three Rivers fifth inning who made a costly error. Dupell struck out at bat while King stole second and then third and brought in the first run for the visitors by a hit of Warriner's, while Howard made a safe hit and got his first and then second, while Warriner ran to third. Sullivan then made a hit and Warriner ran in and Howard went home, as did Sullivan, on a wild throw to McManamy who returned it to Sugrue in the same wild way that he endeavored to receive it, but it was missed and furthermore lost, thus leaving the bases unoccupied by even a runner. This was a somewhat discouraging outlook, but they continued to "play ball" nevertheless. John Manning was the next at the bat and managed to reach first bag, while the hit of James Manning sent the former to second and the latter to first. Rattell struck out and left the runners on bases. The fifth inning for the local team was a highly successful one. Sugrue hit a liner to short stop who assisted him out at first. Kenare followed with a base hit and stole second on a hit of Ranahan's, while Woodard's fly sent in the other two runners and himself also, assisted in a measure by wild throws of the visitors to bases. Miller went to bat and struck out, while M. Rooney hit a fly to third and finished that inning, making the score read 5 to 4 in favor of the Palmers. The Three Rivers were shut out in the next inning by the effective work of the battery of the local team, while a hit of Howard's in the seventh inning and a throw to first by Miller which was allowed to pass by McManamy by his failure to see it because of the sun, prompted the runner to run home on a lost ball which was not recovered for some time and returned to the diamond. This tied the score and made the contest decidedly close but interesting. The Palmers were shut out in the eighth and ninth innings by good battery work and fielding, while the local team returned the compliment in the Three Rivers eighth and ninth. Much credit is due the visitors for good conduct throughout the contest. The score follows:

The Palmers are matched with the Ludlows on the park to-morrow afternoon.

The second nine of Palmer will play the second nine of Three Rivers on the park next Monday forenoon, and the second nine of Monson in the afternoon.

There is an unusual amount of rivalry between the different villages of the town as regards the leading base ball team. Thorndike claims the championship of the town.

The games by other local teams, played Saturday, resulted as follows: Lightweights, 18, White-Wings, 18. Wide-Awakes, 9, North Monsons 0. The score in the 5th inning stood 13 to 11 in favor of the latter team, which refused to play out the remaining four innings.

Some of the city boarders have left for their homes during the past week.

The Farmers' and Mechanics' club met last Tuesday evening and settled upon October 11th for the annual cattle show.

The young ladies' guild realized $50 at the sociable Wednesday evening. This society is fast growing in favor with the public in their efforts toward beautifying the park.

The store of W. E. Bridgman was broken into Wednesday night at the rear of the building by breaking in a large pane of glass in the door, and it is supposed the burglars became frightened, as by accident they pushed the scales on the floor, the noise being heard some distance away. Mr. Bridgman has purchased a large English bull dog for the coming intruders. The same night William Demond's store was broken into and a considerable quantity of goods taken.

BRIMFIELD.

Mrs. S. W. Smith and her three children of Springfield, are at her father's, George Bacon.

The Hitchcock Free High School commenced the fall term on Wednesday, with 70 pupils.

The commencement of the fall term of the town schools has been postponed to Monday, September 5th.

Rev. Mr. Ayer and family reached town Wednesday. They were given a dinner at the church by the ladies of the Baptist society.

Frank White and wife, also Fred Burlingame and wife, were the guests of Jesse Burlingame of Baptist Hill.

Robert Lemon, who has been ill a short time with typhoid fever, died Wednesday afternoon. The funeral is at one o'clock to-morrow.

THORNDIKE.

The Thorndike Democratic Club has elected these officers for the ensuing year: President, Thomas Moran; secretary, John F. Luman; treasurer, John F. Loftus.

The Thorndike base ball club continues to "do up" everything they have met this season, and on Saturday last added another game to their number, beating the Hampdens by a score of 19 to 3. The visitors started off well but did not keep it up. Madden, the new pitcher for the home team, won quite a record for his first appearance, striking out fifteen of the Hampdens, and with Sullivan and Madden for pitchers the Thorndikes feel very confident of success. They are constantly receiving challenges from the best amateur clubs in this part of the state. The club is composed of all local players with the exception of Shine, who takes Green's place until he returns from his pleasure trip. The Chicopee Falls club play here Saturday at 4 p. m. On the Monday following they play the Homesteads of Springfield in the forenoon, and the Hartfords in the afternoon, and will hold a dance at Union hall in the evening. The above-named clubs are very good, and if Thornkike can win these three games they will do well, and ought to be encouraged. The public are much interested in the local team, and have done much for the club this season in assisting them in every way, both financially and otherwise.

WALES.

Miss Leona King of Brimfield is visiting Miss Amy Arnold.

Mrs. Estella Boyden and family return to Worcester this week.

Mrs. J. G. Houghton of Springfield is visiting old friends here.

Rev. H. M. Tupper and wife of Raleigh, are visiting at E. Shaw's.

Miss Abbie Parker of Springfield has been spending a week among her numerous friends.

Mrs. Pervale of Brookly, has returned home, also Charles Royce of Boston, but his family remain a few days longer, while H. M. Needham will remain two weeks, or until he completes the painting of all the buildings and fences in the old street.

O. C. Switzer will be obliged to put on extra teams to accommodate his passengers, as a large number of scholars have engaged passage with him to the Brimfield high school. Among the new ones commencing the course are Miss Anna Burly and Miss Amy Arnold.

Rev. H. P. Smith of Hartford, Conn., has purchased the farm of H. M. Guilder, situated near the Wales pond, where he will erect a cottage on the hill top overlooking the pond, for a summer resort. There are several other nice locations near for such buildings, and there is likely to be quite a boom in that direction. This is one of the most beautiful lakes in Hampden county.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

The town schools begin the fall term next Monday.

Mrs. and Miss Cutler of Ashland have been visiting A. E. Bell.

Bradford Perry of Boston spent Sunday with his son, J. M. Perry.

It is reported that the genial M. D. discounted $500 from the price he said he must and would have, if he sold.

E. H. Cutler has returned from his western trip. He spent some time at and near Fargo, Dakota, and reports being highly pleased with the country.

Rev. M. S. Dudley has returned from his vacation, and regular Sunday services will be resumed at Grace church next Sunday. Mr. Dudley spent part of his vacation at Mt. Desert.

The north-end friends of Hubbard, the Wilbraham street grocer, are glad to learn that he has bought the store where he has been located for several years, as this will insure his remaining in town.

The Collins Mfg. Co. has its gang of men at work again on the dam, and they hope to get it in shape before any more rain. It is quite an expensive job, as a big coffer-dam will have to be built.

Considerable interest was felt in the ball game between the Paper Makers and Grist Mills last Saturday, as both clubs had won one game. The "meal bags" got badly left, the score being 12 to 3 in favor of the Paper Makers. After the first inning, when the Paper Makers got in five runs, the game was finely played, and nearly every run was made by hard fighting.

BONDSVILLE.

The mill will not run Labor Day, and schools will not commence until Tuesday, September 6.

P. J. Nelligan has just completed another job of concreting in the mill yard of the Boston Duck Co.

Sparkling Water Division, S. of T., has received and accepted an invitation from the Ludlow division, to meet with them September 10th.

Rev. Hugh Montgomery will lecture in the Methodist church next Tuesday evening. A good attendance is hoped for, not only from this but all the other villages.

The Boston Duck Co. is about building a reservoir to supply their tenements and the bleachery with spring water. George Griffin of Palmer has been engaged to oversee the digging.

About forty members of the juvenile temperance society, the "Loyal Legion," held a picnic Wednesday in the grove on the company's land, and a right royal good time the little folks had, swinging, roller skating, promenading, blowing soap bubbles, etc. A number of the older people came in the afternoon, and they seemed to enjoy themselves as much as the children.

Work is progressing rapidly on the Central Massachusetts railroad. The iron is laid to the long bridge, and graveling will be completed to that point this week. Regular trains will run between here and Boston by the 15th of September. There is still a great lot of work to be done upon the long bridge, but the labor of a large gang of men seven days in the week, steadily and swiftly carries the work along.

WARREN.

A. L. Converse has sold his house on Keyes street to E. F. Strickland.

Mrs. George Shumway and son returned from a visit to Brockton, Monday.

Mrs. Potter and Miss Clark of Enfield have been spending a few days with friends in town.

There will be services at the Universalist church next Sabbath, the pastor having returned from his vacation.

The Blake company is contemplating the enlargement of the foundry, as its present quarters are very much cramped.

The Woman's Board of Missions met with Mrs. Clark at the parsonage Thursday afternoon, and were addressed by a lady missionary from Japan.

A returned missionary from Japan, accompanied by a native helper in costume, gave a very interesting address at the Congregational chapel Friday evening.

It is expected that Fairbank's block, formerly used for a boot shop, will be occupied by the corset works from West Brookfield, their shop there being too small.

A pleasant party of friends and relatives gathered at D. W. Shepard's pleasant home on Crescent street Thursday evening, to celebrate the birthday of his son-in-law, F. W. Kimball.

Miss Lillian A. Wisswell will teach the second primary school in the new building. The schools will commence Tuesday, September 6th. There will be few changes in the corps of teachers.

The community has been much saddened this week by the death of Miss Emma Cutler, who died Monday evening. The funeral was attended at her home Thursday afternoon at two o'clock. She will be much missed by a large circle of friends.

HAMPDEN.

Rev. Mr. Chase and family are spending their vacation at Sachem's Head.

E. Howlett and Linn McCray have returned from a short trip along the Sound.

What ailed the ball team that went to Thorndike Saturday? Did they "take in" Palmer on the way?

Miss Fairbanks and Miss Myrtie Perrin, who have been spending a few weeks at Mr. Johnson's, have returned to Providence.

The daughters of Rev. Mr. Tunnicliffe, also Miss Maude Goodwill and Miss Maude Smith, enter Wesleyan Academy the present term.

Willie Pease lost a horse from colic last Saturday. He is quite unfortunate as a more valuable one was badly cut on the mowing machine and has not yet recovered.

The widow of Milton Turner died last Friday at the advanced age of 87 years. Although feeble she had been able to sew and assist in household cares until within a few days, but had not been out of the yard for some years.

Miss Annie Sheldon was quietly married to Mr. Thist by her uncle, Rev. Darius Stoddard of Worcester, at her father's house Sunday morning, and appeared at church as a bride, much to the surprise of most of the congregation, as none but the near relatives knew of the affair. The happy couple left Monday for their New York home.

Rev. H. M. Tupper, D. D., president of the Shaw Institute at Raleigh, N. C., and formerly of Monson, has with his family been spending the summer here. His son and daughter have been at Hamilton, N. Y., at school the past year, and return this week for another year, while Mr. Tupper goes South next week. His wife will tarry a few weeks longer.

WEST WARREN.

The ball team had rather hard luck at Gilbertville last Saturday, being defeated 22 to 13. They will do better next time.

The excursion to Boston to-day attracted many persons from here, but there are enough left to fill the circus tents to-night.

Gorton's minstrels gave a first class show to a fair sized audience Monday night. They will be sure of a full house if they play here again.

A pleasant little party gathered at Henry E. Brann's Tuesday evening, as he was to go to Wilbraham Academy the next morning, and presented him with a handsome gold pencil.

Rev. Thomas Smith, a returned missionary from Jaffna, Island of Ceylon, spoke in the Congregational chapel Thursday evening. He was accompanied by a native dressed in costume, who sang, and played on the cymbals.

The folly of horse racing in the village streets was well illustrated Tuesday night, when a Frenchman called "Mitch" raced up Main street with another team and attempted to turn into North street. The man with him, three children, wagon, horse and all turned a complete somersault, and when the dust had cleared away "Mitch" was found lying insensible on the curbing, and it was nearly half an hour before Dr. St. Germain could bring him to consciousness. The others escaped with only a few bruises.

A social dance was held at State Line last evening.

The hook and ladder truck was housed Tuesday evening.

The academy commenced Wednesday with sixty-five students.

George E. Norris and family of Brockton are visiting G. L. Keeney.

Lawyer Needham and daughter of Wales were in town the past week.

Henry Newton has sold his horse and carriage to Henry O. Nelson.

A number from this place attended the races at Hartford this week.

Ben Howard and wife have been visiting L. Hutchinson the past week.

Mrs. Page and children of Philadelphia are visiting C. W. Holmes, Sr.

A. M. Guilford is expecting to return to his farm on the Wilbraham road about Oct. 1st.

Public schools commence next Monday, with all the old teachers except in a few cases.

Mr. Hubbard and family, living in the Clifford house on North Main street, moved to Westboro this week.

H. O. Nelson came out this week with a nice horse and carriage, purchased of Henry Newton of Amherst.

Last Saturday's ball game between the Monsons and the Somervilles resulted in favor of the Monsons by the score of 10 to 4.

Rev. M. Priest, pastor-elect of the Universalist society, arrived with his wife yesterday, and has taken rooms in the Hathaway residence on Lincoln street.

Universalist services will be resumed in Central Hall next Sunday; preaching by the pastor, Rev. Ira A. Priest, morning and evening. Sunday-school at 12 o'clock. All are welcome.

Dr. Fuller and Dr. Ellis start to-day for Washington, D. C., to attend the International Medical Congress, which meets there next week. Dr. Jackson will attend Dr. Fuller's patients during his absence.

WARE AND VICINITY.

William Weeks has nearly ready to be occupied a three-tenement house on Park avenue.

John F. Robinson's clerk, Leon Sturtevant, has resigned his position and is to go to Auburn, N. Y.

William Cregan's stay in the post office as clerk was short. Frank Shay takes the place that he gave up.

The Hennessy Brothers' Ideal Minstrel Company is to play at the town hall on Saturday evening of next week.

The Unitarians are to commence holding services at their church again on Sunday, preaching to be at 10.30 o'clock.

Dr. W. L. Roberts is to move his family to Quincy the first of next week. He is to open a dental office there, his health being much improved.

Peter Strahan, who had his arm badly broken by a heavy team running over it, is improving, and will probably not have to lose the arm, as was at first feared.

Monday, Sept. 5th, is Labor Day, and will be celebrated by Local Assembly 4520 K. of L. by a grand social dance at Music Hall. The Cadet Orchestra is to furnish the music.

E. N. Anderson returns to Worcester and commences his work there on Monday. He is to be at his room in Ware on Wednesday of each week, from 9.30 a. m. to 6 p. m.

Trinity Episcopal society is to occupy the town hall to hold their services in on Sunday, as the Unitarians are to hold services in the church themselves. The morning and evening services are to be at the usual time.

The land which was occupied by the new tenement block on West street, that was burned last June, has been sold by Henry E. Barnes to Luther Carroll, who is at work constructing a three-tenement house on it for himself.

Preparations are being made for a grand fair, to be held at the town hall, commencing the 17th of September, by St. Williams' Catholic chuch. It will no doubt be one of the most enjoyable ever held in town, as Rev. James Boyle, the pastor, does nothing by halves, and will spare no pains to make this a grand success.

JOTTINGS FROM THE HUB.

From our Special Correspondent.

BOSTON, Aug. 31st, 1887.

The cool turn in the weather has brought people back from the beaches, and if it continues for a few days longer, most of the summer sojourners will have returned home. To-day overcoats are not infrequent, and the straw hat is becoming as rare as redwinged blackbirds about this time in the country. With the approach of September, too, comes an added interest in the three political conventions which will occur this month. In the Republican headquarters the belief is that the third party vote will not be perceptibly larger than it was last year, notwithstanding the efforts which the Prohibitionists are making. In only one part of the state, and that is Franklin county, is the third party vote expected to show any considerable gain, and it is conceded that it may be some 300 to 500 more than last year, when it was 458 out of a total 4800, or less than 10 per cent. The experience in Conway, where some half of the Republicans have pledged themselves to vote the Prohibitory ticket (so it is reported) is not duplicated in any other town in the state.

It is the intention of the liquor dealers, so well informed Republicans believe, to repeat their tactics of last year regarding the Legislature. They will not waste any work or money in trying to affect the composition of the House of Representatives, but they will focus their whole effort upon the Senate. If they can get 21 senators, it will save them from prohibitory amendment or a prohibitory law, and probably prevent the enactment of further restrictive legislation. On the part of some Republicans, it is advised that good prohibitory nominees be indorsed by the Republicans, when they will (in all human probability) act with the Republicans upon every legislative issue. It would in part draw the fire of the Prohibitionists, so it is argued, and would prevent the defeat of a Republican candidate in all districts where the Democratic vote is larger than the Republican and Prohibitory taken separately, but not as much as the two combined. I am told to-day by a Boston Republican that the liquor men will spare no amount of money or work in their effort to control the Senate.

It is more than ever certain that there will be no change in the Republican state ticket. The pressure on Attorney General Sherman not to withdraw increases on account of the desire to keep the entire ticket as strong as possible for the beginning of the presidental campaign. An agreement was very nearly reached last year, but not quite, I understood, by which ex-Senator Pillsbury was to withdraw from the contest for the office last year, provided Sherman would quietly step out of the way this year. But the dislike of the Republican managers to make a change without a material addition of strength leads them to think best for Mr. Pillsbury to wait until next year at least.

The death of Judge Soule, the counsel of the Boston and Albany Railroad, raises the question of the succession to his place. A gentleman in position to have an opinion worth respect says the place will probably not go to ex-Gov. Robinson, but may possible go to young Sam Hoar of Concord, who has been associated with Mr. Soule as counsel. He further states that ex-Gov. Robinson is doing remarkably well in his law practice in Springfield, even better than he expected when he began, so he is reported as saying.

The contract between the great milk contractors of the city has not yet been signed, and now there is a possibility that it never will be. It was drawn up a month ago or more by one of the leading lawyers of the city, and copies sent to the several firms. They cannot agree on details, and it is possible the whole scheme may fall through.

To-morrow will come the dinner of the Butler club at the Quincy House, "complimentary to the soldiers of the Union, and in commemoration of the 26th anniversary of the capture of Fort Hatteras," as the invitation has it, which further says, "as our club is organized for no political purpose and has no political significance, we cordially invite you to unite with us in this tribute to 'the boys who wore the blue,' regardless of past or present political opinions or affiliations." Yet from statements of a member of the club, I have no doubt that its sole purpose is political, and the opinion of outside practical politicians is to the same effect. But Republicans and Democrats are announced to have accepted invitations to attend, among them such stanch anti-Butler men as Col. Z. A. Smith of the Boston Journal. One to whom Butler made the remark quotes him to me to-day as saying, "I would rather be in a good fight than eat my dinner," and it would not be strange if the general himself should take a hand this year. Would anybody be surprised to see him turn up as a good Republican? What then will become of all those speeches against Butler the Democrat, by George D. Robinson and others?

The Democrats insist that the Republicans and the public are misinformed regarding the purposes of the committee to investigate the number of Republican office holders under Democratic heads in this state. The inquiry relates, so says one of their leaders, not to the total of Republicans, but only to those who have been offensively partisan in politics since the promulgation of the president's order, and who, on the basis of that order, ought to be removed. It is protested that the Democrats, as a party, are not desirous of a clean sweep, but only wish to have Collector Saltonstall and Postmaster Corse even up the appointments under them, and especially not to seek excuses for the protection of Republican clerks who have violated the civil service spirit, and ought therefore to be removed. President Cleveland, say they, will continue to have the united support of the party, and because there is criticism of Saltonstall and Corse, it by no means follows that the president is criticised at the same time.

Delegates to the next national convention will be selected by the Democratic state convention at Worcester Sept. 20.

IS DEAFNESS AN AFFLICTION OF THE PAST.

CLEAVELAND, O., Sept. 1. The physicians of this city are greatly interested over a case of almost total deafness which has been instantly relieved by the invention of H. A. Wales of Bridgeport, Conn. The case had long been considered hopeless, as all known remedies and devices had failed to be of benefit, and is considered a triumph for this wonderful and invisible device.

I had kidney disorder and say for the good of others that Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy cured me. Rev. S. C. Chandler, Lebanon Springs, N. Y. I had Stone in the Bladder and Gravel in the Kidneys. I use Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy and am now well.—E. D. Parsons, Rochester, N. Y. Price $1. Send 2-cent stamp to Dr. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y., for a book on Kidney, Liver and Blood disorders. Mention this paper. 4w23

HAY FEVER.

For twenty-five years I have been severely afflicted with hay fever. While I was suffering intensely I was induced, through Mr. Tichenor's testimonial, to try Ely's Cream Balm. The effect was marvelous. It enabled me to perform my pastoral duties without the slightest inconvenience, and I have escaped a return attack. I pronounce Ely's Cream Balm a cure for hay fever.—Wm. T. Carr, Presbyterian Pastor, Elizabeth, N. J. 2w23

The Art Amateur for September contains an attractive colored plate of chrysanthemums by Victor Dangon, a charming study of a child's head by Ellen Welby, a large panel design for wood carving, china painting, decorations for three plates (harebells, pomegranate flowers and crab-apples) and a "satchel" vase (dandelions), five pages of embroidery designs, a page of outline figure sketches, and one of monograms in P. Articles of particular interest are those on the architecture of Fifth Avenue, Madame de Cassin's pictures with a striking drawing of Henri Regnault's "Salome," "An Artist's Country" (Normady) and the "Windsor Tapestries." "Notes for collectors," "Recollections of Bonnat's Life school," "A Lesson in Pastel Painting," and a "Talk on Walls and Ceilings" are especially practical and valuable. "My Note Book" is full of pointed paragraphs, and the art notes and answers to correspondents bristle with useful hints. It is no wonder that art lovers and students find the Art Amateur indispensable. Price 35 cents, $4.00 per year. Montague Marks, Publisher, 23 Union Square, New York.

THE TORTILITA MINES.

THE HARTFORD POST ON THEIR GREATNESS.

One of the richest Mining Properties in the World.

SPECIAL DESPATCH.

Hartford, Ct., Aug. 17, 1887.

The Post of this city prints in to-day's issue a full page article on the Tortilita Gold and Silver Mines of which MR. JOSEPH H. REALL, (who is being urged for Vice-President on the ticket with CLEVELAND as the representative of the Agricultural and Laboring interests) is president. The Post shows that the Tortilita Company have one of the greatest mining properties in America, and it estimates that with the forty stamp mill that is now being arranged for, which will crush 160 tons of ore per day, that the company can earn over one hundred thousand dollars per month net, or over one hundred per cent per year on its capital stock, which would make the shares that are now selling to subscribers for $2 each, the par value, at the company's office, 57 Broadway, New York, worth over $20 each, while this result can be again doubled by additional stamps as the company have an inexhaustible supply of rich ore. A second Virginia City is predicted in connection with the Tortilitas, as the company have twelve developed and proven mines out of which over $150,000 in bullion was taken while the exploring and developing work was going, on which, together with the prices now being realized for the shares so soon after they are put upon the market, are unexampled facts in the history of mining. The Post pronounces the Tortilitas one of the best and cleanest cut enterprises that the public ever was invited to invest in. The stock is attracting much attention throughout New England and is being largely taken for investment by bankers, merchants, farmers, and by working men and women. It is announced that the subscription books will close in a few days preparatory to the stock being called on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. The offices of the company are at 57 Broadway, New York, and the mines are in the richest mineral district of Arizona.

Some Things Learned by Experience,

That a tablespoonful of salt thrown on a coal fire that is low, will cause it to burn up quickly. That you can clean oil cloth with milk and water; while soap and brush will ruin it. That the skin of a boiled egg is the best remedy you can apply to a boil. That you can't cure Rheumatism or Neuralgia without taking Menard's Rheumatic Bullets. That you can buy them of LeGro & Lynde for $1.00 per bottle. cow7

THE VERDICT UNANIMOUS.

W. D. Sult, Druggist, Bippus, Ind., testifies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles, and was cured of Rheumatism of 10 years' standing." Abraham Hare, druggist, Bellville, Ohio, affirms: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my 20 years' experience, is Electric Bitters." Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys or Blood. Only a half dollar a bottle at LeGro & Lynde's Drug Store. 2

A WOMAN'S DISCOVERY.

"Another wonderful discovery has been made, and that too by a lady in this county. Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly, and could not sleep. She bought of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night and with one bottle has been miraculously cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus write W. C. Hamrich & Co., of Shelby, N. C.—Get a free trial bottle at LeGro & Lynde's Drug Store. 2

IN BRIEF, AND TO THE POINT.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existence. It is easy to put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Greens August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents. 2

TO THE HONORABLE THE JUSTICES of the Superior Court, holden at Springfield within and for the County of Hampden.

Humbly shews Nellie S. Able of Palmer, in said County of Hampden, that she was lawfully married to Frederick M. Able, then of the city, county and state of New York, and now of parts unknown, at said Palmer, on the thirteenth day of December, A. D., 1883, that they have since lived together as husband and wife in said Palmer, until the 17th day of December, A. D., 1883, since which time they have lived seperate and apart from each other, and she has ever conducted towards him as a faithful, chaste and affectionate wife, yet the said Frederick M., regardless of his marriage vows and obligations, at said Palmer, in the month of December, A. D. 1883, utterly deserted her and has continued such desertion from that time to the date hereof, being more than three consecutive years, next prior to the filing of this libel; and that, being of sufficient ability, he grossly, and wantonly and cruelly refuses and neglects to provide a suitable maintenance for her.

Wherefore she prays that the bonds of matrimony heretofore existing between her and said Frederick M. may be dissolved, and for such further orders and decrees in the premises as to law and justice may appertain.

NELLIE S. ABLE.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.—HAMPDEN, ss.

SUPERIOR COURT AT SPRINGFIELD.

August 11th, A. D., 1887.

On the Libel aforesaid, it is ordered, that the Libellant notify the said Frederick M. Able, to appear before the justices of this court, at Springfield, aforesaid, on the first Monday of October next, by publishing an attested copy of said Libel and this order, once a week, in the Palmer Journal, a newspaper printed in Palmer, three weeks successively, the last publication to be thirty days at least before the said first Monday of October, that he may then and there show cause why the prayer of said Libel should not be granted.

BY License of the Probate Court for the County of Hampden, the subscriber, administrator with the will annexed, of the estate of Emelius B. Murdock, late of Palmer, in said county, deceased, will sell at public auction on the premises on Saturday, the 20th day of August, next, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, the store and tenement with about one acre of land, situated in the village of Bondsville, belonging to the estate of said E. B. Murdock. This store is on a very prominent corner and has for a long time controlled the trade of a large section, and a rare chance for business. Also, on the same day, commencing at 9 o'clock a. m., I will sell all the personal property remaining, consisting of 1 horse 11 years old, 1 carriage, several express wagons, sleighs, harness, robes, etc. The furniture and household goods, books, pictures and articles too numerous to mention, with the balance of store stock of dry goods, boots and shoes, groceries and fancy goods. Terms made known at time of sale.

T. D. POTTER, Admr. with the will annexed. Bondsville, July 28th, 1887.

BREWSTER'S SAFETY REIN HOLDER will prevent a runaway and smashup.

It holds the reins firmly, preventing them from falling under the horse's feet. Easily attached to any vehicle, and will last a lifetime. Must be seen to be appreciated. The undersigned has the sole agency for Palmer. Call and see them.

SULPHUR BITTERS

THE BEST AND PUREST MEDICINE EVER MADE.

It will drive the Humor from your system, and make your skin clean and smooth. Those Pimples and Blotches which mar your beauty are caused by impure blood, and can be removed in a short time, if you are wise and use the great blood purifier, SULPHUR BITTERS.

What makes you tremble so? Your nerves are all unstrung, and need a gentle, soothing
DON'T tonic to assist nature to repair the damage which your excesses have caused.
GIVE Sulphur Bitters is NOT a cheap rum or poor whisky drink, to be taken by the
UP! glass, like other preparations, which stimulate only to destroy. Why suffer with Boils? Why rave with that terrible headache? Why lay and toss on that bed of pain with rheumatism?

If you have failed to receive any benefit from other medicines or doctors, do not despair. Use Sulphur Bitters. They will cure you when all others fail. No person can remain long sick who uses SULPHUR BITTERS.

The dose is small—only a teaspoonful. It is the best and cheapest medicine. Try it, and you will be satisfied. Get it of SULPHUR your druggist. Don't wait, get it at BITTERS. once. If you are suffering from Kidney Disease, and wish to live to old age, use Sulphur Bitters. They never fail to cure.

The Banana Peel.

Like a bar of the beaten gold
I gleam in the gol len sun;
I am little, I know, but I think I can throw
A man that will weigh a ton.

I send out no challenges bold,
I blow me no vaunting horn,
But foolish is he who treadeth upon me;
He'll wish he had ne'er been born.

Like the flower of the field, vain man
Goeth forth at the break of day;
But when he shall feel my grip on his heel
Like the stubble he fadeth away;

For I lift him high up in the air,
With his heels where his head ought to be,
With a down-coming crash he maketh his mash,
And I know he's clear gone upon me.

I am scorned by the man who buys me,
I am modest and quiet and meek;
Though my talents are few, yet the work that I do,
Has oft made the cellar doors creak.

I am a canary-colored republican born,
And a nihilist fearless I be;
Though the head wears a crown, I would bring its pride down,
If it set its proud heels upon me.

ONE KIND OF MEAT.

His wife was a scold
And her language was bold,
Each day in the year did she clatter,
From morn until night,
From dark until light,
You'd have thought a cyclone was the matter.

Oh, give us a rest,"
Said her husband, whose nerves were unstrung,
"You just get me some meat,
Some kind I can eat,
For I can't live alone on hot tongue."

WHAT IT COSTS TO RAISE A BOY.

"My father never did anything for me," recently remarked a young man who a few weeks ago finished his school life, and is now seeking a good business opening. Judging by the words and the complaining tone in which they were uttered, the member of the firm who heard them is prone to believe that the young man's idea of "doing something" is an outright gift of a thousand dollars in a lump, or the purchase of a partnership in an established concern. This young man, to the knowledge of the writer, has never done one month's actual work for others in his entire life. His life has been passed in the pleasant pastimes of the home circle, in reading, study, hunting, fishing, ball-playing, yachting and other employments not particularly beneficial to others. He is a type of that class of boys whose parents are sufficiently well-to-do to keep servants to attend to the household drudgery, and whose fathers follow vocations in which no use can be made of the boy's spare hours. Like most boys of his class, he looks upon his board and clothes for twenty years, together with his pony, jewelry, bicycle, etc., as matters of course. The writer, while the complaining remark was still ringing in his ears, had the curiosity to make a conservative compilation of what it costs to raise an ordinary boy for the first twenty years of his life, and here it is:

$100	per year for the first	5 years	$ 500
150	" " " second	5 "	750
200	" " " third	5 "	1,000
300	" " " next	3 "	900
500	" " " next	2 "	1,000
			$4,150

Yes, this is a moderate estimate of the financial balance against the boy who complains that his father has never done anything for him.—Buffalo Express.

JUSTICE FIELD WOULD NOT SIGN.

A rather spare old gentleman, with thin grayish whiskers, and wearing a pair of highly polished spectacles, leaned over the counter in the Southern Pacific company's down town ticket office, Monday morning, and asked for a round trip ticket to Portland.

"Thirty dollars," promptly responded the clerk.

The passenger laid the gold on the counter and the clerk pulled the ticket out of the case and handed it toward him with a well inked pen.

"What is that for?" asked the passenger, with a touch of contempt in his tone, and glancing toward the pen.

"Sign there, please."

"I beg your pardon."

"Sign the ticket, please."

"No, sir; I refuse; there is no law in the United States compelling me to sign a railroad ticket. There is your money. Give me the ticket."

The somewhat ruffled ticket agent looked at the passenger and then at the ticket, but did not touch the money.

"What is your name, sir?" he asked at length.

"Stephen J. Field," was the reply.

Then it dawned upon the rather dazed mind of the young man behind the counter that he was talking with one of the justices of the supreme court of the United States. He quietly stamped the unsigned ticket, handed it to the passenger with a subdued air, and as he put the money in the drawer he was observed by the bystanders to be in a very reflective mood.—San Francisco Chronicle.

WOMAN'S CURIOUS WAYS.

One of Mr. Patch's Fitchburg tin peddlers sold a bill of goods to a white woman at Sterling, recently. She was middle-aged, good looking and pleasant of manner. She had not money enough to pay for what she had bought, so she told the peddler to go to the foot of the garden, where he would find her husband, who would pay him the full amount.

At the foot of the garden the peddler found a gentleman hard at work, and received from him the amount of the tin purchased. But the gentleman was as black as a pirate's flag. Passing the house on the way to his wagon the good looking woman asked him if he had got his money.

"Yes, madam," he answered, "but that nigger can't be your husband?"

"Oh yes, he is," was the unabashed retort.

"But how could you marry him, madam?" asked the astonished peddler.

"Well," replied the woman, "I had my choice between a nigger and a tin peddler, and I took him. What's more I have never been sorry."—Worcester Telegram.

WHAT A SMALL BOY COULD DO.

A lad in Boston, small for his age, works in an office as errand boy for four gentlemen who do business there. One day the gentlemen were chaffing him for being so small, and said to him:

"You will never amount to much; you can never do much; you are too small."

The little fellow replied:

"Notwithstanding I'm small, I can do something that none of you can do."

Ah, what is that?" said they.

"I don't know as I ought to tell you," he replied.

But they were anxious to know, and urged him to tell what he could do that none of them were able to do.

"I can keep from swearing," said the little fellow.

There were blushes on four faces, and there seemed to be no anxiety for further information.

FISHERMAN'S LUCK.—"Say, Gaddersby," said Mr. Smith as he came into the fish store with a lot of tackle in his hand. "I want you to give me some fish to take home with me. Kind o' fix them up so they'll look as if they'd been caught to-day, will you?" "Certainly sir," said the grocer. "How many?" "Oh, you'd better get me two or three bass. Make it look decent in quantity without appearing to exaggerate." "Yes, sir. But you'd better take white fish hadn't you?" "Why?" "Oh, nothing, except that your wife was down here early this afternoon and said if you dropped in with a fishpole over your shoulder and a general woe-begone look, to have you take white, if possible, as she liked that kind better than any other." He took white fish.

A three-years-old boy, who, afflicted probably by the hot weather, had been cross and fretful all day, was asked rather sharply by his mother, "What's the matter?" "I want it to snow," was the child's prompt reply.—Albany Journal.

GERM DISEASES.

A Powerful Tonic that the Most Delicate Stomach will Bear. The Most Scientific and Successful

BLOOD PURIFIER.

The venerable gentleman whose letter we here introduce is the oldest and one of the most respected citizens of Bridgeport, Conn. On the occasion of his ninetieth birthday, in March, 1887, nearly a thousand people of that city called on Mr. Thompson to offer their congratulations. He has resided in the house now owned and occupied by him on Water street, for about sixty years. His faculties are apparently as strong and clear as ever.

I am now a very old manIf I live t-n years more—which it is quite possible I may—I shall have been exactly one century in this world. In my ninety years I have seen and passed through a great deal. Of course I have outlived nearly or quite all who started life with me. Although I may be supposed to have much of the wisdom that comes of experience, I have found out recently that one is never too old to learn something new. The weight of infirmities that naturally attend so advanced an age as mine would seem to be burden enough, but added to this I have suffered considerable of late from malaria. I first became aware of the complaint by a feeling of unusual fatigue, a sense of nervousness, attacks of headache and pains in the limbs. In fact I may go further and say there was not a spot on my body the size of your thumb nail that did not ache. There was a bad taste in the mouth, I slept badly, and my appetite was uncertain and poor. I would have chills running up and down my back, and at times would have considerable fever. My stomach, too, seemed to be out of order; there would be some distress after eating, and between the periods I perspired a good deal more than was natural after any unusal exertion.

This state of things made me uneasy and anxious, and I consulted a physician who prescribed quinine. By the way, I should mention that I had a good deal of aching in the back, as though I had done a hard days work or carried a load too great for my strength. I took quinine in large doses for a long while, and with very disastrous effects. I took twelve grains a day and sometimes increased the dose to thirty grains a day, and it was not long before I began to feel the effect of so large a quantity of this powerful and dangerous drug. It seemed to stupefy me as certain poisons are said to do. Then came dizziness and terrible ringing in the ears, with deafness, so that I had great difficulty in understanding the speech of those who spoke to me. There was roaring and also other unpleasant sounds in my head. I am not sure but it's better to endure malaria than to run the risk of trying to cure it with a medicine like quinine.

When the immediate effects of the quinine passed off there would be a great depression of spirits, a feeling of languor and fatigue and a general disturbance of the nerves, trembling of the hands and a marked weakness and prostration.

This was the second attack of malaria I ever had in my life. The first occurred in Ohio seventy years ago, when I was a youth. The last I attribute to the malarial influences here on the shore of Long Island Sound, of which there seems to be more than there was many years ago.

At all events, what with the malaria and the quinine together, I was in a miserable condition when Kaskine, called the new quinine, was first mentioned to me as a remedy for malaria. I tried it merely because I wanted to do something; and, as quinine did more harm than good, I was obliged to take the chance of some strange drug or other. I can now honestly say that Kaskine has helped me wonderfully. It has broken up all my worst symptoms, and it has caused me to gain in strength and increased my weight from 160 to 182 pounds. Nothing that I have ever taken has done so much toward re-establishing my health. It has not produced any of the bad effects of quinine, and I am sure it will take the place of quinine everywhere as fast as people become acquainted with its merits. My deafness is now much better and I hear with very little trouble. In conclusion you may say to the public that I most cheerfully testify to the healing and curative virtues of Kaskine, which is worthy to be known as the new quinine.

GIDEON THOMPSON,
201 Water St., Bridgeport, Conn.

Other letters of a similar character from prominent individuals, which stamp Kaskine as a remedy of undoubted merit, will be sent on application.

The Green Apple Terror.

The green apple in some form will torment us as long as boys are boys. There is but one thing to do, and that is to keep a bottle of Sanford's Ginger in the house, and thus provide a sure preventive and never-failing cure for ills incidental to summer, and to change of water, food and climate.

Sanford's Ginger, compounded of imported ginger, choice aromatics, and French brandy, convenient, speedy and safe, is the quintessence of all that is preventive and curative in medicine.

It is sure to check summer complaint, prevent indigestion, destroy disease germs in the water drunk, restore the circulation when suspended by a chill, and ward off malarial, contagious and epidemic influences.

Beware of worthless "gingers" offensively urged by mercenary druggists on those who call for Button—Button.

Oh, my heart is like a button,
See, how easily it rolls;
It's attached in many places,
And it's pierced by several holes.
And I sing now, as in childhood,
When I saw the button start,
"Button, button; where's the button?"
Some one give me back my heart.

First 'twas fastened to an heiress,
Sewed tight with golden thread;
But it grew so loose it dangled,
Ere the day we should be wed.
Then, before it fell off wholly,
Came the Fates, those mystic three,
And the one who holds the scissors
Cut the button off for me.
I was glad to see it coming
And received it with a smile,
Button, button; here's the button
Coming home to rest awhile!

Since, there have been many owners
For my button-heart. I b'lieve
I, myself, have worn it sometimes,
As it were, upon my sleeve.
Some have cast it off in anger,
And from some it fell away,
But the button is not broken,
'Tis as good as new to-day.
Yet I seem to hear an echo
Of that ancient nursery song,
"Button, button; where's the button?
Pass the button now along."

'Tis a good, big, useful button,
And at times, I fairly long
For a hand to seize it firmly,
And to sew it on so strong,
With the thread of love that never
Could it from its moorings start;
Then I think this polished button
Might become an honest heart;
And no more would I be haunted,
By this voice from out the past;
"Button, button; where's the button?"
If a true wife held it fast!

—American Magazine.

HOW I WON MY WIFE.

It was toward the close of a sultry day that I found myself sauntering, rather aimlessly, out in the suburbs of my native city.

I had chosen, as if by instinct, a shaded avenue for my stroll, and was enjoying the little breath of air that was playing idly with the dense, sluggish foliage overhead, when I came unexpectedly upon a little cottage situated a little way from the road.

Involuntarily I paused to take in the pretty picture, and as I stood leaning against the lawn fence I caught the sound of female voices. Then I discovered that the voices came from a small grove at the side of the cottage.

There were four persons in the chattering group, seated almost out of sight from where I had first stopped. They were an elderly lady, and a young girl of probably 16, and two young ladies of about 18 and 22 respectively.

The elder of the two was a blonde, and though she possessed a fair face and good figure I dismissed her from my scrutiny almost immediately as I caught sight of the other. This one was a study, upon which my mind as well as my gaze dwelt to the exclusion of the rest of the group.

She was of medium height—she was the only one of the fair quartette standing—perfect figure, rather inclined to slenderness, and with a face that always would command more than a casual glance.

It was the work of but a few seconds to take a mental picture of this charming girl, and I also added to this crime the theft of a bouquet of the odorous honeysuckle.

Casting a glance at the pretty cottage, I saw a small piece of paper tacked to a verander pillar, upon which I deciphered, with the aid of a glass, the following legend, written in a small female hand:

"To let; inquire within."

Immediately I wanted to hire the cottage. Not that I needed it, or had any earthly use for it, but a sort of insane desire seized me to get possession of the nest that held the beautiful bird, under the ridiculous and illogical reasoning, or rather lackof reason, that the bird, of course, went with the nest, in a business way.

I had put my hand upon the garden gate when I suddenly discovered, lying upon the veranda, a large Newfoundland dog which raised his massive head and looked at me inquiringly, and I fancied, a little belligerently.

I have a mortal horror of dogs, that is, other people's dogs, and particularly loose dogs. So I hesitated, and as I saw no way of attracting the attention of the group without shouting to them, I retreated like a coward. There was "Cave Canem" written all over the house for me, and even for a closer view of the fair creature in the garden, I would not take the risk of the dog.

No; I would stroll out that way again to-morrow, and I would get Jenny, my married sister, to come with me.

"To look at a cottage!" said Jenny, in astonishment, when I asked her company for this purpose. "What in the world do you mean?"

"Oh, it's such a lovely little nest, I thought I'd secure it in case I should get married, or anything of that kind."

"Don't you think it would be more in the line of variety to secure the wife first?" she asked, knowing that I had none in view as yet.

"It's a sort of Toodles idea," I admitted; "but I'd like you to see it."

So we went; we saw, and I was conquered. We inquired within. Jenny was captivated with the cottage and grounds, and I—there was only one solitary object in the whole premises that I saw sufficiently well to describe it intelligently afterward.

"Did you notice, Ned, how admirably the rooms connected, and how space was economized everywhere?"

"I didn't notice particularly," I said, rather abruptly, thinking only of the rooms as connected with the superb figure, Mary Anderson, as we afterward learned her name was, and of the economy of space only in the light of the immense space that there was at present between us, Mary and me, I mean.

"And what a beautiful tint of brown the cottage was painted!" she said.

"Beautiful, beautiful!" I said, looking dreamily out of the window and thinking of the exquisitely lustrous brown eyes.

"Ned?" said Jennie suddenly starting me out of a dream in which I was picturing myself and Mary as the occupants of the cottage, without knowing actually whether the house was painted green or brown, or painted at all for that matter. "Ned, do you know I don't believe you have the faintest notion of hiring the house; nor do I believe you know whether the cottage contains two rooms or ten, or whether there was a front or a back door or a window in it."

I met her concentrated gaze of incredulity and provoking smile with a look which was meant for an injured and indignant one; but I felt that my hot face betrayed me, so I said nothing more about it then.

A few days only had elapsed since Jenny and I had looked over the premises to let; or rather since Jenny had looked them over, while I had—but no matter; a few days after I was at the cottage, this time I went alone.

The entire group of female janitresses showed me over the house again, the elderly lady, the mother, pointing out to me the conveniences and praising them; and I, always looking at Mary, who seemed adverse to parting with the home, assented to everything the old lady said about the rooms, etc., while my eyes took in nothing, except Mary and her love, her heart.

"How much of a family have you, Mr. Barton?" said Mrs. Anderson, incidentally, while showing me one of the neat bedchambers.

I stood in the upper hall surrounded by the three young ladies, and the mother stood beside the door of the front chamber.

"None at all," I replied thoughtlessly.

Four pairs of eyes of various hues were instantly focussed upon me.

The grey eyes of the elder woman seemed to pierce my subterfuge, but I turned to the liquid brown eyes for relief, to find in them a puzzled expression only.

"Then you are contemplating marriage?" questioned Mrs. Anderson.

"Yes," I said boldly, staring at pretty Mary, who turned away her pretty eyes. "I think the place will suit me very well," I added mechanically. And then to myself: "It would be paradise for me, with that girl to share it."

"And could you decide the matter soon?" asked Mrs. Anderson. "It is getting quite annoying to have so many people running in to look it over."

"It must be, indeed," I replied. "She includes me, of course, in the annoyance," I mentally added. "I will take the place," said I, suddenly, with the foolhardy reservation vividly in mind, "if Mary will remain and be its mistress."

The latter had turned away from the little group, but not before I had seen the miserable tears start into the dark eyes. She was evidently pained at the thought of leaving the pretty nest.

"What should I do? God knows I don't want her to leave it," I thought. I would take the wise sister into full confidence, and she would undoubtedly pilot me through the trouble.

"So you are deep in the mire, Ned, and want me to help you, eh?" said Jennie with a mock serious face. "For shame, to come to a woman too. You who profess such a contempt for their assistance."

I'm only a babe in this sort of a matter of business," I confessed humbly.

"And as a baby, of course, you need a woman's tender care. You shall have it, Ned. I'll do all I can for you, but don't be foolish enough to suppose that girls lie around loose, waiting to be picked up by the first man that comes along."

Jenny was as good as her word. She made quick and close acquaintance with the Andersons, and through the reading of certain cabalistic signs that would have been unintelligible as Sanscrit to me, had discovered that there was "a possibility of success for me," she thought.

I was surprised and delighted one afternoon to find Mary at my sister's house when I went there, and I determined to know my fate before she left.

My sister soon after left the room on some pretense. I went over to where Mary was sitting and said: "You will no doubt despise a thief, and a man who goes through world under false pretenses. But such is the man before you."

She looked surprised and shocked at this, but I drew from my pocket a faded but still fragrant bunch of honeysuckle, and held it close to the one she had pinned upon her bosom.

"A very small theft and readily forgiven," she said smiling.

"They are mates," I said; "that is, the flowers; I wish the owners were."

The deep color began to run riot in her cheeks.

"And besides," I added, as she made no reply, save the silent, tell-tale blushes which spoke volumes to my heart; "besides, I used false pretenses. I did not want any house when I 'inquired within' at your home. It was only you that I wanted; and I have gone and made a fool of myself. I have got a house on my hands, but I have no wife to occupy it with me."

"But you told mamma that you contemplated marriage," she said shyly."

"It was a long leap in the dark. I had only you in view, Mary. And now if you would only consent to get me out of the scrape, it would be all right yet."

She did not say she would, but when I took her little, unresisting hand and kissed it tenderly, she put the two bouquets in my hand and pressed them together. "Mates now, both flowers and their owners."

We three went over to Mrs. Anderson's about dusk, and I said:

"We have decided to move into the cottage as soon as it will be convenient for you."

We?" queried the old lady, fixing her grey eyes upon me inquiringly.

"Yes," I replied, "I am soon to be married—that is with your consent," I added, hesitatingly.

"What has my consent to do with it?" she asked in surpise.

"It is your daughter whom I wish to marry."

Mary had gone to her mother, and was nestling her head upon the maternal breast. She said softly:

"Yes, mamma; it was I that he wanted all the time, and not the house."

CANOEING FOR WOMEN.

Canoeing as a sport for women, why not? The canoe appeals to the æsthetic sensibilities; it is the most beautiful craft afloat. The canoe is adapted to the timid sex; it is the safest boat that ever took water. The canoe is suited to the less muscular half of humanity; paddling is not fatiguing. The canoe gratifies the social instinct; canoeists are always good fellows, and there is not a single "professional" in the ranks of the fraternity. Anywhere in tidewater regions or where big waves are included in the order of the day a usual modification of the canoe, especially when husband and wife have a fancy for cruising together, is to lengthen it one foot or two, put in a seven foot cockpit and convert it into a tandem. In a tandem canoe the woman sits forward. If she is not a sailor, or it suits him to do all the work, she faces the skipper, and—this, of course, applies argely to the unmarried—looks into his eyes. If the two share their labor as well as their play, the woman faces front, attends to the steering, perhaps, and handles a paddle with what zeal she may.

But everybody says the canoe is cranky, unfit for a man, to say nothing of a woman, to enter. This is a case where everybody is mistaken. Everybody, in fact, knows nothing about it. Look at it from a common-sense point of view. The canoe is ballasted low. Its passengers sit on the bottom. Its center of gravity is so placed that it is next to impossible for it to capsize. Properly handled it will ride out a heavy blow on big waters. But canoes do capsize. Yes, and one always hears of it, too. That is becanse regattas are about the only canoeing events reported, and in canoe races it has become the faahion to carry sails twice as large as boats of that size were ever meant to stand up under. The racer abandons his secure position and sits on the deck. He enjoys himself and when he tips over he doesn't drown. Any decently built canoe has two air-tight compartments which will support from 70 to 100 pounds dead weight. This means they would support the crew if the canoe itself were broken up. A bicycle club ought to have a surgeon in ordinary attached to its staff of officers. A flotilla of catboats could support a cemetery. But the canoe is a safe boat. John Habberton once wrote that he had taken "reasonably valuable" members of his family, meaning his wife and small boy, out on the waters about Staten Island in a canoe when old sailors shook their heads at him and said that the wind was rising. They came back safe, however.

Canoeing is not a violent exercise. One misses the support of the rowlock which gives power to the oar at first, but the little knack that goes to handling the new implements once mastered, it is easier that rowing, and can be kept up more hours without fatigue. For a woman it is especially beneficial. Rowing develops the muscles of the back and sometimes dwarfs those of the front of the chest. Paddling gives one an erect carriage, shoulders thrown healthfully back. It is better than any tonic for the lungs, expanding them generously, and ought to give one a well-rounded arm.—New York Mail and Express.

THE ORIGIN OF THE FAIRY CINDERELLA.

It has been said that not one sweet girl in 50,000 knows the origin of the friend of of her babyhood, Cinderella. Cinderella's real name was Rhodope, and she was a beautiful Egyptian maiden, who lived 670 years before the common era and during the reign of Psammeticus, one of the 12 kings of Egypt. One day Rhodope ventured to bathe in a clear stream near her home, and meanwhile left her shoes, which must have been unusually small, lying on the bank. An eagle passing above chanced to catch sight of the little sandals, and mistaking them for a toothsome tidbit, pounced down and carried one off in his beak. The bird unwittingly played the part of fairy godmother, for flying directly over Memphis, where king Psammeticus was dispensing justice, it let the shoe fall right into the king's lap. It's size, beauty and daintiness immediately attracted the royal eye, and the king, determined upon knowing the wearer of so cunning a shoe, sent through all his kingdom in search of the foot that would fit it. The messenger finally discovered Rhodope, fitted on the shoe and carried her in triumph to Memphis, where she became the queen of the king Psammeticus.—London Figaro.

WHERE THE PRESIDENTS ARE BURIED.

The burial places of our presidents are widely scattered. Washington lies at Mount Vernon; the two Adamses are buried under the old church at Quincy, Mass.; Jefferson rests at Monticello; Madison's grave is at Montpelier, not far from Monticello; Monroe's remains lie in the Richmond cemetery; Jackson's grave is in front of his old residence, "The Hermitage;" Van Buren was buried at Kinderhook; Harrison at North Bend, near Cincinnati; Polk at Nashville; Taylor's remains are near at Louisville; Fillmore lies in Forest Lawn cemtery, Buffalo; Pierce was buried in Concord, and Buchanan at Lancaster; Lincoln's grave is near Springfield; Johnson's at Greenville; Garfield's at Cleveland; Grant's at Riverside, and Arthur's at Albany.—Washington Letter.

A PULLMAN CAR EPISODE.

Some years ago a big, fat, and pompous man strolled into a sleeping car on board a Union Pacific train with the air of a man who owned things. After he had looked at everybody till he had gratified his curiosity, he settled down in a seat and began to watch from the window the swiftly changing landscape. The sleeping car conductor put his hand on the shoulder of the large, globular man, and asked him if he had a Pullman ticket. The wide man spread his legs a little wider, so as to take up a little more room, breathed in about 2700 feet of Nebraska ozone and said he did not have to have a ticket. "You have to show a ticket here in this car or go into the car where you belong," said the urbane conductor who assists Sir George Pullman in giving his beloved sleep. "We are not carrying people this summer just to cultivate a friendly feeling between man and man."

"Do you know," said the large man as he threw back his coat so as to show a two-pound diamond, "that I can have you out of a job in three minutes and hang your pelt on the fence as soon as we get to Omaha?"

"No, I didn't know that, of course, but I know that if you don't show me your authority for riding in this car I will call the porter and we will use you to lubricate the young and growing State of Nebraska. You may be an eminent man, but you have a way of concealing it that would baffle any conductor in the United States."

"You will find out who I am when we get to Omaha," said the large, purple man, looking at his seven-pound watch and snapping it so that a nervous woman nearly jumped out of the car. "You will then know who I am, but it will be too late."

"True, true," said the conductor musingly. "It will then be indeed too late, for nobody who comes to search for you will know who you are, and you will be a very shocking sight."

"Young man, when you are my age I hope you will know more."

"Yes sir. I also hope I will know more, and I wish that you had been blessed by knowing more."

"Sir, my name is a household work from New York to San Francisco. If you had ever traveled much you would not have to ask for my ticket. You ought to be able to recognize a man who has been in public life as long as I have."

"Possibly so," said the conductor, taking off his coat and calling the porter, "but somehow you do not remind me of any great man I ever saw. You look more to me like a man who has struck a popular chord in leaf lard or quelled the national cry for an earnest and tenacious style of glue. As I said before, the rules of this company require that you shall produce currency, pass, or ticket, or get off and walk. Will you show us your credentials or earn the everlasting enmity of the road by falling off the platform and mussing up the right of way?"

The large man's breath came quick and his brow grew black, as he ground his teeth and went out of the car. I supposed he had gone out to plunge off the platform as we sped swiftly down the grade. I went back to see him do it, for I had never seen a man distribute himself over a monotonous sweep of country that way; but much to my surprise, he went into a large, yellow special car that was attached to the train, and we afterwards learned that he was Leland Stanford, who has since that filled to overflowing a seat in the United States Senate.

The conductor continued to hold his position for years after, though several times he made this same sad error of not recognizing some of our most eminent men in politics, art and letters.

Twice he missed it on me. But I did not report him, for he ought to maintain discipline, I claim, and besides, I had shaved off my moustache since we last met.—William Nye in New York World.

DANGER OF KEEPING BAD COMPANY.

The crows one spring began to pull up a farmer's young corn, which he determined to prevent. He loaded his gun and prepared to give them a warm reception. The farmer had a sociable parrot, who, discovering the crows pulling up the corn, flew over and joined them. The farmer detected the crows, but did not see the parrot. He fired among them, and hastened to see what execution he had done. There lay three dead crows and his pet parrot with ruffled feathers and a broken leg. When the bird was taken home, the children asked: "What did it, papa? Who hurt our pretty Poll?"

"Bad company! Bad company!" answered the parrot, in a solemn voice.

"Ay! that it was," said the farmer. "Poll was with those wicked crows when I fired, and received a shot intended for them. Remember the parrot's fate children. Beware of bad company."

With these words the father turned round, and, with the aid of his wife, bandaged the broken leg, and in a few weeks the parrot was as lively as ever. But it never forgot its adventure in the cornfield, and if ever the farmer's children engaged in play with quarrelsome companions, it invarably dispersed them with the cry, 'Bad company! Bad company!"—The Presbyterian.

A youngster in a neighboring town, who had gone out on a pleasure trip by his father's consent, suddenly broke out crying, and when asked what the matter was, said: "Mamma will whip me." An effort was made to soothe him by explaining that as long as his father knew he had come his mother would not scold him for coming without saying anything about it. This hardly satisfied the little fellow, who whimpered in reply: "Papa isn't the boss."—St. Albans Messenger.

What Mother Says.

Now here's a hand-glass, let me try
If I can this time see
Just one of all those pretty things
My mother sees in me.

She says my eyes are violets—
And what she says is true—
But I think they are just two eyes;
Don't they look so to you?

She says my lips are cherries red,
And makes b'lieve take a bite;
They never look like that to me—
But mother's always right.

She says each cheek is like a rose;
And this I surely know,
I never would believe it—but
What mother says is so.

She says my teeth are shining pearls;
Now that's so very queer,
If some folks said it, why, I'd think—
But then, 'twas mother dear.

I only see a little girl,
With hair that's rather wild,
Who has two eyes, a nose and mouth,
Like any other child.

A BRAND NEW RELIGION.

A United States official, while riding through the roads bordering the edge of the Indian Territory, came upon a long-haired man sitting on a log.

"Good morning, sir," said the official.

"Hi."

"Do you live about here?"

"Just about live here."

"You haven't any Indian blood in your veins?"

"Not that I ever seed."

"Then why do you live on this reservation? Who gave you the right?"

"I married a squaw."

"Oh."

"That's what I say."

"What business are you in?"

"None now."

"What business were you in?"

"Preachin'."

"What did you stop for?"

"Feller blowed up my church."

"Blew up your church? What for!"

"Jealousness. He's a preacher, too, and I beat him on a revival—got more mourners than he did."

"Why, I never before heard of such an outrageous affair. Tell me about it."

"Wall, I built my church over on the branch, an' this feller, Ab Smith, built his'n on the knob. We started revivals about the same time, an' he had the edge on me, an' knowin' that something had to be did, an' that quick, I commenced to tell a lot of yarns that I knowed would interest the the young bucks an' capture the crowd. Smith he come down an' tried to get 'em away, an' at last, findin' that he couldn't do it, he slipped around one night and put powder under the house and blowed it up."

"You were of different denominations, I suppose."

"Of what?"

"I say that you were of different churches."

"Yes, I wuz of my church an' he was of his'n."

"But of what denomination, of what creed?"

"Blamed If I know."

"Well, what do you believe?"

"Believe that it won't be healthy for Ab Smith if I ketch him around here."

"You don't understand. What is your faith?"

"Blamed if I know."

"What do you preach?"

"Fust one thing and then another."

"Are you a Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian—"

"No, I ain't none of them."

"You started a new church, I suppose."

"Well, yes, most of the logs wuz new, but some of 'em wuz took from old Andy Peterson's still-house. Wall, thar wan't more'n a dozen old logs in the house, an' you mout 'ave called the church new. Ab Smith's church is so green that it won't burn, an' I haven't got powder enough to blow it up, an' if you'll go over an' he'p me tear it down I'll give you as fine a mule colt as you ever seed. Hold on a minute, hold on," said the preacher, shading his eyes and gazing far away. "Yander comes Smith an' two of his deacons. I ain't feeling so mighty well, an' I believe I'll sorter trot a leetle for exercise. Ever come round this way agin an' wanter see a squaw so ugly that she'll set your teeth on edge, drop in an' see us. Wall, good day. If them fellers ax you about me, tell 'em that I ain't nowhar in the neighborhood."—Arkansaw Traveler.

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 9, 1887.

JUDGE M. P. KNOWLTON of the superior court has been promoted to the supreme bench by Gov. Ames.

THE Prohibitionists exhibit such an overwhelming desire to rip things up in the Republican camp that they really ought to adopt a more expressive name, such, for instance, as Ripuplican-Prohibitionists.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND informs an interviewer that he is not a candidate for renomination, and does not want the office, but if called to serve again another term would do so because of "an appreciation of his duty when called upon to bear his particular part of the burden of citizenship."

COMMENTING on the million-dollar increase in the state tax, which is due in a large measure to the new policy in regard to prison labor, the Lowell Courier says:

> Our last Legislature voted that no new machinery should be put into any of our penal institutions, except such as is run by hand or foot power. How can the muscle of our thousands of convicts be utilized on a paying basis under such a law as that? The state tax is likely to grow annually until the General Court gets beyond the dominion of "spooks."

DEMOCRATIC office-holders are coming to the front as managers at political conventions in a way that makes the mugwumps almost gasp with horror—at least, they would if said office-holders were Republicans in a Republican convention. They look at the president with reproachful eyes, and faintly hope that he will look sharper after these things if he should be re-elected.

MAYOR HEWITT and the New York common council invited Mrs. Cleveland to present a stand of colors to the firemen of that city at their annual parade next month, but she declines, saying:—

> I hope that I shall not be misunderstood when I base my declination of your kind invitation upon my unwillingness to assume that I, as the wife of the president, ought to participate so prominently in a public ceremony in which he takes no part.

All honor to Mrs. Cleveland for these wifely words.

GENERAL BUTLER'S generosity is only equaled by his magnanimity. The question of what to do with the surplus in the national treasury he would dispose of quickly and thoroughly by distributing it among the soldiers, according to their service, and when all have received their portion he would hand over the balance to the Confederate veterans. This is simple, and it would be efficacious beyond a doubt. The General should start a presidential canvass on this platform.

NATURE did all in her power to make Labor Day a successful holiday, but it was not very generally observed. This is a legal holiday only in Massachusetts and New York. Boston and New York had large and successful parades, and there were similar observances in a few other places, but in most places business went on about as usual. This was natural for a new holiday, but it will be made more of after a time, and will be a good thing so far as it is observed as a real holiday, for Americans are given to too incessant work as a rule.

A CONTROLLING interest in the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad has been secured by a syndicate of American and London capitalists, and the policy of the road will undergo quite a radical change. Its attempt to get into New York will be given up, its express business has already been sold to the United States Express Co., and the Western Union will undoubtedly obtain its telegraph business, leaving the road free to attend to its legitimate work of transporting passengers and freight, while future extensions are likely to be made with more caution than in the past.

ANOTHER theater horror occurred in Exeter, England, Monday night. In every particular it was the old familiar story. A fire started on the stage, and in a moment the scenery was a mass of flame, pouring forth volumes of suffocating smoke upon the panic-stricken audience; there was a wild rush for life, stairways and passages became blocked, and lives were sacrificed to the number of over one hundred, many bodies taken from the ruins being burned beyond recognition. One thing is certain: every theater should be lighted by electricity alone. And another thing is equally important: theaters should have fewer seats, more aisles and more commodious exits. With this and brick walls and fire curtains between the stage and auditorium, there need be no great danger from fire, but until these improvements are brought these holocausts will continue.

A CURIOUS transaction was unearthed by Savings Bank Commissioner Chapin in a recent examination of the Fall River savings bank. It appears that the bank had loaned the Fall River and Metacomet national banks $100,000 apiece in government bonds, and another bank $50,000, taking their certificates of deposit for the face of the bonds, bearing interest at a higher rate than the bonds paid. The national banks then deposited the bonds in Washington, as security for their circulation. By this arrangement the savings bank increased its interest receipts, and the national banks obtained their bonds without any outlay for premium. It was a shrewd arrangement, but if one of the national banks had happened to fail, it would have been a bad one for the depositors in the savings bank. The bonds have now been bought by the national banks, as they should have been in the first place.

A striking instance of unsociability at church is cited by a writer in the Golden Rule. A lady who went to a church of her own denomination in the strange city to which she had recently moved, took half a pew for the use of her little family. For a year and a half she attended regularly, but was never spoken to during all that time by the lady in the other half of the pew, who was a member of the church.

The liquor question is agitating the Free Masons, particularly in the West. The grand lodges of Kansas and Missouri have passed resolutions calling for the expulsion of all liquor dealers from the craft. The grand lodge of Dakota has resolved that no person engaged in the business of keeping a saloon shall be admitted into any lodge within its jurisdiction.

George Kelsey, a brakeman on the New London Northern road, living at Palmer, had a leg crushed by the cars in the yard at this place Monday forenoon. A flying switch was being made, and in attempting to pull the coupling pin between two cars he slipped and fell upon the rails, his left leg being crushed in two places. Dr. Holbrook amputated the limb just below the hip, and the patient is doing as well as could be expected.

The Democratic caucus last week chose these delegates to the various conventions: State, John F. Loftus, Thomas McCormick, Maurice Moriarty and John Feeney; senatorial and councilor, Edward Hale, B. P. Cunningham, Maurice McCormick and Michael Dillon; county, E. W. Burns, Jerry Shea, James Healey and Edward Flynn; representative, Thomas Moran, James Healey, Jerry Horan, M. Dillon, P. J. Cahill and Maurice McCormick; district attorney, Daniel J. Sullivan, John Loftus, Jr., James Foley and Maurice Moriarty. Thomas J. Moran, John F. Luman, Jerry Horan and Maurice Moriarty were elected as town committee.

Editor Journal:—Having heard a great deal of talk from the base ball teams in this vicinity, especially the Thorndike team since they defeated a scrub team from this place, and as they boast they can defeat them again for all the money they can raise, I would like to say I have $500 I wish to wager that I can pick a team of base ball players in Wilbraham that can defeat the Thorndike team or any team in this vicinity, the players to have resided six months previous to this date in the town they represent. Game to be played on park at Palmer in ten days from signing articles of agreement, umpire to be mutually agreed upon. The winners to take the entire gate receipts. P. J. MURPHY.

North Wilbraham, Mass., Sept. 5, 1887.

Governor Ames and council made their annual visit to the state primary school Wednesday, arriving at this station on the 9.43 a. m. train from Springfield. The governor made a thorough inspection of the institution and was highly pleased with the manner by which the school was conducted. The gubernatorial party left on the 1.29 p. m. train for Springfield. The party was composed of the following people: Gov. Ames and Lieutenant Governor Brackett, Jonathan Bourne of New Bedford, Warren E. Locke of Norwood, Frank D. Allen of Lynn, E. McPherson of Boston, George W. Johnson of Brookfield, Francis Jewett of Lowell, and Executive Clerk Hamlin of Boston. The trustees present were Samuel R. Heywood of Worcester, Dr. James J. O'Connor of Holyoke and Miss E. C. Putnam of Boston.

ANOTHER FIRE.

A loud alarm of fire at 7.45 Tuesday evening was responded to by the fire department, which was called out to extinguish a fire in a barn located on Dublin street and belonging to Mrs. Patrick Finnerty who owns considerable property in that section. When the department arrived with its apparatus the fire had got well under way, and it was impossible to save the barn, although the firemen reached the spot as soon as could be expected. A good stream soon got the fire under control, and prevented two houses which were in close proximity from being consumed, the barn and contents, however, being totally destroyed. The building contained a quantity of hay, farming utensils, etc., which were valued at about $75. The structure was insured in George W. Ely's agency for $250, the entire loss on building and contents being estimated at $325. Mrs. Finnerty attributes the cause of the fire to incendiarism.

CATTLE SHOW MATTERS.

The annual two-days' fair of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society will be held on the park next Tuesday and Wednesday. The various committees have had no small task to perform in perfecting the many details which invariably fall upon them at this season of the year. It is needless to state, perhaps, that this forthcoming week will be a notable one for Eastern Hampden agriculturists, and very little if any work will be done relative to "tilling the soil;" for, judging from the past, business will be virtually suspended, to allow all to attend the two gala days. Many who are not desirous of viewing farm produce, domestic and fancy articles, will find their wishes fulfilled in the programme of athletic events which is to be carried out, while good horse trotting will also be features of both days. The committee expect to have a unique exhibition of neat-stock on the first day, as well as a good exhibition of poultry. As there is unusual interest in the ball games to occur, it is further expected that the attendance on both days will be far in excess of that recorded on any year preceding. All who are inclined to athletic sports and wish to earn a few dollars in a few moments, will notice that the Eastern Hampden Agricultural society offers a purse of $15 to the successful competitor who first climbs the greased pole next Wednesday on the park; a limited time will be allowed each competitor each time for trial. The hurdle race will consist of three hurdles placed 100 feet apart and 4 feet high. The prizes are $2, $1 and $6. All wishing to compete in either of above will confer a favor by handing in their names to the secretary, O. P. Allen.

BASE BALL.

The Ludlows came to Palmer for their second game last Saturday, which was witnessed by a small crowd. The Palmers went to bat first, and went out in one, two, three order. For the Ludlows Considine was put out on an easy hit, Scanlon and Phillips each hit safe, J. Dunn and Clifford were also put out, but Scanlon scored. In the second Betts retired, Rooney made a base hit and scored, while McManamy and M. Rooney were thrown out at first. C. Tipping and L. Dunn were put out at first, and W. Tipping struck out. Happenny scored for the Palmers in the third on a base hit, followed by a hit by Miller and a couple of errors. The Ludlows made four base hits in the third, and aided by numerous errors brought in six runs. Neither side scored in the fourth and fifth. In the sixth the Palmers made one, and in the seventh two, shutting the Ludlows out both times. Three clean hits and several errors gave the Palmers seven runs in the eighth inning, while the Ludlows scored five runs on two hits. In the ninth McManamy went to bat first and made a base hit, then stole second. In attempting to steal third he called out a close decision from the umpire, who however, declared the man safe. The Ludlows would not allow it, and refusing to play at the end of five minutes, the game was given to the Palmers, 9 to 0. The score stood 12 to 12.

Kee of Bondsville has been engaged to cover second base for the Palmers during the remainder of the season.

The Palmers will play ball with the North Wilbrahams on the park to-morrow afternoon. Succeeding the game there will occur a half-mile running race between Alfred Coles and J. Sullivan, the local athletes, for a purse of $10 a side. A good deal of interest is manifested in the result of the contest.

At a special meeting of the Palmer base ball team, held Tuesday evening, manager Holden tendered his resignation, which was accepted with much regret. W. E. Happenny has been chosen to fill the place.

PALMER CENTER.

John King is attending Monson academy this term.

School commenced Tuesday with Miss Rogers as teacher.

Most of the guests at the King farm have returned to their homes.

Mr. Burpee has rented his house to John Robertson of White Rock.

WILBRAHAM.

The public schools commenced Monday with but little change of teachers.

The sewing society of the South church met with Mrs. P. Knowlton, Thursday afternoon and evening.

A reunion of the Pease family was held at the home of Jerome Pease recently. About fifty members were present.

Mrs. Dight, wife of Rev. Alex Dight of Lynn, and Miss Carrie Pray have been the guests of Miss Carrie Moody the past week.

The academy is in a flourishing condition. Rich hall is crowded to its utmost capacity, and several of the students are obliged to find rooms outside.

Dr. S. Foskitt has sold his property on the corner of Main and Springfield streets, formerly known as the "Wright store," to O. M. Adams, of the firm of Smith & Adams of Springfield.

BONDSVILLE.

Rev. Hugh Montgomery of Worcester gave one of his stirring temperance talks to the people of this place at the M. E. church Tuesday evening.

The first train on the Central Mass. railroad which has been run into Bondsville came on Tuesday. Trains will not run regularly, however, until the 15th.

The local ball tossers went to Ludlow Monday and defeated the team of that place in a well-played game by a score of 14 to 9. It was the first time the Bondsvilles have had their old nine together this season, and the game shows what the boys can do.

The schools commenced Tuesday with a good attendance, and with one exception an entirely new corps of teachers. The school grounds and building have been cleaned inside and out during the vacation, and now present an exceedingly neat appearance.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

W. E. Stone and family have started for a trip to Ohio.

The eight-years-old son of Station Agent Stebbins has been laid up for two weeks with a bad sore on one of his legs, but is now improving.

There are two or three mild cases of diphtheria in town. J. Flynn, who has just moved here from Philadelphia, has lost a four-years-old child who died after a few hours' illness with membranous croup.

Mrs. Prentiss, from New York, was thrown from her horse while riding from Wilbraham Wednesday, but with the exception of being a little stunned by the fall, was not injured, and was able to ride home after a short rest.

The grist mill shut down Labor Day, and the boys improved the opportunity to cross bats with the Homesteads of Springfield. The home club had Lawler and Kerney of the Paper Makers for a battery, but they were not heavy enough for the visitors, the score being 12 to 6 in favor of the Homesteads. It was a well played game, and was the most enjoyable one of the season to the spectators on account of the unusually small amount of "kicking."

BRIMFIELD.

Miss Susie M. Brown of Peoria, Ill., is visiting at James T. Brown's.

George Whitehouse and J. T. Brown have put up the "Scott & Co. Street Lanterns" in front of their residences.

Mrs. R. V. Sawin and son, and Miss Martha E. Stone returned from Cottage City on Thursday of last week.

Democratic caucus at the town hall tomorrow evening, for the choice of delegates to the state and other conventions.

At the Prohibition caucus Friday evening, James F. Brown and James H. Plimpton were chosen delegates to the state convention at Worcester.

On Sabbath evening Miss P. M. Lee, who has charge of the school for colored pupils at Kittrell, N. C., spoke at the vestry of the First church, giving an account of her work and success there.

Last week Charles and Joel Thompson of Monson, relaid the stone work of the foundation of the bell town at the town hall, and this week they have laid an abutment for a bridge near the saw mill of John L. Bacon.

LUDLOW.

George Burnie and family have returned from Vermont.

Miss Edith Mattison has been spending a few days in town.

Fred G. Atchinson is attending the Springfield Collegiate Institute.

C. A. Southworth, Jr., who has been very sick with pneumonia, is convalescent.

Rev. Edward Day began last Sunday evening a course of lectures on the Reformation.

Florence I. Nash, Alice Clark and Ida Atchinson enter the state normal school at Westfield next Monday.

At last the old barn which has been used by Mr. Miller for a livery stable has been taken down, and he is now using a new one near the school house.

H. E. Miller and wife start next Monday for a six weeks' sojourn in the west, visiting their brother, Jason Miller, in Kansas, and cousins in other states.

All citizens interested in forming a co-operative store were requested to meet in the vestry of the Union church last evening to make plans for such an enterprise.

The town schools commenced Tuesday with the following corps of teachers: Grammar school, Miss Eliza Goodwill; intermediate, Miss Hattie Bliss; second primary, Miss Sarah Stuntz; first primary, Miss Mary Colburn and Miss Grace Haviland.

BELCHERTOWN.

Nearly all the schools in town commenced last Monday.

M. P. Walker has returned from his trip abroad, and reports a rough voyage.

Rev. Mr. Lawford, pastor of the M. E. church, will rent the stone house on Depot street, as the one he now occupies has been sold to F. G. Shaw.

Dea. Lyman Sabin has offered his farm for sale. It is one of the finest farms in Western Massachusetts, situated in the southeast part of the town.

Mrs. Jane M. Gilmur, daughter of James H. Clapp and wife of the late John Gilmur, died last week Thursday in her carriage while out for a drive. She was seized with a stroke of apoplexy and lived but a few minutes. Some years since she suffered from the same disease, causing her to be lame to the time of her death. She has long been a consistent Christian member of the Baptist church of this place, and to the last (although her health was much injured) she has filled her place in the church, being present the last Sunday of her life. She has made her home with her brothers, D. P. and Edward Clapp, and their efforts in caring for her have been untiring in her feebleness. In her death the church has sustained a great loss of a loved and honored member, as has also the community in which she lived. She was always a burden bearer in every good cause. Well might it be said of her, "She has done what she could." She was 61 years of age.

WARREN.

Miss Mary Burbank has resumed her duties in school.

Luke Hitchcock of Nashville, Tenn., is visiting in town.

Miss Sarah Arnold left for Baltimore Thursday morning.

Rev. Mr. Clark and wife are spending a few weeks in Westboro.

George Rollins is drawn as juror for the superior court at Worcester.

Rev. Mr. Canfield, wife and son, have returned to their home in Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Warren band and firemen will attend the muster at East Brookfield next Saturday.

Mr. Rollins' and Mr. Lyman's houses are ready for occupancy, and will soon be filled.

Rev. Mr. Rotch of Stoughton will occupy the pulpit of the Congregational church next Sabbath.

William Shepard has taken a position in John Rolinson's store in Ware, and has removed his family there.

Mr. and Mrs. Wetherbee have left for their home in Florida, after an absence of several weeks visiting friends.

Labor Day was not very well observed. The Blake pump works run as usual. Some of the mills were closed, and the schools did not commence until Tuesday.

Mrs. Daniel Penfield, mother of Mr. Penfield, the photographer, died last Friday. Her remains were taken to Portland, Conn., for interment.

THREE RIVERS.

The mill did not shut down for Labor Day.

J. E. Langlois has accepted a position with A. F. Niles, of Springfield.

J. R. Derby and wife of Orange spent Sunday with their son, E. L. Derby.

Mrs. N. K. Rogers has gone to Detroit, Mich., to visit her son who resides there.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Mason started Tuesday for a carriage drive to Mason's home in Vermont.

M. A. Lord will return to college at Middlebury, Vermont, Monday. Louis Barker accompanies him.

Nelson Tracy has closed his fish business, and the building will be used by William Gokey for a barber shop.

Miss Lottie M. Reed of Springfield succeeds Mrs. Myra Bumstead in the second intermediate school. Miss Bumstead will teach at Jewett City.

The New London Northern road run their last excursion to Block Island to-day and to-morrow. Fare for the round trip $1.50, good for both days.

Ruggles Bros. of the "River Dale Fruit Farm," have been very successful with their fruits and vegetables this season, having probably the finest varieties to be found in this section of the country. They recently exhibited a tomato weighing 24½ ounces.

A large crowd gathered at the base ball grounds Saturday to witness the game between the Paper Makers of North Wilbraham and the first nine of this village. Only two men went to the bat, when the game ceased owing to the unfair decisions of the umpire. The boys are not afraid to play any nine men, but do not claim to have professionals enough among them to be able to play nine men and an umpire.

WEST WARREN.

The West Warrens play at Thorndike tomorrow.

Rev. B. F. Kingsley was unable to preach last Sunday owing to malarial fever, and Rev. Mr. Noon of Brookfield occupied the pulpit.

The ladies of the Methodist society gave a supper and entertainment in the church Wednesday evening, but there was a slim attendance on account of the rain.

Monday afternoon the second nine of Three Rivers, flushed with their victory over the Palmers, came up to "do up" the local club. How well they succeeded is shown by the score:

Innings,	1	2	3	4	5
West Warrens,	6	5	3	0	2	—16
Three Rivers,	0	4	1	4	0	— 9

Base hits—West Warrens 14, total of 23. Three Rivers 9, total of 10, and five of these being bases on balls.

The Knights of Labor were very successful in their celebration of Labor Day. In the hose race each company was to run 600 feet, attach to a hydrant and lay 200 feet of dry hose. Only two companies entered, Warren and West Warren. The Warrens took the scratch first, and at the pistol shot were off as one man, and when at the finish they called for time it was found that the crowd rushing in on the time keeper had struck his watch and the record was lost. Then the "kicking" that followed would have made "the only Mike Kelly" or even "Baby" Anson blush. Finally the judges decided that West Warren should take their turn and the Warrens should have another trial after dinner. The boys got a poor start, some of them being at least three feet from the cart when the signal was given, and despite the cries of encouragement of their friends the run was made in very poor time, 44 seconds. At 1.40 the Warrens came tearing down the street at a regular "git thar" gait, winning the race, first money and quite a little "boodle" for their friends, in the short space of 38¼ seconds. Those who held watches on them in the first run say it was made in 40 seconds. After the hose race everybody adjourned to Crossman's grove, where Bellville and Crosby's orchestra furnished music for all who cared to dance, until late in the evening, when the day closed, marred only by the difficulty in the hose race.

WALES.

Winter apples and cider will be scarce.

The Baptist pulpit will be supplied by some stranger next Sunday.

The road commissioners are doing some good work on the highways.

The farmers would like to know why people have a right to steal their grapes that chance to grow a little distance from the houses. They must have, as some very nice people persist in doing it. Why not steal our corn as well?

The severe thunder storm Wednesday night brought about some funny results. A party from Monson attempting to lead a pony behind their carriage found the speed of their pair too great for the pony. Result—had to part company. Pony looked disconsolate standing in the rain in the middle of the road, so one kind hearted member of the party led the pony home in the rain, but it was a good time nevertheless.

A horrible accident occurred Wednesday afternoon. Louis Patnode and Willie Wells were blasting rocks for Willie Royce, and while tamping a charge in a large rock it exploded, nearly killing both of them. Patnode had one eye torn out and the other badly injured and one arm broken, besides other injuries, and Wells had both eyes seriously injured and may become totally blind, besides being injured seriously otherwise.

It is a characteristic of the city visitors to this delightful town that having once planned a pleasure party or picnic excursion, a rainy day will not prevent, though it may change the direction of their enjoyment. Such a picnic had been arranged for about a week ago, but the appointed day was decidedly unfavorable for a ride and out door pleasures, so the party availed themselves of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Needham's invitation to their hospitable mansion, and an afternoon party took the place of the picnic, which proved so thoroughly enjoyable in every way that the rain fell unheeded and unregretted by all, and the unanimous verdict of the company was that the day's pleasure could not have been greater with the most auspicious skies and the picnic accessions so well known at Mashapaug.

MONSON.

L. B. Peck is building an addition on the north side of his house.

The W. N. Flynt Granite Company has purchased a mogul locomotive for use at the quarries.

John Cross has returned to his position with Gage & Reynolds, after a vacation of several weeks.

Reynolds' and Cushman's mills are running nights to keep up with the demand for their productions.

The vestibule of the library building has been replastered, and other repairs made in the interior of the building.

H. Chapin will attend the annual reunion of his regiment, the 10th Conn. Vols., at Torrington, Ct., next Wednesday.

The report that a couple of spotters had engaged rooms in town caused dispensers of the ardent to be on their guard lately.

The Methodist church has been reshingled. The vestry has also been sheathed, and other interior improvements made.

The W. N. Flynt Granite Co. is building a new bridge on its railroad over the road to Palmer. The old one has long been considered unsafe.

Masons have been at work this week on the towers of the town hall, endeavoring to stop a leak which had made itself known during the recent rains.

H. T. Comey, boss bleacher in Fay, Peck & Co's straw works, died very suddenly about nine o'clock Tuesday morning. Two weeks ago last Sunday he returned from a carriage drive in Vermont and New Hampshire, afflicted with rheumatism, and did not leave the house afterwards. Tuesday morning he seemed better, and remarked that he thought a walk would do him good, but was taken with a fainting fit, and expired almost immediately. He was formerly a resident of Foxboro, coming to Monson about three years ago. He leaves a widow, and also three children by a former wife.

About 9.30 one evening last week an antiquated specimen of horseflesh attached to an ancient vehicle appeared on Main street, the occupants of the buggy being in search of a clergyman to perform a marriage ceremony. They did not seem to have good luck in finding a minister, and finally appealed to a business man for advice. He suggested that they wait until the next day or be married by a justice. Neither plan would do, so Rev. Mr. Maxham was finally appealed to, and the two made one. The horse was not a thoroughbred, and it must have been a late hour when the party reached their destination in the Butler district.

The sixth annual reunion of the Beebe family, which was held last Saturday at the residence of H. G. Rogers, was a very enjoyable one, fifty persons being present. During the afternoon sociability and games were indulged in until the supper, which was excellent and abundant, was announced as ready by A. M. Beebe. When again called together several letters of regret were read, also an original poem of "ye olden time" by Mrs. Newton Beebe. Remarks were made by several gentlemen present. No death has occurred in this branch of the family since the gathering of one year ago. The children spoke pieces, which with music between were very interesting. The parting song was sung at an early hour, and a committee appointed to make arrangements for meeting again next year.

A RAILROAD SMASHUP.

An accident which might have resulted seriously if it had occurred at a different time took place at "Flynt's turnout" on the New London Northern road last Saturday evening. A train of flat cars loaded with stone from the Flynt quarries had been backed upon the turnout and the brakes set, the engine leaving the cars and going to the station, about half a mile away, for time. The brakeman in charge heard some locomotive give a whistle for "off brakes," and thinking it was meant for him, started the train down the grade. Once in motion, it soon got beyond control, and running off the switch at the connection with the main track, piled up ten cars, all in about 100 feet, besides tearing up about 100 feet of track. The cars were smashed into kindling wood, the heavy stone crushing nearly every timber, and trains both ways were obliged to carry round. A large gang of men commenced the work of repairing the damage about 9 o'clock, and did not get the tracks clear until 2 p. m., Sunday, and the debris is not wholly cleared away yet.

WARE AND VICINITY.

The fair under the management of Rev. Father Boyle, announced to commence on the 17th of this month, is to commence October 17th.

Company K. of the 42d Mass. Reg. hold their annual reunion and basket picnic at King's Grove, Hardwick Pond, on Wednesday of next week.

The J. W. Lawton Post, G. A. R., has been presented with 44 Springfield rifles the past week. The money was raised by subscription among the business men.

A new street is to be opened soon from Pleasant to Main streets, near the eastern part of John Storr's lot, and meeting Main street just west of the premises known as the Phelps place. The building lots are all sold, and Thorn & McMahon are at work on a house on this street for Mrs. Tankard.

Tuesday evening Alvin Robins' two sons, the oldest 11 years old, were driving a new horse up West street when they tried a race with another team. The horse started and ran through Water street, and around the park to Main street before it was caught. The boys kept their places in the team and were not hurt.

The Ware Cadet Band, under the direction of A. G. Noble, has been engaged by the American engine company of West Brookfield to attend with them the firemen's muster at East Brookfield, to-morrow. They are to use their new drum, which has just been painted by Wilcox & Goldsmith. It has a wide band around it of a chocolate color, on which is lettered in gold with a colored shade, "Cadet Band, Ware, Mass.," and in the center on a light ground is a monogram, "W. C. B."

It is with feelings of pride that we have such public spirited men in town, that we make the following announcement: At a meeting of the selectmen on Tuesday evening a letter was received from Mr. C. E. Stevens, presenting the town with six elegant bronzed drinking fountain. Four of them are surmounted by very pretty patterns of gas lamps standing about eight feet high to bottom of lamp. Five of them have attachments for watering horses and dogs. They are all beautiful and useful ornaments to our streets. The first to be set is placed directly opposite the Hampshire House. One is to be placed near the depot, one near the corner of East street and Knox avenue, and one on Main street between the town hall and Unitarian church. The locations for the other two are not yet decided upon.

A vessel lying at East Boston was blown to pieces and three men killed Wednesday by an explosion of naptha.

JOTTINGS FROM THE HUB.

From our Special Correspondent.

BOSTON, Sept. 7th, 1887.

The interesting feature of the week thus far has been the Prohibitory state convention at Worcester to-day, which it has been my pleasure to attend. It was not so remarkable a convention as last year's, because that was larger than any one expected—849 delegates. To-day's fell much short of the round thousand the secretary worked for, and reached only 857, including about 150 women. At one time it was announced that 930 were present, but it was found that a serious error had been made in the computation. Some places were largely represented according to the number to which they were entitled; for instance, Fitchburg was entitled to a total of 16 delegates and sent 9 men and 4 women. Palmer was entitled to a total of 7 and sent 5 men. But the average was much below this. Many towns did not send at all. Indeed only 187 towns and cities were represented. Gloucester was entitled to 23 delegates and sent one. Haverhill was entitled to 23 and sent 2. Holyoke sent 3 out of 29; Lowell 5 out of 65. Newburyport sent none out of a possible 15. Boston, entitled to a total of 391, sent 57 men and 16 women.

Some salient points of the convention may be briefly mentioned. It was the largest ever held by the party, and raised a large contribution for campaign expenses. So the managers have a right to feel highly encouraged. It was harmonious, except on the matter of woman suffrage. A small minority from the western part of the state strenuously opposed the woman suffrage plank of the platform, and tried to have it left off, as raising a needless issue. But they were not even accorded a courteous hearing. They were practically choked off and the woman suffrage plank adopted, after the breach had been widened by making it more pronounced in favor of municipal suffrage for women. This action will cost the party some votes in both Eastern and Western Massachusetts.

Another fact clearly noticeable about the convention from first to last was that it was as much cut and dried as any convention could be, and that it was manipulated by the Boston end of the party. For some reason they were opposed to Dr. Blackmer, of Springfield, but their candidate, Deacon Kendall of Cambridgeport, withdrew privately last evening. No mention was made publicly of the fact, but he was not mentioned at all in the proceedings, and his strength was carried over in a body to Mr. W. H. Earle of Worcester. On the informal ballot Earle had 400 to 388 for Blackmer, and the former was unanimously nominated. A like formality was observed in nominating Dr. Blackmer for the second place. A further clash between the east and the west occurred when the eastern men tried to put Edmund M. Stowe on as state treasurer. But the friends of John L. Kilbon of Lee, last year's candidate, stood manfully by him, and Stowe had to be content with the auditor's position.

Regarding the temper of the convention it should be observed that it was an anti-Republican body more than anything else. The liquor business, its evils and the way to reform them was apparently of less concern to the delegates than the smashing of the Republican party. To a disinterested observer the Prohibitionists did not appear in their most favorable light. In their desire to punish the Republican party for its supposed shortcomings they exhibit a spirit certainly neither admirable nor statesmanlike, nor do they show any particular concern about the cause they pretend to have most at heart. Very likely they will poll a larger vote than last year, but they can never build up a strong party on such a temper as they showed to-day.

On the afternoon train back to Boston, a canvass was made for the prohibitory candidate for the presidency, resulting as follows: St. John, 49; Clinton B. Fisk, 39; John B. Finch, 11; Eugene H. Clapp and Col. Bain, 1 each. The delegates to the national convention are Dr. Miner, Rev. J. W. Hamilton, ex-Prest. J. W. Bascom and Dr. John Blackmer.

The latest advices from the captive missionary, Rev. E. T. Doane, make it probable that he will be sent back to his station on Ponape and protected there in his rights as a missionary, while the officious Spanish governor who ordered his arrest may be removed for his wanton course in committing such an outrage upon an American citizen. The captain general at Manila, where Mr. Doane was taken, has taken every pains to make him comfortable, has given him rooms in the best hotel in the place, and otherwise treated him handsomely. The United States consul at Manila, Mr. Julian G. Voigt, has proved equal to the occasion and has proved of much service to Mr. Doane. Mrs. Road, wife of a missionary on Ponape, will be here this week and give a verbal statement of the trouble with Spain.

The amusement season has fairly begun, and all the theaters are open. But the death of Mrs. J. R. Vincent at the Museum will give a touch of sadness which could be caused by the death of no other actor in the city.

IS DEAFNESS AN AFFLICTION OF THE PAST.

CLEAVELAND, O., Sept. 1. The physicians of this city are greatly interested over a case of almost total deafness which has been instantly relieved by the invention of H. A. Wales of Bridgeport, Conn. The case had long been considered hopeless, as all known remedies and devices had failed to be of benefit, and is considered a triumph for this wonderful and invisible device.

Some Things Learned by Experience,

That a tablespoonful of salt thrown on a coal fire that is low, will cause it to burn up quickly. That you can clean oil cloth with milk and water; while soap and brush will ruin it. That the skin of a boiled egg is the best remedy you can apply to a boil. That you can't cure Rheumatism or Neuralgia without taking Menard's Rheumatic Bullets. That you can buy them of LeGro & Lynde for $1.00 per bottle. cow7

HAY FEVER.

For twenty-five years I have been severely afflicted with hay fever. While I was suffering intensely I was induced, through Mr. Tichenor's testimonial, to try Ely's Cream Balm. The effect was marvelous. It enabled me to perform my pastoral duties without the slightest inconvenience, and I have escaped a return attack. I pronounce Ely's Cream Balm a cure for hay fever.—Wm. BRACE UP.

You are feeling depressed, your appetite is poor, you are bothered with Headache, you are fidgetty, nervous, and generally out of sorts, and want to brace up. Brace up, but not with stimulants, spring medicines, or bitters, which have for their basis very cheap, bad whisky, and which stimulate you for an hour, and then leave you in worse condition than before. What you want is an alterative that will purify your blood, start healthy action of Liver and Kidneys, restore your vitality, and give renewed health and strength. Such a medicine you will find in Electric Bitters. at only 50 cents a bottle at LeGro and Lynde's Drug Store. 3

THEIR BUSINESS BOOMING.

Probably no one thing has caused such a general revival of trade at LeGro & Lynde's Drug Store as their giving away to their customers of so many free trial bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Their trade is simply enormous in this very valuable article from the fact that it always cures and never disappoints. Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Croup, and all throat and lung diseases quickly cured. You can test it before buying by getting a trial bottle free, large size $1. Every bottle warranted. 3

GIVE THEM A CHANCE!

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air passages but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, croup, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else has failed you, you may depend on this for certain. 1y46eow

TO THE HONORABLE THE JUSTICES of the Superior Court, holden at Springfield within and for the County of Hampden.

Humbly shews Nellie S. Able of Palmer, in said County of Hampden, that she was lawfully married to Frederick M. Able, then of the city, county and state of New York, and now of parts unknown, at said Palmer, on the thirteenth day of December, A. D., 1883, that they have since lived together as husband and wife in said Palmer, until the 17th day of December, A. D., 1883, since which time they have lived seperate and apart from each other, and she has ever conducted towards him as a faithful, chaste and affectionate wife, yet the said Frederick M., regardless of his marriage vows and obligations, at said Palmer, in the month of December, A. D. 1883, utterly deserted her and has continued such desertion from that time to the date hereof, being more than three consecutive years, next prior to the filing of this libel; and that, being of sufficient ability, he grossly, and wantonly and cruelly refuses and neglects to provide a suitable maintenance for her.

Wherefore she prays that the bonds of matrimony heretofore existing between her and said Frederick M. may be dissolved, and for such further orders and decrees in the premises as to law and justice may appertain.

SULPHUR BITTERS

THE BEST AND PUREST MEDICINE EVER MADE.

It will drive the Humor from your system, and make your skin clean and smooth. Those Pimples and Blotches which mar your beauty are caused by impure blood, and can be removed in a short time, if you are wise and use the great blood purifier, SULPHUR BITTERS.

DON'T — What makes you tremble so? Your nerves are all unstrung, and need a gentle, soothing tonic to assist nature to repair the damage which your excesses have caused.

GIVE UP! — Sulphur Bitters is NOT a cheap rum or poor whisky drink, to be taken by the glass, like other preparations, which stimulate only to destroy. Why suffer with Boils? Why rave with that terrible headache? Why lay and toss on that bed of pain with rheumatism?

If you have failed to receive any benefit from other medicines or doctors, do not despair. Use Sulphur Bitters. They will cure you when all others fail. No person can remain long sick who uses SULPHUR BITTERS.

The dose is small—only a teaspoonful. It is the best and cheapest medicine. Try it, and you will be satisfied. Get it of your druggist. Don't wait, get it at once. If you are suffering from Kidney Disease, and wish to live to old age, use Sulphur Bitters. They never fail to cure. SULPHUR BITTERS.

A Permanent Boarder.

I saw her "ad." in Summer Haunts,
While sweltering in my office dreary;
Temptation lurked in every line
For me, so overworked and weary;
"Pure milk, fresh berries, shady drives,
With boat, and bath, and fish close by."
What wonder that I snapped the bait!
'Twas last July.

I summered in that rural place,
Where sylvan charms and scenes are plenty;
My hostess, buxom Widow Grace,
Her only daughter, one-and-twenty;
Croquet and tennis, rambles free
With Laura of the roguish eye;
Time floated by on gilded wings,
But last July!

To-day within the self-same place,
I viewed the world with jaundiced vision;
For vanished is the tender grace
Which last year rendered life elysian;
I drive the cattle, trudle trunks,
Chop wood, pick berries, cradle rye;
I'm Laura's spouse, the widow's son,
This bleak July!

READ THIS, YOUNG MAN.

To the young man who writes us that he has worked three years in a stove store and doesn't seem to be getting ahead, we would say that there is an old proverb current among farmers that "there is more in the man than there is in the land." It means that a good farmer will get more out of a poor farm than a poor farmer will get out of a good farm. Success depends vastly more upon the man than it does upon the business in which he is engaged. We might very well stop here; but young men don't seem able nowadays, to extract the significance from epigrammatic utterances if, indeed, they ever were. It goes without saying that people who say that this trade or that is not what it used to be do not know what they are talking about. It is the tendency of the human mind to look back with regret and forward with anticipation. The good old times are past; the good times are coming. The present always seems a period of transition. The stove business is no more overdone than any other business. There is not, and probably never will be, a superfluity of live, wide-awake merchants who are up to the times. The men who complain are those who do not know how to do business in the modern way.

Our correspondent represents himself to be a clerk in a retail stove store, and, not seeing a brilliant future before him, asks whether he had better make a change. That depends. If a better thing is open to him, he should take it by all means. If he has to look for something better, he would do well to look for what he has The best thing he can do for himself just now is to attend strictly to business and learn every part of it. It will not help him any to belong to a nine, and the less he knows about the status of games among the league clubs the better. Skill in billiards will not be useful to him, and if he should chance to be practically ignorant of the essential difference between a silver fizz and a Tom Collins it will in no way militate against his success in life. His first and only stepping stone is the respect and confidence of the dealer who employs him. When he has this some one else will want him, and a man who finds himself in demand will always be able to get what he is worth.—American Grocer.

ENGLAND'S ROYAL PLATE.

The royal plate—probably the finest in the world—is usually kept in two small rooms in Windsor Castle, and is valued at £2,000,000. The gold service which was purchased by George IV. from Rundell & Bridge, dines 130 persons, and the silver wine cooler, which he bought about the same time, holds two men, who could sit in it comfortably. It is enclosed with plate glass, and the splendid chasing occupied two years. There are some quaint old pieces in the royal collection, which belonged to Queen Elizabeth, having been taken from the Spanish Armada, and others were taken from India, Burmah and China. And there is one cup that belonged to Charles the XII. of Sweden.

The vases, cups, candelabra and fancy pieces are usually displayed on the huge sideboards at each end of the table in St. George's hall when a state banquet takes place. The is a peacock of precious stones valued at £40,000. The body and tail are composed of solid gold, profusely studded with pearls, diamonds, rubies and emeralds. The tiger's head, known as Tippoo's footstool, is formed of silver-gilt, with eyes of rock crystal and a tongue of solid gold. These two trophies of Oriental extravagance were taken at Seringapatam, and presented subsequently to George III. There are an immense number of gold shields, some of which are richly ornamented. One of these was formed of snuff boxes, under the direction of George IV., and valued at £10,000. There are thirty dozen of plates, which were bought by that sovereign at a cost of £11,000.

IT PAYS TO THINK.

A striking instance of the extent to which saving machinery is carried now-a-days is shown in the tin-can industry. Everybody knows that tin cans are manufactured by machinery. One of the machines used in the process solders the longitudinal seams of the cans at the rate of fifty a minute, the cans rushing along in a continuous stream. Now, of course, a drop or two of solder is left on the can. The drop on the outside can be easily cleared away, but it is not so easy to secure the drop left on the inside. It wouldn't do, of course, to retard the speed of the work—better waste the drop; it is only a trifle, anyhow, and to 999 men in 1,000 would not seem worth a minute's attention.

The thousandth man worked for a firm using one of these machines, and he set about devising an ingenious arrangement for wiping the inside of the can, thereby saving that drop of solder and leaving none to come in contact with the contents of the can. He was encouraged by his employers to patent his invention, did so, and has already received several thousand dollars in royalties for its use. As the machine solders 30,000 sans a day, the solder saved by his invention amounted to about $15 a day. It pays to think as you work.—Industrial Journal.

SILLY SIBILANCE.

Two Utica girls wasted precious hours composing the following sibilant story:

Sweet Sarah Sawyer's sickly sister Susan sat singing swiftly. Squire Samson Seward's son Sam strolled smoking, sorrowfully seeking sweet Sarah. Suddenly spying sad Susan sitting singing, Sam slouched slowly, stealing sunflowers, scaring sweet Sarah. Susan starting, screeched: "Sam, stop stealing sunflowers; seek some stale sandwiches." Sam seized several, swallowed seven, sank slowly sighing "so sea sick." Sweet Sarah sauntered slowly. Seeing Sam so sea sick, said sister Susan, "sprinkle some salts." She sprinkled some salts, singing sweet songs. Sam survived, squeezed Susan; she sobbed silently, Sam said: "Susan stop sobbing!" She stopped, shivered, sneezed suddenly, so suddenly, Sam shuddered. Somewhat startled, said Susan: "Sweet Sam, sing some sad Sankey Sunday school songs." Sam sang successfully.—Utica Herald.

Bad Failure of a Still Hunt.

Three Able Professors Searching for a Secret. Following a False Scent.—Fright of a Timid Taster.

Some time ago a new drug called Kaskine was discovered. It was said to have all the properties of quinine except its deleterious ones. This claim was startling. But the men who understood the nature of Kaskine were sure of the facts and did not hesitate to style it "The New Quinine." Many physicians said it was equal to quinine and some admitted its superiority. Among the latter was one who writes:

54 East 25th street, N. Y., Nov. 11, 1885.

After five months use of "Kaskine" I cheerfully state that I have found it superior to quinine in its specific power and entirely free from causing any disturbance to the hearing.

WM. FREDERICK HOLCOMBE, M. D.
Late Prof. in N. Y. Opth. Hospital and in N. Y. Medical College.

A wide demand for Kaskine, the new quinine, immediaitey sprang up. Millions of persons who were dissatisfied and disgusted with quinine turned to Kaskine as the garrison of a beseiged city turns to a rescuing army. Rivals were alarmed. Their business was in danger. Something must be done to "kill Kaskine." A "chemist" (?) was employed and instructed to analyze a sample. He brought out his retorts, crucibles, acids, alkalies, litmus paper and alcohol lamp. Nauseous fumes arose. An entire bottle of Kaskine was administered to a professional "taster." [It did not kill him]. The chemist now saw his way to a verdict; Kaskine was "nothing but sugar." This finding was printed in the periodical owned by the chemist, and a copy sent to every druggist in the land. "Now," said the rivals, "Kaskine is killed."

But the people like sugar and declared that this Kaskine "sugar" had a wonderful way of curing malaria and dyspepsia, and of reducing fevers. The sales increased, and people praised it to their friends. The rivals were appalled. They had not "killed Kaskine;" they had boomed it. The "chemist" was again called upon, with two other "p o e sors" to help him—one from Wisconsin, one one from Boston. These three wise men put their heads together. They brought out all their apparatus as before. The nauseous fumes ascended. The trembling taster swallowed more Kaskine. This time he said it had a slightly bitter taste. Science saw its way to the second verdict; [Kaskine was sugar flavored with quinine;] and this "analysis" was trumpeted through the land.

Once more "Kaskine was killed."

But the demand increased. Mr. C. N. Crittenton, a leading New York jobber, bought 200 gross, and other dealers in all the great business centers of the country, sent in proportionately large orders. Never before in the history of medicine had any remedy found so wide and well-founded celebrity in so short a time. Meanwhile letters poured in, from which the following are merely extracts:

"No man ever suff red from malaria worse than I did. In 1885 I ran down from 175 pounds to 97. My doctor gave me up. He said, "I might pour pounds of quinine down your throat and it wouldn't help you." I then gave up quinine and concluded to take my chances. I heard of Kaskine, and without the least faith began taking it. In one week I was better, began to sleep, have appetite and gain strength. In a month I was back at my work. Never had a day of sickness since. Malaria was killed in my system. I am an astonishment to myself and my friends."—F. A. Miller, 630 East 157th street, New York.

"For six months I took quinine in large doses for malaria. Last year I saw a published letter about Kaskine, the new quinine, as a remedy for that tedious trouble. I began to use it, and after a few weeks was well, and never had a touch of malaria since."—William Teed, 133 East 124th street, New York.

"Six years ago I had an attack of bilious remittent fever which ran into intermittent malaria. I tried arsenic, mercury and quinine—the latter in heavy and continued doses. Malaria brought on nervous prostration and dyspepsia. Last winter I began using Kaskine, the new quinine, and a few bottles cured me. Malaria and dyspepsia both disappeared."—Mrs. J. Lawson, 141 Bergen street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

"I contracted malaria in the Michigan Lake District, and for eight years suffered from a chronic type of intermittent malarial fever with all its distressing symptoms. Used all the leading remedies, including quinine, under the best medical advice, but receive no radical benefit. In the summer of 1886 I first tried Kaskine, the new quinine, and it cured me. It was a true scientific healing, and results so real cannot be disputed."—David J. Norton, State street, Albany, N. Y.

"In its power to eradicate malaria from the system Kaskine is a medicinal revelation. Mine was about as bad a case of this disorder as could be, and yet Kaskine cured me after I had been dosed to no purpose with almost every drug in the Pharmacopœia."—J. D. HIRD, B. A., Assistant Chemist Maryland Agricultural College.

Bankruptcy now stared the rivals in the face. The people laughed at the "sugar" dodge and the "quinine" dodge. Kaskine was sweeping the continent like a prairie fire. Again the chemists brought out their apparatus. Seeing the dreadful preparations the "taster" fled in terror from the laboratory. The nauseous fumes once more ascended, and "Science" pronounced the third verdict.

["Kaskine is made of mercury, arsenic and other deadly poisons."]

But the people laughed at this dodge also, and the sales increased.

Now, what does all this mean? Here have been three distinct "analyses" with three contradictory results. The public may well ask: "Is chemistry merely a pretended science, or are these learned professors fools and humbugs? One or the other must be true. Does it not show rather that our advertising cartoon represents the truth and Kaskine is "Science Emerging from Darkness?"

Meanwhile the "little joke" that is so potent to cure is not yet found.

Other letters of a similar character from prominent individuals, which stamp Kaskine as a remedy of undoubted merit, will be sent on application.

The Kaskine Company, 54 Warren street, New York and 35 Farringdon Road, London.

The V-a-s-e.

From the maddening crowd they stand apart,
The maidens four and the Work of Art;

And none might tell from sight alone
In which had culture ripest grown—

The Gotham Million fair to see,
The Philadelphia Pedigree.

The Boston mind of azure hue,
For the soulful soul from Kalamazoo—

For all loved art in a seemly way,
With an earnest heart and a capital A.

* * * * * * * *

Long they worshipped; but no one broke
The sacred stillnes, until up spoke

The Western one with the nameless place,
Who blushing said: "What a lovely vase."

Over three faces a sad smile flew,
As they edged away from Kalamazoo.

But Gotham's haughty soul was stirred
To crush the stranger with one small word.

Deftly hiding reproof in praise,
She cries: "'Tis, indeed, a lovely vaze."

But brief her unworthy triumph when,
The lofty one from the house of Penn,

With the consciousness of two grandpapas,
Exclaims: "It is quite a lovely vahs!"

And glances around with an anxious thrill,
Awaiting the word of Beacon Hill.

But the Boston maid smiles courteouslee,
And gently murmurs: "Oh, pardon me!

I did not catch your remark, because
I was so entranced with that charming vaws!"

AN AWKWARD INTERVIEW.

"You will—er—stay and—and meet Mr. Rochdale, my dear, will you not?"

"Well, no, papa," replied Edith Lascelles, in a meditative fashion, "I don't think I will. You see, my position is a very peculiar one. I have no hesitation in saying I find it a disagreeable one also. I suppose if I were like a heroine of a romance I should feel a wild excitement and a strange thrill, at meeting the man who is to be my husband, but who is utterly unknown to me; but not being a heroine at all, these feelings are wanting."

"Of course, my dear," Mr. Lascelles observed, a trifle nervously, "you know you can refuse him if you like, but you are so sensible, and—"

"Yes," cut in the girl, decisively, "and I shall lose the five thousand a year, shan't I? Well, I tell you flatly, papa, I shall lose the five thousand most certainly if I don't like the man."

"Then you intend to let the money slip from you altogether. In plain words, you refuse."

Edith shook her head.

"I never do anything in a hurry," she determined and a glance at her pretty, firm mouth bore testimony to her words; "but you did not tell me, papa, what induced aunt Maria to choose this Mr. Rochdale more than any other person."

"She was in love with his father years ago. At least, I believe so, my dear, and so—"

"I understand," Edith's lip curled in a sneer; "delightfully sentimental and deplorably vulgar."

Two days later Edith found herself ensconced in the snuggest corner of pretty Mrs. Dalton's drawing-room. She was very fond of Lucy; they had been firm friends in their childish days and Mrs. Dalton had the greatest respect for the tall, handsome girl who was so far her superior in brains. The last time they had met had been in Paris, when Edith was introduced to Lucy's husband, one of the kindest-hearted men in the world—a drysalter, or a soap-boiler, or some such mysterious and consequently wealthy person—and to the golden-haired child the very image of her mother and the idol of the household.

"You are looking pale, Lucy," Edith remarked, as she stitched vigorously at her work—she was never idle a moment.

Lucy suddenly belied the suggestion by coloring vividly, almost painfully.

"I am very well, dear," she answered; and Edith's quick ear caught the faintest trace of annoyance in the pretty voice.

She pondered a little over this, and by and by Mrs. Dalton rose hurriedly.

"You won't mind, Edith, if I leave you for half an hour will you?" I must go to Dent's; they have not sent home the things I ordered."

"Let me go." Edith put down her work. "You know you have been out this morning, and Herbert does not like to see you tired when he comes home."

"Oh, the drive won't hurt me, and I would rather go myself, the people are so stupid. I know you won't be dull; there is a pile of new books, and the baby will come down if you would care to have her."

Edith stared at the fire when alone.

"If it was not too absurd," she said to herself, as she recalled the nervousness and haste with which her friend had spoken, "I should imagine that Lucy did not care about my being with her just now. She made me very welcome, certainly; but she seems changed, and I don't know exactly where or how! Perhaps she is ill. She may say what she likes, but she looks wretched. If so, I am very glad I have come. She is an emotional creature, and would probably have become wretched and depressed while Herbert is away."

Just about 6 o'clock Mrs. Dalton returned.

"Is Herbert in?" she asked, as she threw off her mantle and untied her bonnet-strings. There was the faintest flush on either cheek that might have been caused by the autumnal wind, but seemed to arise from suppressed excitement.

"Decidedly, Lucy is ill," Edith determined, as she replied in the negative; but she said nothing, only resolved that during Mr. Dalton's forthcoming absence she would take her friend in hand and doctor her. . . . . .

At dinner-time Edith, watching her, saw the evident effort made by the young wife to appear cheerful and easy, and was surprised that Mr. Dalton did not seem to be aware that anything was wrong.

"I certainly shall not enlighten him," she declared to herself, "but I will see what I can do with Lucy when he is gone. Ignorance is bliss in such a case as this. Why, he would fret himself to fiddlestrings if he thought she were ill."

When the morning arrived which witnessed Mr. Dalton's departure to the north, Edith noticed more than ever that her friend was laboring under some emotion which was not unconnected, so it seemed to her with excitement. . . .

Edith withdrew to let the couple say farewell. As she went into the drawing-room, her thoughts flew for the first time to her father and his marriage scheme.

"I suppose I had better write and tell the poor old man that I consent to meet Mr. Rochdale. It can do no harm at any rate, and I can't possibly marry him without seeing him first. I will go home at the end of this week."

The first day of Mr. Dalton's absence passed much as usual. On the second, Mrs. Dalton drove out with her friend and child, and did some shopping. As they returned to the comfortable villa near Regent's Park, they met a woman carrying a parcel in her hand, evidently bound for a journey.

"Why, that is Parker, is it not?" Edith said suddenly; "is she going away, Lucy?"

Parker was the housemaid at the villa.

"Yes." Mrs. Dalton murmured, stopping with a hurried gesture to push some parcels on to the seat opposite. She has been wanting to go home for some time, and I thought now Herbert was away it was a good chance to give her a holiday."

Edith acquiesced in this, and did not observe Lucy's face flush crimson and then fade to deathly pallor as she spoke; indeed, at that moment they turned in at the gates; and Parker was forgotten.

The two women dined rather drearily, for Lucy was strangely dull, and Edith was suddenly attacked by an unusual and disagreeable toothache.

"Why not go to bed, Edith?" Mrs. Dalton suggested as the clock struck 9 and they were back in the drawing-room.

Edith felt desperately cross with herself. "A nice person I am to cheer any one up," she thought viciously. She was more than annoyed that so trivial but painful an ailment should visit her when she was the possessor of so rarely white and even a set of teeth. She was not easily beaten, but after half an hour had gone, during which she had been too uncomfortable to notice the strange, restless manner in which Lucy fidgetted about, she threw up the sponge and declared for bed.

"Let me bring you some brandy and water, and it will make you sleep," was Mrs. Dalton's eager request.

And Edith was obliged to permit her friend to perform this charitable office, and see her to her room. She bade Lucy good night, and after a wild desire to bang her head against the wall, drank the brandy with a shudder, and after a short while dropped off into a delightful slumber in which every twinge of pain was lost. All at once she awoke with a start, and her heart beat in an uneven fashion; she sat up in bed and looked at her watch—just 12 o'clock; she had slept, then, over two hours soundly, and the refractory tooth was subdued. She was slipping her watch under the pillow when again she started; it had been no delusion, footsteps were passing down the landing. Like lightning Edith was out of bed and had thrown on her dressing-gown. Her courage faltered for a moment, for Edith was only a girl, and hideous stories of pistols and hasty shooting by latter-day burglars came to her mind; but it was only for a moment; then taking her candle in hand, she went as noiselessly as possible to the head of the stairs and passed down. All was still, and from the flickering light of the hall lamp she could see there was no one left as sentinel or spy; so she determined, not without a curious sensation at her heart, to creep boldly down, reconnoitre, and then go back and rouse the house. She made very little noise descending, and at last stood in the hall. The voice was still faint, and she paused to listen before proceeding. The next instant she was at the dining-room door, and had thrown the door wide open.

A smothered woman's shriek and an oath greeted her, and a lump seemed to rise in her throat.

"Lucy," she said, in choked, hardly audible tones, "your child is up-stairs and needs you at once."

Without a word, but with a face as white as death, Lucy passed her in the doorway, and the quick step up the stairs testified to the existence of the mother's sudden dread and pain.

The man left thus stranded was young, of a dark, handsome type, attired in evening dress.

He stared at the girl before him with a contracted brow, and looked, as he must have felt, wretchedly ill at ease.

"You, sir, whoever you may be, please leave this house at once."

Edith's hand sought the door for support; though she kept so bold a front her limbs were trembling beyond her control.

He looked at her young face, rigid in its contempt and horror, and despite his anger could not but admire her. She made a pretty picture in her scarlet gown with hair dark and loose on her shoulders, but the admiration was but momentary.

"This is Mrs. Dalton's house. I am here at her invitation. I leave it only at her request," he answered shortly.

"I will ring up the servants and have you thrown out," she replied.

"And so compromise your dear friend," he said, with a sneer. "By all means; I am perfectly willing."

Edith drew a short breath.

"You are a coward," she said quietly; then before he could speak she went on very slowly, and with great deliberation, "Lucy is up-stairs, I am alone with you; the scandal, therefore, will fall on me. Now, shall I call the servants, or will you go?"

"By Jove!" he muttered under his breath.

He had never come across this sort of woman before; his eyes just met hers, and at the unutterable disgust and contempt in them he was abashed; he took up his hat and sauntered out of the room without saying one word. Edith followed him, and closed the door herself upon him; then, shaking like a leaf, she went into the dining-room, extinguished the lights, and then crept upstairs, feeling that for once in her life all her strength and courage were hopelessly gone.

The event just passed had lasted barely three minutes, but its result was none the less painful.

As she reached the upper landing she felt some one clasp her knees, and then crouch down at her feet, and all her nerve returned.

With her strong young arm she lifted up Lucy, who was weeping bitterly, and almost carried her into her own bedroom, and the rest of the night she spent in trying to soothe and console the poor foolish moth who had fluttered so near the candle, and by her aid had escaped; for before morning came Edith had learned all she wanted to know; and, save for her supreme folly and weakness, Lucy Dalton had done nothing to separate herself from her husband's life.

Mr. Dalton returned to his cosy home full of spirits, and Edith met him with as much light-hearted manner as she could assume.

"I am afraid you will never leave me Lucy's guardian again, Herbert," she said; "for you will find her rather shattered. She caught cold one day driving, and I have kept her in-doors ever since.

She did not stay in the room as she finished this speech, but as she shut the door, she caught a glimpse of Lucy's golden head buried on her husband's shoulder, and she was content.

"I think she has learnt her lesson," she thought to herself, "and now I will trot home to papa."

Mr. Lacelles welcomed his daughter affectionately. "I got your letter, Edith," he said at once, "and I have asked young Rochdale to dinner to-night. Does that suit you.

Edith simply nodded.

Punctually at eight the door was thrown open and Mr. Rochdale announced.

Mr. Lascelles shook hands effusively with the young man.

"Edith, my dear—" he began.

But Edith did not move; she fixed her eyes on Mr. Rochdale.

"Papa," she said very distinctly, "I do not desire further knowledge of this gentleman; we have met before."

George Rochdale's face grew crimson, then white; he recognized the voice of the girl who had ordered him from her friend's house a few nights ago, though the first glimpse of the tall, slender form in dainty evening dress had not enlightened him.

"Edith—" began Mr. Lasbelles, alarmed and angry.

She took up her fan and walked to the door.

"Cousin Minnie will take my place to-night; I shall dine in my room."

Three minutes later she heard the hall-door bang, and from her window saw Mr. Rochdale get into a hansom and drive away.

Mr. Lascelles came up, for the first time in his life in a terrific passion with his daughter.

"You may say just whatever you like, papa," Edith remarked very quietly; "I know this man to be a coward and a scoundrel, and I would not marry him or even speak to him again for all the fortunes in the world!"—The World (London).

HOW INDIANS POISON ARROWS.

It was a long time before Friday came, and I began to think he was going to disregard my summons, and was getting angry, when he suddenly put in an appearance. I explained to him what I wished to know, and without the slightest hesitation he said to the venerable arrow-maker: "Tell my brother all about the poisoned arrows." "Well," said the old man, first we take a bloated yellow rattlesnake in August, when he is most poisonous, and tie him with a forked stick to a stake, then we tease him until he is in a great rage. This is done by passing a switch over his body from his head to his tail. When he threshes the ground with his body and his eyes grow bright and sparkle like diamonds, we kill a deer, antelope or other small animal, and tearing out the liver, throw it to the snake while it is warm and the blood is still coursing through it. The reptile will strike it again, and again, and pretty soon it will turn black. When he tires the snake is teased again, and he is induced to sink his fangs into the soft flesh until the poison has been extracted from him and the liver is reeking with it. He is then killed, and the liver lifted with a sharp pole, for so dangerous is it no one dares to touch it. The liver is let lie for about an hour, when it will be jet black and emit a sour smell. Arrows are then brought and their iron heads pushed into the liver up to the shaft. They are left sticking there for about an hour and a half, when they are withdrawn and dried in the sun. A thin glistening yellow skum adheres to the arrow, and if it so much as touches raw flesh it is certain to poison it to death."

I asked if Indians still used poisoned arrows. "No," he replied, "no man, Indian or white man, for years past has been shot with these arrows, and they are no longer made."—Omaha Republican.

An exchange says that ice water must be sipped slowly. That is what makes twenty thirsty people mad around the water cooler in a hotel office where there is but one drinking cup. Sipping ice water slowly when a lot of bigger men are saying "Hurry up" is not healthy.—New Orleans Picayune.

English dairymen are now almost unanimous in the opinion that ground oats is the best milk producing grain ration known.

A TIRED MOTHER'S STORY.

This tender story of a mother's experience is published in the Christian Weekly. She had laid her table with great care and pains for a company of distinguished guests, when her little girl accidentally overturned a tureen of gravy on the snowy cloth.

"What should I do? It seemed a drop too much for my tired nerves—many drops too much for my tablecloth. I was about to jerk my child down from the table, when a blessed influence held me. I caught the expression on her face, such a sorry, frightened, appealing look I never saw, and suddenly a picture of the past came and stood out vividly before my mind's eye. My child's face revealed feelings which I had experienced twenty years before.

"I was myself a little nervous girl, about eight years old, in the happy home of my childhood. It was a stormy day in winter. It was soon after coal-oil lamps were introduced, and father had bought a very handsome one. The snow had drifted up against the kitchen windows; so, although it was not dark, the lamp was lighted. Mother was sick in bed up-stairs, and we children were gathered in the kitchen to keep the noise and confusion away from her. I was feeling myself very important, helping to get supper; at any rate, I imagined I was helping, and in my officiousness I seized the lamp and went down cellar for some butter; I tried to set it on the hanging shelf, but alas! I didn't give in room enough, and down it fell on the cemented floor.

"I never shall forget the shock that it gave me. I seemed almost paralyzed. I didn't dare go up-stairs, and I was afraid so stay down there. To make it worse, I heard my father's voice in the kitchen. He had cautioned us again and again to be careful of that lamp, and now there it lay, smashed to pieces.

"But his voice seemed to give me the impetus I needed to go up and meet the scolding or whipping, or both, which I felt sure awaited me, and which I really felt I deserved. So I crept up over the dark stairway, and as I entered the kitchen I met my father, with such a stern look upon his face that I was frightened. I saw there was no need to tell him what had happened. He had heard the crash, and if he hadn't I guess my face would have told the story.

"The children stood silently around waiting to see what father would do, and I saw by their faces that they were horror-stricken, for that lamp had been the subject of too much talk and wonder to be smashed without a sensation. As for me, I felt so frightened, so confused and sorry, that I couldn't speak. But upon glancing again at father I saw the angry look die out of his eyes and one of tenderest pity take its place. I doubt not that he saw the same look in my face then that I saw in my child's face to-day. In a minute he lifted me in his arms, and was hugging me close to his breast. Then he whispered, oh so kindly: 'Never mind, little daughter; we all know it was an accident but I hope you will take the small lamp when you go down cellar again.'

"Oh, what a revulsion of feelings I experienced! It was such a surprise to me that I was suddenly overwhelmed with feelings of love and gratitude, and burying my face I sobbed as if my heart was breaking. No punishment could have affected me half so much, and nothing can efface the memory of it from my mind.

"How I loved my father to-day, as the sight of my little girl's face brought it all freshly before me! Will she love me as dearly I wonder, twenty years or more from now, because moved by the same impulse that stirred my father's heart in that long-ago time, I was able to press the little frightened thing to my heart, and tell her kindly that I knew she didn't mean to spill the gravy, and that I knew she would be more careful another time? Will she be helped by it when she is a mother, as I have been helped by it to-day?"

POOR LITTLE CHAP.

There is a little man in Saratoga, 12 years old, who is probably the youngest and richest horse owner in the world, says a journal of that town. His name is D. J. McCarthy of San Francisco. Although hs wears knee breeches and roundabout jackets, he sports a man's season badge from his buttonhole. His father, who is here with him, gave the boy two years ago a pair of Shetland ponies and a wagon, paying $450 for the outfit, with which to amuse himself after school hours, on Saturdays and during school vacations. The young fellow greatly enjoyed his outfit, which was a feature of the drives in the parks and down the beach to the Cliff House. Last year the youth sought a higher grade of horseflesh, and, taking a fancy to a runner, traded his Shetland pony equipage for it, receiving $350 to boot. The horse obtained is C H. Todd, winner of the Derby this month at Chicago, by which Master McCarthy won about $14,000. The young man took $10,000 of this money and purchased Todd's brother, which young horse has given evidence of great speed, and won a number of minor local events. The rest of the money he put in the bank. Master McCarthy cannot only talk turf equal to some of the veterans, but is a very good scholar for one of his age, and talks very ably on the resources and growth of California.—Boston Budget.

NAGHTICAL.

"Have you seen my beautiful yacht?"
"Have I seen your beautiful whacht?"
"Beautiful yacht."
"Beautiful whacht!"
"Yacht! yacht! yacht!"
"Oh! No, I have nacht."
"If its nacht too hacht let's tracht down to the spacht where I keep my yacht."
"I wacht that you have nacht gacht a yacht. Great Scacht! I know your placht. You ought to be shacht. I'll not stir one jacht. Your yacht is nothing but an old tuchb."—New York Sun.

Night on the Farm.

'Tis dewfall on the lonely farm,
The flocks are gathered in the fold,
The dusky air is soft as balm,
The daisies hide their hearts of gold.

Slow, drowsy, swinging bells are heard
In pastures dewy, dark and dim,
And in the door-yard trees, a bird
Trills sleepily his evening hymn.

The dark, blue deeps are full of stars;
One lone lamp, in the hillside gloom
A mile away is red as Mars;
The night is faint with sweet perfumes.

At bedtime in the quiet house,
Up through the wide old rooms I go,
Without a lamp—and not a mouse
Is stirring. Loudly, to and fro,

The old clock ticks, and easterly
The ancient windows open high;
Here the sun's kiss will waken me,
With the bird-songs welling up the sky.

WHAT PUSH CAN DO.

What do the Bridgeport board of trade do—David M. Read, James Staples, M. W. Seymour, Colonel Thomas L. Watson, R. B. Lacey, P. T. Barnum and others of the board of trade—when they hear a manufacturer, an individual with a promising patent, or a reputable dry goods firm is seeking a desirable location in Connecticut? Not only incessantly do they correspond with him, but they send a committee to confer with him. The stranger visits Bridgeport according to appointment and for an hour previous to his arrival the reception committee is closeted in some back office contemplating how to present Bridgeport in her best dress to the visitor. The finest turnout in the city is at the disposition of the committee and a clever story teller like Mr. Barnum or Mr. Staples, with some board of trade man who carries all the valuable statistics of the town in his head, take seats in the carriage, and the business of sight-seeing begins. . . . The stranger, after he acquaints the committee with the character of his enterprise and the desirability of a peculiar kind of a site for it, will be driven right to such a location.

"But the street is altogether too narrow for our business," he may say after inspecting the premises.

"Very well then," reassuringly respond the gentlemen of the committee, "you will experience no bother from that source; we will request the city to make the necessary improvements to your satisfaction."

The visitor will soon become convinced he is in the hands of a very accommodating set of gentlemen. He is introduced to some of the big moguls of the city, makes a tour through several enormous manufactories, and in the evening is dined at one of the mansions. He leaves the city with the feelings of a prince, relates to those associated with him in the enterprise the overwhelming liberality of Bridgeport citizens, the increasing prosperity of the place and repeats their indisputable reasons why Bridgeport is the only spot on the top of the earth where he and his friends will be prosperous. They come to Bridgeport, employ a hundred or two operatives, help to boom along the trade of the merchants, and become in time a solid spoke in Bridgeports wheel of industry. Another important element that enters into this general policy of securing manufacturers and business men from other sections is the liberality on the part of the citizens on the land question. If the site determined upon is discouragingly high, the real estate agent who has the sale of the property will promptly throw off his commission, steps will be taken to get the principal reduced, and generally the negotiations will be perfected to the satisfaction of the purchaser. Yes, and if the manufacturer or business man as the case may be, sometimes has not sufficient capital to erect a building, but needs all the money he has for operating expenses, nine times out of ten a number of gentlemen will hunt up money to pay for a structure. But squeamishness caused by the loss of $100 or $200 is not allowed to obstruct an enterprise which in time promises to advance the material prosperity of Bridgeport. It is a well known fact, too, that the capitalists, and some who cannot be classed as such, but who have a comfortable allowance of the world's goods, subscribe freely to the stock of a new corporation, providing the enterprise looks at all substantial. In a word the moneyed men are not deterred from investing in a new concern because there is not a positive guarantee that for every dollar invested they must realize $25. They will be satisfied with a great deal smaller percentage.—New Haven Paper.

"Do you swear?" asked a ministerial looking man of a sailor on the dock. "Partly often," was the reply. "Drink?" "—m—yes. I git dry onct in a while" "Gamble?" "When the v'yage's over I shake a few dices." "Chew tobacco?" "Look here, shipmate, ain't you gittin' kind'r curus." "Answer me that; do you chew tobacco!" "Wall, yes, I do." "That's what I wanted to get at, and I meant to do it in a soothing gentlemanly way, as it were. Gimme a chew, will you?" —Puck.

"I think I've got rather the meanest husband in Detroit," exclaimed a little woman on the car the other day. Her friend asked her to explain, and she continued: "I found that he was smoking fifty cents' worth of cigars per day, and I got him to agree to give me as much pin money per week as the cigars cost. He stuck to it one week." "And then what?" "He bought him a clay pipe and a pound of 10 cent smoking tobacco, and my income is cut down to two cents a week."—Detroit Free Press.

"Willie Wafflers," said the teacher, "which is the shortest day in the year?" "Twenty-fust of December," replied Willie, who was correct, so far as the writer knows. "And Tommy Tuff may tell us which is the longest dry," "Sunday!" shouted Tommy. —Life.

The Cattle Show.

35th ANNUAL EXHIBIT OF THE EASTERN HAMPDEN AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

Poor Weather, but a Good Show.

TUESDAY—First Day.

A dark and threatening day greeted the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society Tuesday, the opening day of its thirty-fifth annual fair. The storm of the day before bade fair to continue, and the gloomy outlook kept many people at home, as well as a considerable amount of stock. As a result the show of stock was not so large in numbers as in former years, but the quality made up for the lack of quantity. In thoroughbreds there were 28 entries, and some very pretty cattle were shown, Charles Robinson of Barre Plains being the largest exhibitor with a herd of 12 Holsteins. The number of breeding and milch cows was small, only 7 being entered. There were 17 entries of heifers and 13 of steers. In the milch cows division there were 23 head, and 20 in the herds of neat stock. Fat cattle were not very abundant, there being only 11 animals entered for competition in this class. There were some fine looking sheep in the pens, J. M. Lyon of Wales showing Hampshiredowns, while J. K. Knox of Palmer exhibited Shropshires and Lincolns. H. A. Rindge of Monson also showed a fine flock of animals. Swine were noticeable for their scarcity, only one animal being on exhibition. The exhibition of poultry was larger than ever before, there being 57 entries, against 38 last year, and some fine birds were to be seen. In the test of working cattle 4 years old, E. R. Carpenter of Charlton easily took first premium, as did the Monson town farm team in the test of 5-year-olds. There was only one entry of fancy trained steers, by C. D. Richardson of West Brookfield, which went through their various performances in very good shape. The exhibition of draft horses was very good, but would have been improved by putting on more of a load and dispensing with the blocking of the wheels.

The first thing after dinner came the BALL GAME—PALMERS VS. MONSONS.

Rooney was put into the box to pitch for the Palmers, but was soon batted out of position, when Hobbs took his place, but not before six runs had been brought in. The visitors were shut out in the second and third innings, but brought in two runs in the sixth. The Palmers made three in the second, four in the fourth, two in the fifth and nine in the sixth, when the Monsons tried three pitchers, all of whom were batted out of the box, after which the Monsons gave up the contest, their pitcher having a sprained ankle and being unable to play. The score stood 18 to 8.

Innings,	1	2	3	4	5	6
Palmers,	0	3	0	4	2	9	—18
Monsons,	6	0	0	2	0	0	— 8

NEXT CAME MEMBERS' TROTTING CLASS,

to trot nearest to three and one-half minutes. There were five entries. Rufus Flynt of Monson taking first money, J. W. Weeks Jr., of Palmer second, G. C. Flynt of Monson third, J. W. Weeks of Palmer fourth. There were only two starters in the

ONE MILE BICYCLE RACE,

Lewis Holden and S. Brown of Bondsville. Holden had an easy time of it, and won in 3.54 1-2. The

THREE MINUTE CLASS

brought out "Idol chief," owned by E. Avery, Springfield; "Lance Munsen," C. Bush, North Brookfield; "Billy J.," G. F. Hobart, North Amherst; "Sister," Dr. Wilbur, Palmer. The horses were given positions in the order stated, and on the second score "Sister's" sulky was smashed, and a new one sent for. Then the horse balked and refused to start. The horses were finally sent off, on the first attempt, with "Sister" full six lengths in the rear. This the mare soon made up, and won the heat in 2.49 1-2. The second was nothing but a procession, with "Sister" first, "Idol Chief" second, "Billy J." third and "Lance Munsen" last. The third heat was nearly a repetition of the one before, except that "Billy J." made a good effort for first place, but couldn't quite make it. The score:

"Sister," s.m.	1	1	1
"Idol Chief," b.s.	2	2	2
"Billy J.," b.s.	4	3	3
"Lance Munsen," b.g.	3	4	4

Time—2.49½, 2.45, 245½.

The judges were George W. Ely, C. E. Fuller and H. P. Holden.

WEDNESDAY—Second Day.

Wednesday morning was not very much more promising than the previous one. It almost rained, and the managers felt concerned for the outlook. The weather clerk was kind enough however to hold back the rain, and a fair crowd assembled. There were 23 entries of colts, and some fine animals were shown; all sizes, shapes, colors and ages up to four years were exhibited. There were only seven entries of stallions, and three of mares with foal. Six horses were brought around in the gentlemen's single driving horse class, and only one pair was entered. The was hotly contested, and was as good a game as was ever seen on the park. It was a fielding game, both pitchers being hit hard, and but few men were struck out. The Palmers made 15 single and one two base hit off Nolan, while the Three Rivers hit Rooney for fifteen singles. It was anybody's game until Shackley muffed an easy ball in the twelfth inning, followed by a fumble which let in two runs. In the Three River's half of the second inning, with none out and men on second and third, they were shut out without a run by good playing. And in the seventh, the Palmers brought in five runs, all of them earned, after two men were out and none on bases. The score:

BALL GAME—PALMERS VS. THREE RIVERS,

Innings,	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12
Palmers,	1	1	1	2	0	0	5	0	0	0	0	0	—10
Three Rivers,	3	0	0	0	2	3	0	0	2	0	0	0	2—12

The greased pole attracted only one person, who soon gave up the attempt. although $15 awaited him if he was successful, and the

HURDLE RACE

brought out four starters, J. J. Murphy of North Wilbraham, E. Strong of North Adams, Frank Millard of Palmer and Chas. Patton. The first trial resulted in a foul, and on the second heat E. Strong came in first, J. J. Murphy second and Charles Patton third.

THE 5-MILE BICYCLE RACE.

There were three entries, but only two came up to the scratch, Lewis Holden and Seth Brown of Bondsville. Holden led for the first two miles, when Brown took the lead. Holden got a fall at 3⅜ miles, and Brown good naturedly waited until he had mounted again. Holden again took the lead at the end of the fourth mile, and easily won in 21.15. In the six horses were entered. "Charlie B.," F. L. Sturtevant, Warren; "Sister," Dr. Wilbur, Palmer; "Sophie," J. Hobbs, Brookfield; "Idol Chief," E. Avery, Springfield; "Nardia," M. C. Wade, Springfield; "J. G.," Joseph Goddard, West Brookfield. "Idol Chief" did not start, and the other horses were off in the order named after "Sister" made up her mind to move, in the first heat proving even more balky than the day before. She was several lengths behind at the start, but took the lead at the end of the first half. "Nardia" and "Sophie" collided at the half mile post, but soon got down to the work of trying to catch the head of the procession, "Sister" winning easily. "Charlie G." was drawn in the next heat, and the second and third were only processions, "Sister" winning on a jog without making a break. Score:

2.45 TROTTING CLASS

"Sister," ch.m.	1	1	1
"Nardia," b.m.	2	2	2
"Sophie," b.m.	3	3	3
"J. G.," ch.g.	4	4	4
"Charlie B.," g.g.	5	dr.

Time—2.47, 2.47, 2.45.

Only three horses were entered in the

2.30 TROTTING CLASS.

"Jack Shepard," E. Avery, Springfield; "Belle Jefferson," A. B. Green, Willimantic; "May W.," F. L. Sturtevant, Warren, which were given positions in the order named. "Belle Jefferson collided with "Jack Shepard on the first turn, and all went off their feet for a bad break, but bunched close up the back stretch. At the first half "Jack Shepard" got the lead, with "Mary W." second, and the heat was finished in that order. In the second heat "Jack Shehard" lost the lead by a break on the turn, but regained it on the back stretch, with "Belle Jefferson" second and "Mary W." a bad third, in which order the finish was made. In the third heat "Mary W." took the lead from "Jack Shepard" at the first quarter, but lost it again on the second time around, "Jack Shepard winning the heat and race. The score:

"Jack Shepard," b.m.	1	1	1
"Belle Jefferson," g.m.	3	2	2
"Mary W.," b.m.	2	3	3

Time—2.37, 2.39, 2.36½.

The judges were H. P. Holden and C. E. Fuller of Palmer, and Charles Fuller of Springfield.

IN THE HALL.

The cloudy weather made a great difference in the exhibit in the upper hall, many not caring to bring out their articles of fancy work with the prospect of rain. Mrs. F. E. Carpenter and Mrs. L. M. Burleigh showed handsome hand-painted china, and a silk crazy quilt of Miss Carrie Ellis's deserves special mention. There were a few paintings, and the usual number of bed quilts and small articles. Until the committee will refrain from cutting the money into 10 and 15-cent premiums, and give the really meritorious articles something worth contending for, the exhibit will continue small in numbers. In the lower hall the display of fruits was fine, in fact it is seldom as good and never better. G. H. B. Greene of Belchertown made the best general display with 131 varieties, including apples and pears, and 20 varieties of peaches. E. M. Walker of Monson and the state primary school also made good showings, as did also J. W. Baldwin of Wilbraham with 14 varieties of pears. In vegetables and grain Geer Bros. of Three Rivers made the best showing, though the state primary school and A. P. Capen of Ludlow also had good exhibits. There were some handsome specimens of bread, cake, honey, pickles, etc., while among the curiosities were a swarm of bees, and some peanut vines grown in Palmer. The display of flowers, which goes so far toward making the hall look attractive, was rather slim, but few being shown.

The total receipts from all sources this year were $1131.59, or about $200 greater than last year. The premiums will be ready for payment about October 25.

GEORGE M. STEARNS retired from his position as U. S. district attorney Tuesday, and his successor was sworn in.

THERE can be no doubt of Gov. Ames's renomination, and probably as little about his reëlection. Since the governor has mainly given up attempts at public speech-making there is little to criticise in his administration, and much to commend.

THAT Democratic smelling committee which is scenting around the state after Republican office holders will be quite a help to the Republican party. The committee will "smell suthin'" about election time that will be very disagreeable to them.

THE Democrats are quite at a loss for a candidate for the governorship. Collector Saltonstall, Congressman Morse, Mayor Russell of Cambridge and others are named, but none of them are supposed to be anxious for the honor of being set up to be knocked over.

HIGHWAY robberies are rarely heard of now-a-days, but West Springfield had one Tuesday evening, a Chicopee merchant, riding horseback, being waylaid, knocked senseless and left gagged and bound after his pockets had been rifled. The Holyoke roadwill not be as attractive a thoroughfares if it is to have attachments of this kind.

THE Boston Post mourns because Gov. Ames did not appoint a Democrat to the supreme bench, as it has none now, but the Herald affirms that at least three of the judges voted for Cleveland in the last presidential election, and only one of them for the Republican nominee. Our judges are not partisans, and we trust they will never become so.

A NEW plan has been involved by the Boston & Albany officials for the proposed new Springfield station, this being substantially the present structure, minus the roof over the tracks, enlarged and moved east of Main street, with waiting rooms, etc., each side of the tracks. This is a mistake. Any plan which sends freight trains anywhere except outside the station will prove very unsatisfactory, we believe.

THERE were less then 25 delegates at the convention of labor organization representatives at Boston last Saturday, to launch the new Labor party upon the political waters of the state. The party doesnot get a very enthusiastic send-off. Its platform resolves "That all men have an equal right to the earth and its natural resources; that no men have the right to tax their fellows for the privilege of life by virtue of their private appropriation of these gifts," and so on.

SOME time ago a French method of treating consumption was tried in some American hospitals with so good success that physicians began to hope that a cure had been found at last for this dread disease. Sulphureted hydrogen was introduced into the lungs by means of gaseous enemata, and for a time the patients showed marked improvement. But it appears to have been a sort of mind cure, for in a short time they were as sick as ever, and the specific for this scourge is yet to be found.

SINCE the question of insulting the president at the St. Louis encampment was settled by his decision not to attend, the Illinois and Wisconsin departments of the Grand Army have found another matter to stir their ire, in the question of precedence. Heretofore Illinois has been at the head of the parade, as being the oldest organization, but Wisconsin now claims that honor, and seems to have convinced the officials that her claim is well founded, as orders have been issued placing that department at the head of the column, whereat the Illinoisans are in a state of high dudgeon.

THE Illinois supreme court has unanimously affirmed the judgment of the lower court in the case of the seven Chicago anarchists convicted of murder, and they are to be hanged November 11, unless a successful appeal to executive clemency is made. The awful work of these men, when the police who had been ordered to disperse the riotous gathering of workingmen at the Haymarket, on the night of May 4th, 1886, were assailed with dynamite bombs, is still fresh in mind, and there will be a general feeling of gratitude that the inhuman outlaws who were responsible for the crime are to suffer the righteous penalty of their horrible deed.

SUCH is the curiosity in New York concerning the form of the hull, dimensions, etc., of the Scotch cutter Thistle, that the New York World sent a professional diver down the bay the other night, who made a careful examination of the hull by moonlight, all unbeknownst to the innocent Scotchmen who were on guard above, enabling the World to gratify the anxious public with the outline and dimensions of the famous racer. Leastways, the World would have us believe this was done; but a sketch made under such conditions would show more enterprise than accuracy. It is evident that yachtsmen have more fear of the Thistle than of any other yacht in some years, and if she does not take the cup back with her she will make a very close call for it.

Unless something is done to suppress the growing habit of betting on the ball games, these games will prove anything but a blessing to the community. It is not a pleasant thing to see boys of all ages imitating their elders in wagering money on the result of a game, and the moral effect of the habit can but be pernicious.

At the district court Tuesday morning Daniel Madden of Palmer was arraigned for assault upon a child. He paid $3.68 for the offence and was released. On Wednesday Joseph Forsier of Brimfield paid $6.98 for drunkenness, while Paul Stone and John Flaherty, both of Monson, were ordered to leave $6.98 apiece for a similar offence.

Stafford people have been trying in vain to induce the officials of the New London Northern Railroad to continue running the Block Island train through the winter. They feel that they are entitled to better train service than they have under the present existing arrangement, and want the evening steamboat train held at Palmer to connect with the New York express.

P. J. Murphy, the "undefeated short distance runner" of North Wilbraham, was challenged by E. Strong of North Adams, the winner of the hurdle race at the cattle show, Wednesday, to a race at any distance, for fun or any sum up to $500. Strong made the challenge immediately after the race Wednesday, and wished to post forfeit money, but Murphy declined, and has not as yet come forward to meet the challenge.

A horse belonging to W. C. Greene of Thorndike became frightened at the cars while on South Main street Monday morning and ran. The buggy was overturned near the Weeks house, and the driver and Mary Wallace thrown out. Both were somewhat hurt but not seriously so. The horse freed himself from the buggy and ran to Eager's shoe store, where he collided with a hitching post and lay insensible for some time.

BADLY HURT IN A DRUNKEN ROW.

A lively row took place soon after 10 o'clock Wednesday evening in the saloon of John Feeney, on the corner of Main and Central streets, when Jerry McAuliffe, James Donahue, and Hugh Hanley had their heads badly cut by blows from a bottle in the hands of some person or persons whose identity is not yet fully determined. The muss first started in "Bill" Thompson's place on Central street earlier in the evening, and just as Feeney was about to close for the night several persons from Thompson's came in. Just how the row started no one seems to know, but Hanley received a blow in the face from a pair of brass knuckles. McAuliffe started to his assistance, but was met by a blow on the head with a quart bottle of whisky. Donahue was just coming from his day's work on the railroad, and hearing the noise stopped on the sidewalk to see what was the matter, when a man rushed from the saloon door and knocked him down with a bottle. As soon as the trouble commenced all the lights were put out, and none of the injured were able to tell who hit them, which is probably fortunate for all concerned, for had the assailants been found, they might have been roughly handled, as the injured men had in no wise provoked an assault, and had

The personal property of the late Miss Angelina Woodward was sold at public auction Wednesday.

The farm of the late William Lyman has been leased for the ensuing year to F. D. Livingstone of Brightwood.

"Pierra"—President, Miss May Bancroft; vice president and secretary, Miss Mary Parsons; treasurer, Miss Carrie Steele; critic, Miss Ida Rogers.

WARE AND VICINITY.

Were we mistaken? We thought we were to have the post office "lighted" by gas.

Have you seen the enlargement to Bryson's show windows? If not, look the next time you pass.

The parochial school moved to the new building on Monday. They now have a few over 200 scholars.

The spectacular drama "Michael Strogoff" is to be presented at the town hall next Thursday evening.

Two of the drinking fountains have already been put in position: opposite the Hampshire House and in front of the town hall.

The Republicans hold a caucus in the court room this evening, to elect delegates to the state convention to be held at Boston the 28th.

Episcopal services will be discontinued until Sunday, October 16, at which time Rev. Mr. Duffield will commence his labors in Ware.

At the district court Saturday Mrs. Bouri was fined $50 and costs for selling liquor illegally. The case was appealed to the superior court.

A continual stream of teams loaded with very large telephone poles, to be put up for the long distance line, have been seen passing through the street the past week.

The Central Mass. road has advertised excursion rates to Barre during the cattle show, from the 28th to the 30th. The round trip, including admission to the grounds, is to be 70 cents.

Rev. James Boyle is to publish a paper, "The Chronicle," to be issued every other night during the fair he is to hold next month, to contain the doings of the fair. Advertising is being solicited.

Those interested in forming a militia company in town met at Grand Army Hall Wednesday evening. There are already thirty who have agreed to join. They meet again to-morrow night at the same place at 7.30.

The Trinity Episcopal society has called Rev. C. W. Duffield of Sherborn Falls, to take charge of the Episcopal Mission here. Mr. Duffield has given in his resignation there, and is expected here the middle of next month.

At the muster Saturday at East Brookfield, the Ware boys with the old hand engine threw water a greater distance than any company present. They were served a supper at Firemen's Hall in the evening after their return home.

At the last regular meeting of J.W. Lawton Post, G. A. R., a vote of thanks was passed to the citizens of Ware who had contributed for the purchase of guns and equipments for the post, which were recently presented to them.

Willie Cregan, James Higgins, William Reilly, Harry Gates, James Mack and Peter Mack, have joined themselves together as ushers for entertainments at the town hall. The selectmen are to provide them with the hall for those who need them. William Cregan is manager of the party.

The interest has grown to the extent that the French Protestant people are to organize a church in town, on Tuesday, September 27th. The following Congregational churches have been invited to be present at that time: First church, Ware; East church, Ware; Gilbertville, Warren, West Brookfield, Hardwick, Barre; Second church, Palmer; First church, Thorndike; Union, Three Rivers, also French Protestant churches of Lowell, Fall River, Springfield and Holyoke. Rev. C. E. Amaron, principal of the French Protestant College of Lowell, Rev. A. E. P. Perkins of Worcester, and Rev. Joshua Coit, Secretary of the Mass. Home Missionary Society, are expected to be present. Rev. Thomas A. Dorion is to be the settled pastor.

The town hall was well filled Saturday evening to see the entertainment by Hennessey Bros.' minstrels. This was Mr. P. J. Mulvaney's last night with the company, and he was presented with a fine silk umbrella by them. He has purchased the store of O'Neal on Main street, and is having it thoroughly renovated, and is to carry a larger and better stock than before. Mr. Frank Hennessey, one of the proprietors, made the presentation with a few well timed remarks. After speaking of their regret that Mr. Mulvaney should leave the company, he spoke of the presentation that was made him by his townsmen when he left Ware, and assured his friends that he was "returned to them as good and true a man as when he left them." With the presentation of the silk umbrella the wish was expressed that it might sometimes shield him from the overflow of rain clouds, and "We hope no other clouds will ever mar your happiness. Should those of adversity ever hover around you, our wish is that the sun of prosperity will dispell them as quickly as the glorious orb of day obliterates all traces of a summer shower," closing his remarks by speaking of the interest Mr. Mulvaney had taken in the wellfare of the company, worldly and spiritually, and wishing him success in his new undertaking.

A large audience assembled at the Congregational chapel Wednesday evening, through the courtesy of Miss H. G. Richardson, to listen to a choice programme of vocal music, rendered principally by the pupils of this lady, well known in this community as a conscientious, thorough and successful vocal teacher. Mr. Babcock, the Boston basso, was assisting artist. The programme was as follows:

Trio,—"The Wood Thrush," Hatton
MISSES LAWTON, RICHARDSON, HARMON.
Song,—"Burst, ye Apple Buds," Emery
MISS CHARLOTTE H. RICHARDSON.
Reverie,—"Sognai," Schira
MISS MARY H. LAWTON.
Preghiera,—"Cieca's Song," From La Gioconda
MISS HARMON.
Aria,—"Who Treads the Path of Duty?" Mozart
MR. D. M. BABCOCK.
Cavatina,—"J tuoi frequenti palpiti," Pacini
MRS. W. B. LAWTON.
Duet,—"From Semiramide,"
MISS RICHARDSON, LAWTON.
Song,—"Angus Macdonald," Roeckel
MISS HARMON.
Duet,—"The Hunter's Song," Kucken
MISSES RICHARDSON, HARMON.
Song,—"The Storm," Hullah
MRS. W. B. LAWTON.
Song,—"I am a Roamer Bold!" Mendelssohn
Trio,—"Thou'rt Lovely, Oh Night," Paer
MISSES RICHARDSON, LAWTON, HARMON.

The recital was a pleasant surprise, inasmuch as this, the first appearance of Mr. Babcock before a Ware audience, was unannounced. His fame, however, long since preceded him, and the encores he received were no more than the usual recognition which follows the hearing of his phenominal voice. Miss Harmon, a visiting pupil of Miss Richardson, the possessor of a highly cultivated and captivating contralto voice, was also heard for the first time in public by our people, and at once installed herself as a favorite, being heartily encored. Miss Charlotte Richardson showed decided advancement in vocal work since her last appearance, and of the remaining vocalists Mrs. W. B. Lawton gratified many of her old friends by contributing to the evening's entertainment, while her daughter, a soprano of decided promise, made a successful debut.

PHILADELPHIA was arrayed in its brightest robes yesterday when the Centennial celebration of the signing and promulgation of the constitution of the United States was begun. Everything was auspicious, and there was a grand civic and industural parade. Several governors, and many other distinguished people, were there, the president and Mrs. Clevland arrived in the evening.

NEW YORK Republicans held their state convention at Saratoga, Wednesday, and nominated Col. Fred Grant for secretary of state.

JOTTINGS FROM THE HUB.

From our Special Correspondent.

BOSTON, Sept. 14th, 1887.

Political developments have come fast these last few days. They are not great events, but they are matters apparently small which have a decided influence on public opinion, and so help in the shaping of great events. Most important of these is the growing determination of the Democrats to have all the public offices they can possibly get. Hunger for office is their leading quality, just now, and they are completely destroying any pretensions they have made in the past that they are a civil service reform party. Their so-called "smelling committee,"—to learn how many Republicans are in office, and which of them are or were "offensive partisans,"—has kept actively at work. Its report will be made at the state convention, and doubtless will be the basis of a vigorous demand that more offices be given to the Democrats. Not only do the chief mugwump papers, such as the Boston Herald, the Springfield Republican and the New York Evening Post, ridicule this well-named committee, but the mugwumps here, in private conversation, declare their disgust at the course of the Democrats. If it were the object of the Democrats to alienate mugwump support, they could not do it faster than they have within the past week. Matters have not been going to their liking lately, in view of the president's continued support of the Baltimore crowd, and the spectacle of the home Democrats in a grand hullabaloo for the offices does not increase their respect.

Postmasters Corse's quarrel with Patrick Maguire, again, only adds reluctance to any mugwump's desire to go with the Democrats. Corse is determined to run his office on business principles. Maguire is determined that it shall afford shelter to more Democrats than at present. Corse has made the mistake of charging corrupt practices on unnamed persons in the city hall, and thus provoked the opposition of the Democrats there. Maguire doubtless has the sympathy of a large number of his party, and is credited with boasting that he will procure the removal of Corse from the post office. Meanwhile the average delegate to the Democratic convention at Worcester next Tuesday is preparing to demand that the offices be given to the Democrats, and to condemn Gen. Corse and Collector Saltonstall as hostile to true Democratic principles because they will not discharge the Republican clerks in their offices and give their places to the hungry Democratic spoilsmen.

Meanwhile, the Republican party is in harmony with itself, and likely to continue so. One of its leaders, who knows, tells me that the crust of the volcano is very thin, and that the breach between the Beard and Lodge wings has by no means healed. But there will be no outbreak this year. Treasurer Beard will receive about the full party vote, because the Lodge-Long men are in control of the machine, and it would not do to let any on the ticket be defeated by their fault. That would be bad politics. Then a large and united vote is wanted as a basis of next year's presidential campaign. Just now the effort of the party manager is to organize the voters in every town and city as fully as possible. A heavy vote is always in reserve, which rarely is heard from. According to the census, the heaviest vote in the state has not come within 100,000 of the total number of voters. So there is room for a large gain. Harmony will prevail in the convention, except over the prohibitory amendment. Probably a majority of the delegates will favor a plank like last year's, but some of them do not believe in it and will oppose its adoption, provided they do not change their minds.

The governor, heads of departments, committees of the Senate and House of Representatives, the First regiment and the Boston Cadets have just gone down to the Old Colony station on their way to the Philadelphia celebration. They made a fine appearance, but the crowd to see them was not as large as that which lined the sidewalk to see the parade on Labor day. There are lots of nice looking men in the delegation, and I have no doubt they will strut about, keeping up the dignity of the state at Philadelphia to a par with that of other commonwealths. I always wonder what such men are made for, but when a public occasion like this occurs, the conundrum is answered. But it is a good thing for human progress that most of us were not made good looking. It was one of our sort, I know, who made the proverb: "Handsome is that handsome does."

If any of your local Democrats wish to run for governor this year, their names may be sent to the Democratic state committee: post office address, Boston. A candidate is wanted, and must be found before Tuesday. A man willing to be knocked down and to pay liberally for the chance. Andrews, Grinnel, Stearns, Collins, Abbot and Morse are out of it, and it is a time for self sacrifice on the part of some true-blue Jeffersonian; let there be no delay.

The trouble over the arrest of Rev. E. T. Doane at Parape on the Caroline islands is regarded by the officers of the American Board here as settled by his release, which has been ordered by the Spanish authorities. But, without doubt, hereafter the Board must keep a sharp outlook against the Catholics who are trying to destroy their work. Mrs. Rand, the wife of a missionary now on the islands, who has returned home, says it is almost impossible to conceive the ruin which has been wrought by the Spaniards in three months.

Rumors are current that at the coming meeting of the Board in Springfield an attempt will be made by the new departure men to oust Rev. Dr. Alden from the prudential committee. For his place is mentioned Rev. Franklin Williams, pastor of the South Congregational church, Chicago, and the Congregationalist's Chicago correspondent "Franklin." On the other hand, a story widely current has it that the conservatives are trying to remove Rev. Dr. N. G. Clark and put Rev. Dr. E. B. Webb in his place. But this is utterly ridiculous, as any one might know who knows the men, and I can find no man who can give a solitary fact in support of it.

The latest spectaculor play here is "A Run of Luck" at the Boston theater, which has a horse race with hurdles five feet high on the stage and a full pack of hunting hounds. "Erminie," the comic opera, just past its 500th performance in New York, will be at the Globe next week. LANDON.

HOW UNPLEASANT

it is to see a beautiful child's face disfigured with vile humors, bursting through the skin in pimples, blotches and sores, and sadder still, when the young and innocent are laughed at and twitted in all such cases. I have been a great sufferer from catarrh for over ten years; had it very bad, could hardly breathe. Some nights I could not sleep—had to walk the floor. I purchased Ely's Cream Balm and am using it freely; it is working a cure surely. I have advised several friends to use it, and with happy results in every case. It is the one medicine above all others made to cure catarrh, and it is worth its weight in gold. I thank God I have found a remedy I can use with safety and that does all that is claimed for it. It is curing my deafness.—B. W. Sperry, Hartford, Conn.

RENEWS HER YOUTH.

Mrs. Phebe Chesley, Peterson, Clay Co., Iowa, tells the following remarkable story, the truth of which is vouched for by the residents of the town: "I am 73 years old, have been troubled with kidney complaint and lameness for many years; could not dress myself without help. Now I am free from all pain and soreness, and am able to do all my own housework. I owe my thanks to Electric Bitters for having renewed my youth, and removed completely all disease and pain." WORTH KNOWING.

Mr. W. H. Morgan, merchant, Lake City, Fla., was taken with a severe Cold, attended with a distressing Cough and running into Consumption in its first stages. He tried many so-called popular cough remedies and steadily grew worse. Was reduced in flesh, had difficulty in breathing and was unable to sleep. Finally tried Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and found immediate relief, and after using about half a dozen bottles found himself well and has had no return of the disease. No other remedy can show so grand a record of cures, as Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption Guaranteed to do just what is claimed for it.—Trial bottles free at LeGro & Lynde's Drug Store. 4

IN BRIEF, AND TO THE POINT.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existence. It is easy to put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Greens August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents. 2

TOWN WARRANT.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS, HAMPDEN, ss. To George W. Ely, constable of the town of Palmer, Greeting.

In the name of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, you are hereby directed to notify and warn all the inhabitants of the town of Palmer qualified to vote in elections and town affairs to meet at the Town House in said Palmer, on Monday, the twenty-sixth day of September, current, at two o'clock p. m., to act upon the following articles, to wit:

ARTICLE 1. To choose a moderator to preside at said meeting.

ART. 2. To see what action the town will take regarding the construction of a high school building, the location thereof, and purchasing land for the same.

ART. 3. To see if the town will vote to accept and allow the highway as laid out by the selectmen, to-wit, a highway about 95 rods in length, beginning on road leading from Whipple's bridge to Bondsville, about 12 rods westerly of Central Massachusetts railroad crossing, thence northeasterly over land of E. G. Hastings to road leading past house of E. B. Gates, and also vote to discontinue that portion of the old road leading from near Whipple's bridge to the northerly end of the new road above mentioned.

ART. 4. To see if the town will make any order or by-law regarding preserving the peace and good order of the town and maintaining the internal police thereof, particularly the dispersing of crowds from the side walks of the several villages of town.

ART. 5. To see if the town will vote to allow individuals to empty their water closets and privy vaults into the town sewers.

ART. 6. To see if the town will vote to raise and appropriate four hundred dollars for grading and widening the hill on the Springfield road near Three Rivers; also hill on road from Three Rivers to Thorndike near French Catholic church.

ART. 7. To choose all necessary committees and give them instructions.

ART. 8. To hear reports of committees and act thereon.

ART. 9. To see if the town will vote to raise and appropriate five hundred dollars for hardening the road between Blanchartville and Cooley's bridge.

ART. 10. To determine how money for any of the foregoing purposes shall be raised and in what manner the same shall be paid.

And you are hereby directed to serve this warrant by posting up attested copies thereof at the different public places designated by the vote of the town, seven days, at least, before the holding of said meeting, and to cause this warrant to be printed in the Palmer Journal, at least two issues before the holding of said meeting.

Hereof fail not, and make due return of this warrant, with your doings thereon, to the town clerk, on or before the holding of said meeting.

Given under our hands this fifteenth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven.

The Song of the Cook.

I come from haunt of soot and burn,
I make a sudden sally
Another dish to overturn
And throw it down the alley.

I scorch, I spoil, I scold, I smash,
Among the greasy kittles,
I make the queerest kind of hash
And other kind of vittles.

I bid the mistress right about,
When she comes in my quarters,
I entertain my cousin stout
And my sister's daughters.

I send them forth with bundles fat,
Of sugar, tea and flour,
And then I say it is the cat
That steels things by the hour.

And in my trunk fine things I stow
From drawers and dressing-cases,
And wear them boldly when out I go,
With imitative graces.

Till last, some day, I married get,
And do my own housekeeping,
In one small room, with rafters set,
And babies round me weeping.

DANGER IN NATURAL GAS.

Two hundred years ago in China there was just such a craze about natural gas as we have in this country to-day. Gas wells were sunk with as much vim and vigor as the celestials were capable of, but owing to a gas explosion that killed several millions of people, and tore up and destroyed a large district of country, leaving a large inland sea, known on the maps as Lake Foo Chang, the boring of any more gas wells was then and there prohibited by law. It seems, according to Chinese history, that many large and heavy-pressure gas wells were struck, and in some districts wells were sunk quite near to each other. Gas was lighted as soon as struck, as is done in this country. It is stated that one well, with its unusual pressure, by induction of back draught, pulled down into the earth the burning gas of a smaller well, resulting in a dreadful explosion of a large district, destroying the inhabitants thereof. Lake Foo Chang rests on this district. The same catastrophe is imminent in this country unless the law restricts further developments in boring so many wells. Should a similar explosion occur there will be such an upheaval as will dwarf the most terrible earthquake ever known. The country along the gas belt from Toledo, through Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky will be ripped up to the depth of 1200 to 1500 feet and flopped over like a pancake, leaving a chasm through which the waters of Lake Erie will come howling down, filling the Ohio and the Mississippi valleys and blotting them out forever.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

A Cincinnati pastor in announcing to his congregation that he was about to leave for his vacation, added: "During my absence, my brother will occupy the pulpit, and he will take great pleasure in responding to calls, especially funeral calls, from the members of this church while I'm away." The brethren smiled, and will not be anxious to afford the assistant "great pleasure."

A teacher in a Maine Sunday school had been telling her class about Moses, dwelling at length upon his character and desiring to test their attention and memory she asked, "What kind of a child was Moses?" All were silent for a moment, when one little fellow answered up, "I think he was a boy, ma'am."—Bangor Commercial.

The pitcher had a little ball, and it was white as snow, and where the pitcher thought it was, that ball it wouldn't go. It had a sudden inshoot curve, it had a fearful drop, and when the striker wildly struck, that ball it didn't stop. "Why does the ball fool strike us so?" the children all did cry. "The pitcher twirls the ball, you know," the teacher did reply.

"Why haven't I a 600 acre farm as well as that man riding by in his carriage?" yelled a red-nosed anarchist orator as he glanced at the crowd. "Because he saved $600 and bought his farm when it cost him $1 an acre and you poured your $600 down your throat," responded a man on the back seat, and the orator asked no more conundrums.—Chicago Tribune.

Inside points.—"I see," said a friend to the editor of a Dakota daily, "that you call these papers you are printing now the second edition—how do they differ from those you were running off half an hour ago?"

"We have stopped and oiled the press," and the journalist reached for the lever again.—Dakota Bell.

A Columbus lady recently remarked that "some men are always talking about patronizing their own towns—always harping upon their duties—yet they go abroad and get married. I do hope that some of these men who are marrying outsiders will get cheated. The mean things."—Savannah News.

"Have you a magnificent wardrobe?" the manager asked, addressing the actress who had just applied for an engagement.

"Why, no; I've no wardrobe at all. I'm in the burlesque line, you know."

"Oh, I see! All right."—Boston Courier.

A certain amount of opposition is a great help to man. Kites rise against and with the wind. Even a head wind is better than none. No man ever worked his passage in a dead calm. Let no man wax pale, therefore, because of opposition.

A bow-legged man was standing before a stove warming himself. A small boy watched him intently a while and then he broke out: "Say mister, you're standing too near the fire, I guess; you're a-warping."—Exchange.

She—"No; I can't give you another dance. But I'll introduce you to the prettiest girl in the room." He—"But I don't want to dance with the prettiest girl in the room. I want to dance with you."—Punch.

An imitation chamois skin for domestic use has made its appearance. It is woven but feels and looks like the true leather, and, moreover, keeps its softness after wetting.

Now the city chap talks soft sweetness to the country maiden and carves their names and two hearts skewered together on her father's prize apple tree.—Boston Globe.

"I know what kind of a species of bird that thing is," remarked the bumble-bee.

"What is it?" asked his friend.

"The base burner."

She was Almost Starved.

A Desperate and Gloomy Time—Refreshment and Relief—An Experience to be Remembered.

Several years ago I had an attack of bilious remittent fever, which lasted for three months and which left my system exposed to easy infection from malarial poison. From that time I became fully acquainted with that distressing malady, intermittent fever, which put in an appearance each spring, lasting until the next winter.

The fever came on every afternoon with malicious regularity accompanied with a racking headache, pain in the limbs and back, and nausea, at last settling down into chronic malaria.

In the spring of 1879 my physician advised sea air as a tonic, and so I spent the summer in my old home in New Jersey. The salt air did wonders for me—but the old trouble came back the next spring, and I dragged on through the summer, leaving me in the fall in that peculiarly susceptible condition that made the system so sensitive to the slightest changes of the weather—a condition so well known to those who have suffered from malarial diseases, and which made me painfully conscious of the fact that the poison still existed in my system. Of course I took quinine, and lots of it, too, my physician ordering it to be taken in five grain doses. Becoming desperate I doubled the quantity, taking ten or twelve grains at a time. I soon paid the penalty of such daring, in terrific headaches, buzzing in the ears, loss of memory, loss of appetite, and great nervous debility and prostration. I would go for days at a time scarcely eating anything, and at last I could not even drink milk.

Of course, as I know now, this was the forerunner of dyspepsia, which had been an old trouble with me, though I had enjoyed several years exemption from it. Malaria brought dyspepsia back again in full force. Its symptoms were a sense of fullness or weight in the stomach after meals, as though I had been eating cobble stones, and particularly after I had eaten fruit or vegetables. While before meals I experienced a most distressing gnawing at the pit of the stomach. This was so intense at times that I was compelled to eat something to gain relief. My dyspepsia was accompanied with a fœtid breath, nausea, a giddy head and a flushed face as if I had a fever. I took pepsin, soda, bismuth, etc., together with a great many prescriptions, remarkable chiefly for their expensiveness.

My spirits were greatly depressed, I grew timorous and apprehensive; little things worried me. I was fretful and peevish, until I was changed from a light-hearted woman into a gloomy, restless and discontented being, to whom life was a heavy burden of care and pain. I confess that I did not greatly blame physicians because their remedies failed to cure me, from that some fifteen years previous I received a serious injury to my liver from a fall I had, striking across a chair back greatly shocking and bruising that organ, rendering it torpid and weak, and from which it was said by physicians I would never entirely recover.

You can readily imagine that with the complications of malaria and indigestion added to my local injury mine was a very serious condition. Some months ago Kaskine was brought to my notice by a friend who urged upon me its value, and strongly recommended that I try it. "What will be the use," I said. "Not anything will do for me what I need. I have tried almost everything now without result. Nothing short of a new liver will reach my case." I felt indifferent and hopeless, but at length yielding to solicitation I began using Kaskine. In a few days, to my surprise, I felt decidedly better, the old lurking symptoms of malaria disappeared, as if my system was being freed from an incubs that had so long rested upon it. Continuing its use my dyspepsia became less annoying, one after another the afflicting symptoms left me, until I was absolutely clear of dyspepsia. I waited for some of the old trouble to come back—but it did not. A few bottles more of this wonderful medicine were taken and my appetite improved, my spirits grew buoyant, my sleep became refreshing, my stomach and digestive organs generally became strong and performed their functions easily and without discomfort. And as you have seen a June day brightened by the summer storm that swept across the sky, so the cloud left my life, and my health became steady and strong.

As I used no other medicine while taking Kaskine, I can't be mistaken in feeling that my recovery is due solely to the use of that remedy. I would strongly urge upon all those who may be suffering from malaria or indigestion to use Kaskine, and to use it long enough to acquire a healthful habit to the system—as that will be found necessary to a permanent cure.

MRS. J. LAWSON.

P. S.—I will cheerfully reply to any letters of inquire touching upon my case if addressed to me at my residence, No. 141 Bergon street, Brooklyn, New York.

Other letters of a similar character from prominent individuals, which stamp Kaskine as a remedy of undoubted merit, will be sent on application.

The Green Apple Terror.

The green apple in some form will torment us as long as boys are boys. There is but one thing to do, and that is to keep a bottle of Sanford's Ginger in the house, and thus provide a sure preventive and never-failing cure for ills incidental to summer, and to change of water, food and climate.

Sanford's Ginger, compounded of imported ginger, choice aromatics, and French brandy, convenient, speedy and safe, is the quintessence of all that is preventive and curative in medicine.

It is sure to check summer complaint, prevent indigestion, destroy disease germs in the water drunk, restore the circulation when suspended by a chill, and ward off malarial, contagious and epidemic influences.

Faint Heart.

She stood before him, tall and fair
And gracious on that summer's day,
With June's first roses in her hair,
And on her cheek the bloom of May.
But rosy cheek and dimpled chin,
And raven lashes drooping low,
Conceal the answer he would win;
It might be "Yes;" would it be "No?"

Ah, if 'twere "No"—his throbbing heart
Stood fairly still with sudden pain;
And if 'twere "Yes," the world so wide
His deep content could scarce contain.
So wondrous fair; how could she stoop,
To favor such a one as he?
Ah, sweet suspense that still leaves hope!
Ah, pain of sad uncertainty!

He held her hand so white and small,
And moved to press it with his lips;
But changed his mind and let it fall
With chillest touch of finger tips,
And took the seat she offered him
Upon the sofa by her side,
Nor made the space between them less,
Which seemed too narrow, yet so wide.

Then gazing on the perfect face,
The dimpled mouth, the serious eyes,
And drinking in with eager ears
The music of her low replies,
He let the bright hours drift away,
Nor told the secret of his heart,
But when the shadows lengthened lay
Rose, all reluctant to depart.

And stammered forth with blushing cheek,
An eager timorous request,
That she, for old acquaintance's sake,
Would grant the rosebud from her breast.
She gave it him with downcast eyes,
And watched him leave her with a sigh,
"So good," she said, "so true, so wise;
Ah me, if he were not so shy!"

BERTRAND FERMOY'S DISCOVERY.

In a room in a humble street near one of the large London hospitals sat Bertrand Fermoy. Though scarcely over thirty, his chestnut hair displayed many threads of gray; while his handsome face, with its high, broad, intellectual forehead, was haggard and pale from over study, too small care for the body's nourishment, and the canker of a great trouble deep in the recesses of his heart.

One of the walls was covered with rows of books, ancient and modern, chiefly on the subjects of chemistry, psychology, pathology and anatomy.

Close to another had been constructed a small furnace, while under the window stood a large deal table, on which stood retorts, crucibles, and the usual paraphernalia of experimental chemistry,

The only bright spot in the place was in one corner, where stood a clean, low bed, containing a pale, handsome boy of about two years, asleep.

His golden hair streamed in bright curls over the pillow, and one tiny hand was pressed to his rosebud mouth.

It was the only child of Bertrand Fermoy, who sat at the table pouring over a large volume, often making notes, and occasionally watching with much anxiety a crucible in the furnace.

He was on the eve of a great discovery; a discovery that had been the dream of his life; a discovery that would make him the benefactor of his race, and honored among his fellowmen. For the former he toiled. He heeded not the latter.

For thirty-six hours he had not slept.

"Oh, Heaven!" he murmured, abruptly, like the bitter moan made by mental pain, as he passed his hand over his eyes. "What a moment of delight, of unspeakable joy, this at one time would have been to me! Now I work as a creature of habit, even as the blind mill-horse treads his monotonous round. Ambition! I no longer possess it. Wealth! It has no charms. I toil because this has been the dream of my life—because I must—because a stronger power than my own compels me onward! Bah!" he added, irritably; "why do I give way to such thoughts at a time when I need my brain so clear?"

Rising, he bent over the crucible.

Its contents appeared to be progressing to his satisfaction, for he again returned to his seat.

Hardly had he done so, than a moaning cry from his child aroused him.

"What is it, Bertie, my man?" he asked, kindly, though the habitual sadness of his voice was still apparent.

The child did not reply. He had uttered the sounds in his sleep; but after that one glance, Bertrand Fermoy, taking the lamp, knelt eagerly down by the bed.

The little fellow's cheeks were flushed, his lips crimson, his infant forehead contracted with suffering, while his tiny hands were flung restlessly over the coverlet.

The practiced eye of the doctor understood those signs at once.

The fever which had been raging in the neighborhood had attacked his boy.

"Ill—ill, perhaps, unto death!" he cried, rising and throwing up his arms. "Ill, and no mother to soothe—to nurse him! Oh, curse—"

He stopped. The fierce light faded from his eyes. His arms fell to his side.

Notwithstanding all he had to bear, he had never cursed her. He could not even now.

Dropping on his knees by his child's bed, he sobbed bitterly.

As he did so, like a vision the past came vividly back to him.

He saw himself again the country doctor's assistant, with that discovery dimly, but a floating possibility in his brain. He saw it the one purpose of his life; his sole ambition to be the discoverer.

Again he saw himself, at the risk of his life, staying the runaway horses of Alice Kendal, the Squire's daughter; rescuing her from certain injury, perhaps death. For this the Squire, wringing his hand, had called him friend, giving him praise and thanks. But Alice had been more generous, she had bestowed her love on the good-looking, studious doctor, though all the world had said that it was Captain Lascelles's.

He saw once more in that mental vision their clandestine meetings, and beheld the loving pride in her eyes as she heard and entered into his hopes and ambition.

Once more he saw her standing with him under the elms one midnight; he confessing how dear she was to him, yet bidding her reflect before she cast her lot in with his; that she was renouncing family, luxury and comfort, perhaps for penury. He still felt the pressure of her hand as, placing it in his, she had said, "I would suffer that and more for you." Then, with a smile, "Come, love, am I to elope with you, or you with me?"

He had recalled their home, at first so happy, then the birth of their boy; then—the change.

Alice irritable—somewhat, in her fretful moods, mocking his discovery; saying money and ease were better than wasting one's days chasing a will-o'-the-wisp.

Her repining for the comforts she had renounced—the appearance of Captain Lascelles once or twice in the neighborhood—then Alice's flight. Whither?"

Bertrand Fermoy had made no effort to discover, much less to bring her back.

Why, when she hated his presence?

Why, when her love had gone to another?

Only out of his own life had all sunshine departed forever.

Ambition was dead. The feeling merely remained that he must perform his destiny. He must make that discovery.

"Thank Heaven," he had thought, "she has left me my boy."

Fearful, however, that his unfaithful wife might after awhile seek to obtain her child, he had sold his practice, and with Bertie, had hidden away in this poor neighborhood, where he had toiled on, until success and fever had entered his home together. Then all the above passed rapidly through his brain. Then the child's necessity occurred to him; cooling medicines were required.

He rose, and after a careful examination of the crucible, taking his hat, ran downstairs.

In the next street was a druggist's, and to that he directed his steps.

The night was dark, rain was falling, but Bertrand Fermoy was too engrossed with his new sorrow to heed it, or that he was being followed by a woman who glided over the pavement after him. She was thickly veiled, and dressed in rich but dark attire.

When he entered the shop, she watched him eagerly, almost nervously, through the window.

When he came forth she shrunk quickly into a dark doorway. Yet, as he hurried passed, half extended her hand, as if she would have arrested his progress.

But her arm fell down to her side again; she sighed, waited, then flitted away on his track.

Reaching his room, Bertrand Fermoy, pouring the medicine in a glass, knelt down by the little couch. The child was moaning softly. Tenderly the father, placing his arm around the tiny form, raised it.

"Come, Bertie, my man," he said, quietly; "drink this for papa. Bertie will then be better."

The boy opened his large blue eyes with but partial recognition, swallowed the drug, and dropped back upon the pillow.

The doctor had been too occupied to note the sound of a light step ascending; had he, he would not have connected it with himself.

But now, as rising, he turned, he started back with a great cry; for there, on the threshold of the door he had left ajar, was the woman who had followed him.

Even while he gazed as one who regards a spirit, she entered swiftly, and dropping on her knees, threw back her heavy veil.

The face disclosed was beautiful but pale, and the large blue eyes were full of a hungering sorrow.

Extending her hands, she pleaded in musical tones, "Oh, Bertrand, look not on me thus! I am no spirit, but your foolish, erring wife, who at your feet prays for pardon."

"The words aroused him. Indignation blended with scorn in his expression, stepping back, he exclaimed, "Pardon! Hence, woman. Since you left my roof it has been honest. I will keep it so."

"Honest!" she repeated, her large blue eyes opening wide. "Bertrand, I may—nay, Heaven knows I have acted foolishly, wrongfully toward you! But never have I been unfaithful in my love; never have I brought disgrace on your name or on my own."

He burst into a low, hard laugh.

"Your witnesses, madam?" he retorted, bitterly. "Would you bring Captain Lascelles as one? Pray have you tired of him, or he of you, that you are here?"

"Bertrand?"

She had sprung to her feet, as if he had struck her. Her pale cheek was flushed, her eyes brightened; then, in trembling accents, she added, "Oh, Heaven! truly I am punished more than I can bear! Bertrand, Bertrand!"—and eagerly she stretch-forth her clasped hands—"you surely never believed, have never been living all this while under that cruel belief of the wife you once loved. Foolish, selfish I have been; never guilty!"

He laughed again, but his glance wavered. The recollection of his passion for the woman before him began to surge about his heart and brain.

Could she who had laid on his breast—could that pure face, those clear eyes, meeting his in pain not fear, really belong to such a being as he had imagined her?"

Finding he did not answer, Alice Fermoy proceeded more firmly, "Bertrand, not of your love, for that probably is dead, but out of your justice, I ask, I demand of you to hear me. It is not in your nature to judge me unheard."

"I would shut my ears, for women have serpent tongues as well as hearts," he answered, with a cruel bitterness, that struck pain into himself. "But you are here; so speak—I must listen."

"Oh, Bertrand," she murmured piteously, "I have deserved much, but not quite this!"

He did not answer, only bowing his head, for he began to fear his own weakness, and dared not look at her.

She went on.

"Bertrand, as you are aware, I renounced my home for your love, which would have satisfied me, had I not been of a jealous disposition."

"Jealous!" He threw his head up surprised.

"Yes; I was jealous of your studying—your discovery, that took you so much from me. I got fretful in my solitude. I mistrusted this discovery. I saw how much better you might have made our position had you acted like other doctors. I believed that I held but a second place in your heart. The poverty I could have borne with you by my side became hateful. I brooded until trifles became fierce grievances. I began to think you were mad in wasting your time; that something should be done to save you. At this period, when your supposed neglect possessed me, I met Captain Lascelles."

Bertrand Fermoy leaned quickly forward.

"He noted the change in my appearance. He offered sympathy. Blindly I accepted it. I made him my confidant. I found comfort in having an old friend near me, who could talk of my late home and family. One day however, Captain Lascelles threw off the mask. It was the last straw on the camel's back. I felt alone, helpless. To avoid this man I fled from you to my father for protection. I was wrong; but, Bertrand, were you wholly without blame?"

He did not answer; only a sharp spasm contracted his face.

"I found the Hall closed; my father was on the Continent. I followed, and arrived there to fall ill of fever. On my recovery I told my tale. My father wrote to you. The letter was returned to him. You had gone. I believed you were glad to have been rid of a discontented wife. My father delighted to surround me with every comfort, fostered the belief, and, believing my love was dead, I accepted my new life. But"—and Alice Fermoy's tones now trembled slightly—"again I had misread my heart. I soon found the poverty and solitude I had with you were never so hateful as the luxurious ease I now enjoyed. I craved, Bertrand, as a wrecked sailor craves for rescue, for a touch of your hand—to see your eyes gaze on me as once they did. For months in secret I have tried to find you. To-night I have succeeded. Bertrand do you believe what I have told you? Will you pardon—will you take me back home again?"

The struggle within the man was fierce and long, but his sense of wrong conquered.

"Home!" he ejaculated with a harsh laugh, as he glanced around. "Truly, this looks a suitable one for Squire Kendall's heiress!"

"Bertrand, it is not Squire Kendall's heiress, but you wife, who pleads. Oh, have you no pity?"

Unnoticed by either, the child had risen in the bed. Now, extending his tiny hands, he cried, "Mamma—dear mamma!"

"Bertie, my boy!" ejaculated Alice Fermoy, in tones that thrilled the husband.

Swiftly had she darted to the bed. Kneeling there, she clasped the child to her breast, pressing a shower of kisses on his fevered face.

"Great Heaven!" cried Bertrand Fermoy, his whole love rekindled for his wife in presence of her danger. "Woman, you know not what you do! A virulent fever has been raging in this neighborhood, and—and—the boy has it!"

A startled glance leaped into the blue eyes raised to the speaker, but the child was clasped closer yet.

"Our Bertie ill, and you would have hidden him from me? Oh, Bertrand!" she exclaimed, "Heaven has been kind in bringing me here at this time! A mother's place is by her sick child."

"Alice!" cried Bertrand Fermoy, hoarsely, "this fever is fearfully contagious! Put down the boy."

"Not, Bertrand, until I am forgiven. I have no dread of death till then," she rejoined, calmly, firmly.

He trembled with a violent emotion.

"Alice, if what you say be true, 'tis I, not you, to blame," he cried. "Forgive me, my wife!"

She fled to him, and, with a burst of joyous tears, fell on his neck.

"Bertrand," she cried, "hold me to you; let me not go! I have learned a severe lesson. Henceforth, poverty with you, dear, is better than wealth to me, alone."

"Oh, my Alice!" he smiled, fondly caressing her. "But it is not poverty I offer you. No—riches, fame, prosperity; for this night, which has restored a wife to her husband, and a mother to her child, has also brought success to my discovery.

A TEST CASE.

Smith—"Say, Jones, can a man get drunk on beer?"

Jones—"I don't know. Let's try it. Waiter, two beers."

Smith—"Yum! yum! I could drink that all night. Waiter, two beers."

Jones—"Of course. So could I, and be clear as a bell. Waiter, two beers."

Smith—"Why, I am just beginning to get thirsty. We'll try two more. Hi, there, waiter, two."

Jones—"Good stuff. Makes a man feel bright. Lesh have a couple more?"

Smith—"All right Jonesy, jus' you shay. Now have some 'ith me."

Jones—"No, shir, 'smy turn. I'm a gentle (hic) man, I am, an' I pay my share."

Smith—"I shay 'smy turn. You mus' be drunk."

Jones—"Any man says I'm (hic) drunk 'sliar. Only drank little beer. Can't get full'n beer."

Smith—"Thash so Jones. Not possible. Perfectly redic (hic) ulous."

Jones—"Next feller shays a man can get drunk on beer jus' shend him to me."

REVENGE IS SWEET.

A few days ago a lady from San Francisco, who had a very solid bank account, went to Lake Tahoe on a pleasure trip with her daughter. She concluded that she would have a good time and accordingly took along some plain, serviceable clothes and no jewelry. When she struck one of the fashionable resorts she found herself in the midst of a lot of people making a vulgar display of clothes and diamonds, and every time she turned around she was the subject of the most unmerciful snubbing. She was put off in an obscure corner to eat, and not one of the fashionable guests condescended to show her the slightest civility. The lady bit her lips for a few days, took in the situation, and with true feminine instinct decided on revenge. She dropped a line below, and presently there were deposited at the hotel twelve Saratoga trunks, waybilled to her address. She and her daughter retired to their rooms, and that evening came down to the dining-room in a blaze of lace and diamonds that took everybody's breath away. No such gorgeous or tasty toilets had ever bewildered the guests at that hotel before. It blinded the eye to look at the pair as they quietly entered the room. The steward, after recovering his poise, rushed forward and pulled out two chairs from the most fashionable table in the hotel. She shook her head and replied: "The old table will do," and went to the obscure corner, where she had eaten all the time.

The utmost consternation spread through the dining-room, and the low hum of voices rose to a fashionable buzz as they warmly discussed the situation. Wasn't it awful? They had been snubbing a woman and her daughter all the week who could outdress them all. In the evening they attempted to hedge, but couldn't to any considerable extent. The dudes tried to shine up to the girl, but she wouldn't have it, and those who tried to scrape an acquaintance with the mother found it like trying to run a funnel into an iceberg. For a while she flashed like a comet through that hotel into a constant change of ravishing toilets, each more costly and bewildering than the others, until like the kings who pedestrianized in Macbeth, they threatened to stretch out till the crack of doom.

At the end of the week it was learned from the chambermaid that she had only gone through half of her immense Saratogas. There were several women there who had displayed at least a dozen different toilets, and they felt that they would just die if she beat their record. But she kept right on, and when she was three ahead of their score they packed up and left. One by one she vanquished the leaders, and the rank and file capitulated, displaying the rarest generalship imaginable. If Mrs. —— appeared in any special color to make a spread in the morning, she adopted that color at once, only in a dress that eclipsed the other as the sun outshines the dog star.

She was the absolute John Sullivan of the toilet ring, and knocked out all who had the temerity to stand before her. The last of her opponents was a red-faced, vulgarly dressed woman from San Francisco, whose flashy toilets had attracted general attention and admiration from persons ignorant of harmony and color. Whatever dress this woman donned in the morning the fashionable Nemesis was on her trail with a color that literally killed the other. The heretofore cock of the walk was unable to stand her defeat, and, packing her trunks, started home.

The army of snobs was routed, and one by one dropped out of sight. They just settled up and quit. Then the quiet little lady resumed her plain clothes, put on an old straw hat with her daughter and went fishing. As the last gang left she absolutely had the coolness to be down at the wharf fishing in an old calico dress, cotton gloves and straw hat.

The landlord considered that she literally cleaned his place out, and she thinks she had an awful lot of fun.—Carson (Nev.) Appeal.

WHEN ADVERTISING IS USEFUL.

"There's nothing on earth so mysteriously funny as a newspaper advertisement. The prime, first, last and all the time object of an advertisement is to draw custom. It is not, was not, and never will be designed for any other human purpose. So the merchant waits till the busy season comes, and his store is so full of customers he can't get his hat off, and then he rushes to the newspapers and puts in his advertisement. When the dull season gets along and there is no trade, and he wants to sell goods so bad he can't pay rent, he takes out his advertisement. That is, some of them do, but occasionally a level-headed merchant puts in a bigger one and scoops all the business, while his neighbors are making mortgages to pay the gas bill. There are times when you couldn't stop people from buying everything in the store if you planted a cannon behind the door, and that's the time the advertisement is sent out on its holy mission. It makes light work for the advertisement, for a chalk mark on the sidewalk could do all that was needed and have a half holiday six days in the week; but who wants to favor an advertisement. They are built to do hard work, and should be sent out in the dull days when a customer has to be knocked down with hard facts and kicked insensible with bankrupt reductions, and dragged in with irresistible slaughter of prices before he will spend a cent. That's the aim and end of an advertisement, and if you ever open a store don't try to get them to come when they are already sticking out of the windows, but give them your advertisement right between the eyes in the dull season, and you will wax rich. Write this down where you'll fall over it every day. The time to draw business is when you want business, and not when you have more business than you can attend to already.—St. Louis Furniture Trade Review.

Scandal Mongers.

Do you hear the scandal mongers
Passing by,
Breathing poison in a whisper,
In a sigh?
Moving cautiously and slow,
Smiling sweetly as they go.
Never noisy—gliding smoothly as a snake—
Supping here and sliding there
Through the meadows fresh and fair,
Leaving subtle slime and poison in their wake.

Saw you not the scandal monger
As she sat,
Beaming brightly 'neath the roses
On her hat?
In her dainty gloves and dress,
Angel-like, and nothing less,
Seemed she, casting smiles and pleasing words about.
Once she shrugged and shook her head,
Raised her eyes and nothing said
When you spoke of friends, and yet it left a doubt.

Did you watch the scandal monger
At the ball?
Through the music, rhythm, beauty,
Light and all,
Moving here and moving there,
With a whisper light as air,
Casting shadows on a sister woman's fame—
Just a whispered word or glance,
As she floated through the dance,
And a doubt forever hangs upon a name.

You will find the scandal mongers
Everywhere;
Sometimes men, but often women,
Young and fair;
Yet their tongues drip foulest slime,
As they spend their leisure time
Casting mud on those who climb by work and worth!
Shun them, shun them as you go—
Shun them whether high or low;
They are but the cursed serpents of the earth.

NEW REMEDY FOR THE SLEEPLESS.

What disturbs slumber? Noise? Not altogether, for the inhabitants of besieged towns have been known to sleep through the roar of bombardment, and to awaken suddenly when the firing ceased. Millers will sometimes start up from a sleep awakened by the mere stopping of the wheel. The rattle of trains in rapid motion will induce sleep, as all travelers know. The good old deacon who used to sleep regularly through the sermon was sure to wake up at the close. And last, not least, the sleep of infants, the sweetest and soundest sleep of all, is promoted by sound. The popular view, then, that noise disturbs sleep, like most popular views, only touched the truth but does not grasp it. The true cause of disturbance is interruption. Any sudden cessation of the continuity of silence or of sound awakens the sleeper, for sound, provided it be monotonous, has precisely the same effect upon the brain as silence. The simple piece of mechanism, the alarm clock, is based on the theory of interruption, it interrupts silence. Now the English Medical Journal suggests an equally simple contrivance, on the same mechanical principles, but with the reverse object, viz., that of insuring sleep by sound. Its utility, to delicate persons, especially, would be undoubted. Call it the morphic-meter, the somniferant, or give it a French title, and christen it the gardesome or sleep-preserver, its object, by the way, that would truly designate its object, for its real object would be not so much to promote sleep as to insure the sleeper against disturbance (the vulnerable side of light sleepers) by placing a bulwark of sound between him and the sudden shocks of extraneous noise. Let your sleep-preserver produce the drowsy, monotonous buzz of the humming top, not so loud as to be heard in an adjoining room, but loud enough to draw distinct noises when placed close to the bedside or hung over the pillow.—Christian at Work.

A DOG STORY.

An English writer tells the following:—"A family let their house furnished, leaving in it a large dog. The tenant was an old lady, who liked to set in a particularly comfortable chair in the drawing-room; but as the dog was also very fond of this chair, she frequently found him in possession. Being rather afraid of the dog, she did not dare to drive him out, and therefore used to go to the window and call "cats." The dog would then rush to the window and bark, and the lady would take possession of the chair. One day the dog entered the room and found the old lady in possession of the chair. He ran to the window and barked excitedly. The lady got up to see what was the matter, and the dog instantly seated himself in the chair.

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 23, 1887.

TIME works remarkable changes. Here is the Charleston (S. C.) News telling Jefferson Davis that he is a relic of the past, and should hold his tongue.

IF there was any doubt about the triumphant reëlection of Governor Ames, it has been most emphatically removed by the action of the Democratic state convention.

THERE is a well developed movement among Boston Englishmen to become citizens and enter actively into our political life. This is as it should be, and Americans will welcome all such citizens.

ABOUT two hundred men at Philadelphia organized a new party, the American, its principal foundation stones being the restriction of immigration and the refusal of naturalization to socialists of all classes, paupers and criminals.

IT is announced that the condemned Chicago anarchists have unanimously agreed that they will never "cringe and crawl for mercy," and would scorn to ask for a pardon. This decision brings them in close accord with public opinion for the first time in their experience, and nobody will find fault with their decision.

LAST Friday's yacht race between the Volunteer and the Mayflower, to determine which should defend the America's cup, was one of the finest races ever seen in New York waters. There was a spanking breeze, and the Volunteer kept the lead from the start, coming in about sixteen minutes ahead of the Mayflower. The Volunteer was at once selected to race with the Thistle on the 27th and 28th inst. Both boats are being put in the best possible order, and the contest will be watched with more interest than any similar race in many years.

MITTENEAGUE Congregationalists have dismissed their pastor, Rev. E. Hurlbut, because he was so active in temperance work, and also voted for the Catholic priest as a member of the school committee, this being the last straw which broke the camel's back. Under Mr. Hurlbut's 12 years' pastorate the church has prospered greatly, and a large majority of its members wanted him to remain, but an influential minority were bound he should go. It must seem to the world's people, however, that a church is strangely at variance with its principles when it discharges a faithful pastor because of his activity in good works, saying nothing of their unwarrantable officiousness in assuming to control his political action.

PHILADELPHIA has reason for feeling well pleased with the centennial celebration last week. It was a complete success in every respect, the military display being very fine, as the various states sent their best troops. President Cleveland's addresses were patriotic and appropriate, his talk to the business men being especially timely, as a warning against the too prevalent tendency of the solid, substantial business men of the country to neglect even the common duties of citizenship in their distaste for politics. Said the president:

> Must we always look for the political opinions of our business men precisely where they suppose their immediate pecuniary advantage is found? I know how vain it is to hope for the eradication of a selfish motive in all the affairs of life, but I am reminded that we celebrate to-day, the triumph of patriotism over selfishness. Will any one say that the concessions of the constitution were not well made or that we are not to-day in the full enjoyment of the full blessings resulting from a due regard for all the conflicting interests represented from the different states which were united 100 years ago. I believe the complete benefits promised to the people by our form of government can only be secured by an exercise of the same feeling of toleration for each other's rights and interests in which it had its birth. This spirit will prevail when the business men of the country cultivate political thought, when they cease to eschew participation in political action, and when such thought and action are guided by better motives than purely selfish and exclusive benefit.

THE Democrats of Massachusetts have thrown off the mask of reform, and come out boldly and unblushingly as spoilsmen of the most greedy kind. Never before has the doctrine that to the victor belongs the spoils been so boldly proclaimed as in the platform adopted at the state convention of the party at Worcester, Tuesday. The report of the "smelling committee" was a fitting prelude to the platform. Every office holder not appointed by the present administration was set down in this report as a Republican, and an offensive partisan, utterly regardless of facts. Collector Saltonstall and Postmaster Corse of Boston were especially hauled over the coals for refusing the committee free access to their books, and were put down as not in sympathy with the "plain people." The whole tone of the convention and platform is well set forth in this extract from the platform:—

> It being an unquestioned principle that the business of government should be conducted with the same care and policy as personal business matters, therefore we believe that no business can be successfully carried on unless those engaged in its prosecution act in harmony. We believe that no business man would employ, or retain in his employ, any person who was known to be in the interest of a rival who depreciated his business capacity, undermined his credit or disclosed his secrets. We believe that no administration of the government can be successful unless those who are intrusted with the execution of its important affairs are interested in its success, approve of its policy and believe in the principles it represents.

The ticket nominated is as follows:—

For Governor—Henry B. Lovering of Lynn.
Lieutenant Governor—Walter Cutting of Pittsfield.
Secretary of State—J. F. Murphy of Lowell.
Treasurer—Henry C. Thatcher of Yarmouth.
Attorney General—John W. Corcoran of Clinton.
Auditor—William F. Cook of Springfield.

The vote for governor stood 638 for Lovering to 363 for William E. Russell. The delegates to the national convention are:—

Patrick A. Collins of Boston.
James H. French of Gloucester.
John W. Cummings of Fall River.
Josiah G. Abbott of Boston.

A collision on the Midland Railroad in England last Friday killed 22 persons and injured 70 seriously. Five persons were killed Monday by a collision on the Milwaukee and St. Paul road near Dubuque, Ia., and five were killed on the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago road near Sheffield, O.

The Worcester County Musical Association is the fortunate recipient of a gift of $5000 from C. H. Davis of Worcester. This, added to their present fund of $7000, will make a beginning toward a new building for their annual festivals, which have already outgrown Mechanics' Hall.

Sunday was the 100th anniversary of the laying of the corner stone of the capitol at Washington by Gen. Washington.

The route is to Albany by rail Thursday, down the Hudson by daylight Friday, leaving New York Saturday night on the steamer "Pilgrim" for Boston. The round trip fare is only $5, and tickets are good out of Boston any time until Tuesday night, October 4th.

The Palmers went to East Brookfield last Saturday and defeated the East Brookfield nine 6 to 0 in an exciting game. The home team only made two hits off the Palmer's pitcher, and those were given them by tossed balls, while the Palmers made nine hits off Goddard, and in the last three innings struck out so as to catch their train. The club goes to Southbridge to-morrow.

The registrars of voters were in session yesterday at the office of the Palmer mill in Three Rivers from 1 to 3 p. m., at the office of the Boston Duck Co. in Bondsville from 3.30 to 5 p. m., and will be at the office of the Thorndike Co. to-morrow from 2 to 4 p. m., and at the district court room in this village from 6 to 8. At an adjourned meeting of the Daughters of Rebekah Wednesday evening these officers were chosen: N. G., Mrs. L. G. Parkhurst; V. G., Mrs. C. L. Holden; secretary, Miss May Robinson; treasurer, Mrs. J. H. Smith; warden, Mrs. A. A. Converse; conductor, Mrs. W. B. Ham; O. G., Mrs. R. J. Henry; I. G., Mrs. G. B. Kenerson; R. S. N. G., Mrs. C. E. Fuller; L. S. N. G., Mrs. F. W. Bancroft; R. S. V. G., Mrs. Richard Russell; L. S. V. G., Mrs. J. C. Green. The meeting was adjourned for two weeks.

To accommodate the great number of pupils in the high school, twenty new desks have been put in the assembly room, the seating capacity in the assistants' room has been largely increased, and the girls' dressing room has been taken for a recitation room, driving the pupils to the hall with their hats and coats. At present no method of heating this new recitation room exists. Absolutely the capacity of the school building has been reached. "Must" is the only word appropriate in the present discussion of a new high school building.

There was a lively row on the vacant lot corner of Central and Pleasant streets Wednesday night, shouts of "murder" and cries for help being heard. An officer was sent for, but on his arrival the disturbers of the peace fled, one of them tumbling heels over head into the old cellar hole on the lot. He was fished out by the officer, but let go on the promise of his more sober companions to take him home to Bondsville at once. A night in the "cooler" would doubtless have the effect of sending such parties to some other town for their sprees, and Palmer can well spare them.

At the district court last Saturday Michael Haurigan of Bondsville was assessed $10.85 for drunkenness, and in default of payment was sent up. Monday Patrick O'Brien of Springfield was called upon for $7.97 for the same offence, and lacking the necessary funds was also committed. Yesterday W. D. Hynes and C. M. Green of Wales and J. D. Barney of Holland were before the court for illegal liquor selling, there being four cases against Hynes, three against Green and one against Barney. A search was made by officers Healy and Merriam Tuesday, and a keg of whisky found at Barney's and some rum and whisky at Hynes's. The information was furnished by a spotter who has been at work in that vicinity for some time. The cases were continued until next week.

A DARING ROBBERY.

THE THIEF GETS $1500 AND GETS AWAY.

The most daring piece of work in the thieving line which Palmer has ever known was committed shortly before 8 o'clock Tuesday evening, when $1500 was taken from the sitting room of Stillman Ellis on Park street, the thief getting away without leaving the faintest clue. Mr. Ellis is a woolen manufacturer, having his mill at "Sodom," near North Wilbraham, and for years it has been his custom to have his monthly pay roll made up in the office of D. W. Ellis & Bro. in Monson, and brought to his residence here the day before it was to be used at the mill. It was this money which the thief got away with. The money was brought from Monson about 4.45 in the afternoon, done up in a bundle about six inches in diameter and a foot long, looking like a roll of cloth, and was put on the piano with several other bundles. Mr. Ellis's daughter Carrie was very sick up stairs, and about quarter of eight Mr. Ellis was called to her room, the rest of the family also being up stairs. Although not absent ten minutes, he found the money gone on his return. He questioned his daughter Minnie, who had come down with him, and also his wife, but neither knew anything about it. After making a search down stairs Mr. Ellis started up stairs, Miss Minnie starting at the same time for a bed room off the sitting room. When about half way up the stairs he heard his daughter scream, and returning found her lying on the bed room floor with a heavy bruise on her forehead, having been knocked down by the thief, who made his escape through a window. Miss Ellis says that she had turned to come out of the room, when she saw some kind of a movement behind the door, which opened into the room, and remembers no more. There are several things which go to show that the haul was not blundered upon, but that the opportunity had been carefully watched for. The man who brought the money Tuesday was a new man, so it could not have been the messenger, but the money, which was watched. Then at one side of the sitting room is a bay window, where the indications show that a man stood looking into the room, and watching the parcel, as the blinds were open. When Mr. Ellis went up stairs the man slipped in at the side door and secured the package, but, Mr. Ellis returning before he could get away, he slipped into the unlighted bed room as the nearest place out of sight, and when Miss Ellis entered knocked her down and made his escape from the window. As Miss Ellis caught no sight of the man, there is not the slightest clue to work upon, and the thief will probably never be caught.

PALMER'S SHAME AND OPPORTUNITY.

"I'll abandon this town just as soon as my children are old enough to attend its public school," said an active man of business in this village not three days ago. His hearers, earnest lovers of their town, but more ardent friends of education, had no word of remonstrance. It is Palmer's shame to-day that no intelligent parent, seeking a place in which to rear the children that he loves, would plant his home within the limits of this town. Intellectually things are on the move in Massachusetts to-day. By refusing to march to the music of the hour, Palmer is acting as the voluntary executioner of her own best interests. Advantageously located for the placing of homes and business, homes and business have somehow ceased to come, and among the repelling forces, certainly not the least, is the fact that fathers and mothers prefer the interests of their children to those of trade. Materially Palmer's rank is high; educationally few cross road villages are not her equals. Why? Is population deficient? There are seven thousand. Are pupils wanting? They throng our streets and pack our school rooms. Are the teachers inefficient? They are hard working, thoroughly capable, and enthusiastic. Is the school board indifferent? We know of no more earnest body of men. Is the town poor? Palmer is rich. Are the taxes high? On an adequate valuation they are remarkably low. Are the appropriations small? Money is lavished on our schools. Are the people careless? They are thoroughly alive to our educational needs. And yet we have no adequate provision in Palmer for education beyond the grammar grade. Our high school? It is at the same time our pride and shame. It is indeed a glorious thing that in three years the attendance has risen from 21 to nearly 80, but it might have been a hundred. It is fine that six young men and women are fitting for college, but there ought to have been a dozen. It is gratifying that the high school has not only lived, but flourished. It is a disgrace that its associations should all be against it instead of for it. Crowded to an overflow, an intruder in a building scarcely large enough for other demands, destitute of recitation room, without a library, innocent of a labratory, needing philosophical room and apparatus, the high school, good as it is, is but a sickly infant compared with what it might be if decently housed and provided. More than fifty pupils in the school to-day is a disaster to those who attend. All this is not because of indifference, either in private or official quarters. The school's disadvantages are recognized, and the corresponding necessities are acknowledged. The whole question seems to have resolved itself into a matter of local predjudice. This has been of old the enemy of our town. In 1851 the absolute necessity of a fire apparatus was recognized. The want was met in 1886. In 1852 the town was agitated by the question of locating the high school. May it not be that the cycle of time is complete in this matter also, and that patriotic citizens will at length unite in meeting a want whose continuance is disastrous? We have nothing to urge in the location of a new building, but will leave the following facts with our thinking citizens: Number of pupils in attendance upon the high school, from Bondsville, 9; Thorndike, 15; Three Rivers, 5; Forest Lake, 6; Palmer town, 2; Palmer, 40. Total, 77.

BELCHERTOWN.

The farm of the late Capt. Butler Barrett, near the center of the town, is offered for sale by the heirs.

WEST BRIMFIELD.

Rev. Wm. Groves has about completed the repairs on his house, and Thursday evening, by his invitation, a large number of friends assembled to admire their cozy and well arranged home. Mr. and Mr. Bennett and daughter of Ludlow, and Mrs. A. F. Manchester of Windsor Locks, Ct., were present. J. P. Eastman and F. S. King presented Mr. and Mrs. Graves with a hanging lamp, and a purse was raised and presented. Refreshments were provided by the host, and the evening was very enjoyably passed with music and singing.

Last Friday was Edward Neu's 21st birthday, and in the evening a large party of friends surprised him at his home and presented him with a handsome scarf pin and a fine gold ring.

A queer case of justice was shown last Saturday, when a young man in town was arrested for attempted assault upon a boy. The lad was throwing pieces of board across one of the rooms in the mill, and they went pretty close to the head of this young man, who several times asked the boy to stop. Finally he went over and made a cuff at the boy with his open hand. The blow was dodged and the affair was dropped. Imagine the young man's surprise when the next morning an officer appeared with a warrant and took him to Warren for trial. Although witnesses were produced that the boy was not struck, Judge Tyler found the prisoner guilty and fined him $3 and costs, amounting in all to $11.09. In explanation, the judge, referring to the attempt to strike, said: "You might have put out an eye, broken an arm, or perhaps killed the boy."

Miss Mary Feather will sing alto for the Universalists during the remainder of the year.

Rev. Mr. Hatch of Hartford will preach at the Congregational church again next Sunday.

The exterior of the Methodist church is being painted. Wood & Holdridge are doing the job.

Dr. Fuller is laying pipes from his spring east of the village, and will supply water to a large number of houses.

Mark Noble has gone into the coal business, and has commenced filling orders. He has purchased a work team of Stafford parties.

Mark Noble has been confined to his house several days with a severe attack of rheumatism, but is now thought to be on the gain.

W. R. Potter, the only representative of the Grand Army of this town, starts for St. Louis to-morrow, going in company with Wilcox Post of Springfield.

Hereafter the Sunday evening service at Central Hall will be more of a praise service, and sermons will be dispensed with, the pastor giving a 15-minute talk. There will be solo, quartette and congregation singing, George L. Perin's collection of "Familiar hymns and tunes" being used.

At the Republican caucus held Tuesday evening the following were appointed delegates to the several conventions: State, W. N. Flynt, S. F. Cushman, C. W. Holmes, Jr.; councillor, W. M. Tucker, Fred Fay, Rufus Cushman; senatorial, W. J. Ricketts, E. D. Cushman, C. M. Gage; county, A. A. Gage, H. H. Fenton, C. W. King.

The new vestry of the Methodist church will be re-dedicated on Sunday, October 2d. There will be a musical entertainment in the church on the following Monday evening at which the popular soloists, Mrs. Arthur Norcross and Miss Mary Feather will sing. This will be followed on the same evening by a re-opening of the vestry below.

WALES.

Albert F. Pepper is the new stage driver to Palmer.

Elijah Shaw is the delegate to the state convention.

The Frank Gardner farm will be sold at auction next Friday at 2 p. m.

H. A. McFarland, George S. Rogers and David Shepardson are the town committee.

The commissioners have fairly outdone themselves in repairing the "Wales mill hill."

Frank A. Royce went with Springfield Commandery, K. T., on their trip to Portland, Me., Thursday.

H. M. Needham and family have returned to their city home in Brooklyn, N. Y. Mr. Needham while here this season has at his own expense greatly improved several buildings and fences on the main street by painting, etc. Would that we had more of such Needhams.

Officers Healy and Merriam of Palmer, assisted by Constable Thayer of Wales, searched the premises of J. D. Barney in Holland and the houses of Charles Green and Hynes Brothers, Wednesday, for liquors. A keg of whisky was found at Barneys's, and several bottles of liquor at Hynes's, and none was found at Green's, but complaints have been sworn out against Barney, Green and W. D. Hynes for selling.

William Wells, one of the men who were blown up with a blasting charge a few days ago, has been to Boston for treatment for his eyes. He will save both of them and is otherwise quite well, but Louis Patno, the other man, is having a very serious time. His left arm has been amputated, while his right one is fearfully wounded, and it will be a close job to save it. He can see only out of one eye, and his face is in a very bad condition, being filled with powder and dirt. He suffers very severe pain, but hopes are entertained of his recovery. He has a wife and four small children. Papers have been circulated and a handsome sum raised to help him and his family while in this condition. On Wednesday a furniture dealer of Stafford Springs of whom Patno had purchased a $25 chamber set to be paid for in installments, appeared with a constable and demanded the unpaid balance on the set, the bedstead of which the wounded man was lying on. So the wife in tears paid the $7 balance out of the money so much needed to feed her young children, and the constable departed.

THORNDIKE.

D. J. Riley has entered college at Middleboro, Vt.

C. H. Clark has entered the Institute of Technology at Boston.

The rink will be open for skating to-morrow for the last time under the present management, as the rink will change hands after Oct. 1st.

The canal bridge at the "new mill" has been raised this week, and after the stone work and grading is finished it will be a decided improvement.

Mr. Dickson, who has been in J. A. Wright's store for a long time, has accepted a government appointment as consul in the Provinces. Ed. Kelley takes his place in the store.

George A. Hill's Dime Theater Co., which is playing to crowded houses nightly, will appear at Union Hall for a six nights' engagement, commencing the 26th of this month. The company is spoken of as being a first-class show for the money, and they will doubtless draw good houses here.

Last Saturday's ball games were rather amusing, and caused considerable sport. The game on the ball grounds was between the dye house and the machine shop nines; it resulted in the victory of the machine shop team by the score of 12 to 8 in five innings. The other game was at the "new mill," and was between the cloth room and No. 2 card room nines for a box of cigars. The score at the end of eight innings stood 19 to 17 in favor of the cloth room club, and the umpire decided that he and the cloth rooms should smoke. The overseers and second hands of No. 1 mill have challenged the overseers and second hands of No. 2 mill to play for an oyster supper, and arrangements are being made to play in the near future. The "Paper Citys" are expected here to-morrow afternoon to play the regular nine.

BONDSVILLE.

Malaria, with its attendants, fever and chills, is quite prevalent.

The Christian Endeavor society have a basket sociable next Thursday evening.

The schools had their sessions shortened Thursday afternoon in order to permit the teachers to attend the W. C. T. U. quarterly convention.

Representatives of the long distance telephone company were in town Wednesday and decided to locate a test office in the station of the Central Mass. road in this village.

Four young fellows from South Belchertown, while busy "painting the town red" Saturday evening, were received by local officers, who treated them to a midnight ride to the Belchertown lockup.

The annual meeting and election of officers of the W. C. T. U. will be with Mrs. Proctor next Thursday afternoon. A full attendance is desired, and a cordial and urgent invitation is given those who are not already members to join at that time.

About 40 members of Company F of the Loyal Legion, accompanied by some of the parents and several W. C. T. U. women, attended the Hampden county convention at Springfield last Saturday. They took an active part in the meeting by giving songs and recitations. It is only fair to them to say they were the most orderly company there. The little folks had a grand time.

W. C. T. U. QUARTERLY CONVENTION.

The quarterly convention of the Hampden county Woman's Christian Temperance Union was held in the Methodist church in this place yesterday, with a good attendance from Springfield, Westfield, Palmer and other neighboring towns. The church was tastefully trimmed and a bountiful collation served. The program was as follows: In the morning Bible reading by Miss Tobey, roll call, reports, etc. Address to mothers by Miss Tobey, which talk no mother could afford to lose, and must have been to those present like a ray of light upon a dark cloud. In the afternoon an address, "Need of temperance work and how to conduct it," by Miss E. P. Gordon. Her hints were a great help to local unions, and she also told what an important factor the W. C. T. U. is in the United States, not only morally but financially; that at Chicago they are about to rear a building for temperance publications, twelve stories high and to cost $600,000. Very important and helpful papers by Miss Baber and Miss White were read. These papers were especially for the day school teachers, showing them practical ways in which the subject of temperance and hygiene, now required by law, might be taught in schools. A vote of thanks was given the Bondsville union for the hearty and pleasant reception they had given the visiting delegates. All pronounced it one of the most profitable conventions of the year.

As we look down the past century to the origin of our Constitution, as we contemplate its trials and its triumphs, as we realize how completely the principles upon which it is based have met every national peril and every national need, how devoutly should we confess, with Franklin, "God governs in the affairs of men," and how solemn should be the reflection that to our hands is committed this ark of the peoples' covenant and that ours is the duty to shield it from impious hands. We receive it sealed with the tests of a century. It has been found sufficient in the past and in all the future years it will be found sufficient if the American people are true to their sacred trust. Another centennial day will come and millions yet unborn will inquire concerning our stewardship and the safety of their constitution. God grant that they may find it unimpaired, and as we rejoice in the patriotism and devotion of those who lived a hundred years ago, so many others, who follow us, will rejoice in our fidelity, and in our jealous love for constitutional liberty.—*

became president. In the railway mail service about half of the clerks are Democrats, who have been appointed by Postmaster General Vilas himself. So the grand total of the report, that 83 per cent. of the offices in the state are held by Republicans, is materially out of the way, no matter on whose side the fact counts.

The long heads in the convention had sense enough to see that it would not do to allow Patrick Maguire to have his own way and then indorse the Cleveland administration, as they were bound to do, as good Democrats. So Maguire was mollified by putting his spoils doctrine into the platform, and by giving him a chance to make a little speech explaining why he had not forced the attack on the administration, which was expected. It was the speech of the year, especially his warning to Gen. Corse that he might have known from the fate of Gens. Butler and Martin, in their contests with him, what would be his fate also. Maguire had the hearty approval of the convention in his attack upon Corse, and the representative of civil service reform had no sympathy.

Everything done by the convention was an attack on civil service reform and was hostile to the president, no matter what was said in the platform in Cleveland's praise. Lovering has distinctly antagonized the president. Col. French, in his speech as chairman of the convention, gave hard blows to both civil service reform and to the mugwumps. The platform is a bold demand for spoils. The delegates to the next national convention are all anti-Cleveland men at heart, and Judge Abbott is conspicuously so. Of the fifteen members of the state committee at large, all but four are hostile to President Cleveland. So the party has done about all it could possibly do to put itself on the wrong tack and to make certain the election of Gov. Ames by a large majority.

Some of the Democrats have the sense to see what they have done. The Russell men stood for a better candidate and a better cause, but they were outnumbered, almost two to one. He and what he represents were not desired by the convention. On the part of the mugwumps there is uniform hostility to the ticket, and probably not one of them will vote for Lovering. Some of them did support him last year for congress against Mr. Lodge but they will not support him for governor against Ames. I know of several who were ready to say last year that they would never vote for Ames, yet who feel driven by Lovering's nomination to support the Republican ticket, and to do all possible to defeat the avowed opponent of civil service.

One thing appears clear from the convention, that the Democrats who control the cities have control of the party in the state. Western Massachusetts men and country Democrats generally have been of no account. Maguire and his crowd have run the convention, and to-day they are the dominant element in the party.

So far as Republican plans go, there appears no change, save that ex-President Pillsbury is more than ever likely to get the nomination for attorney general. The talk in favor of Col. W. S. B. Hopkins promises to amount to nothing, and Hosea B. Knowlton of New Bedford prefers to keep his district attorneyship until next year, when he can probably receive the Republican nomination to Congress in place of Dr. Robert T. Davis, who is not expected to run again. Some of the ablest Republicans in the party will be in the convention. Senator Hoar heads a strong delegation from Worcester, and ex-Speaker Wade, ex-Congressman Ely and others are in the lists of delegates elected.

A meeting of the anti-saloon Republicans has been arranged for to-morrow forenoon. Lieut-Gov. Brackett has agreed to preside a part of the time. Gov. Ames will also be present, and the temperance men who believe that reform can be best accomplished within the party will doubtless be out in force. The prohibitionists are reported to be making a few gains in certain localities, but on the whole, they will probably show but little advance over last year's vote, though much will depend upon the attitude of the Republican convention. I have written this much on politics because the occurrences of this week will have a material bearing upon the presidential campaign in Massachusetts, and perhaps in other northern states. The grovelling attitude of the Massachusetts Democracy will be liable to hurt the party in other states.

A ministerial conference to consider the best method of temperance reform is proposed for some time next month. It is said that 2000 invitations have been sent out, and the promise is of a large gathering.

By the way, Henry B. Lovering is said to have a Know-Nothing record which will be thrown in his face in the campaign.

HOW UNPLEASANT

it is to see a beautiful child's face disfigured with vile humors, bursting through the skin in pimples, blotches and sores, and sadder still, when the young and innocent are laughed at and twitted in all such cases. Parents should give them that good and pure remedy, Sulphur Bitters, which will search and drive out of the blood every particle of humor.—Health Gazette. 2w25

I have been a great sufferer from catarrh for over ten years; had it very bad, could hardly breathe. Some nights I could not sleep—had to walk the floor. I purchased Ely's Cream Balm and am using it freely; it is working a cure surely. I have advised several friends to use it, and with happy results in every case. It is the one medicine above all others made to cure catarrh, and it is worth its weight in gold. I thank God I have found a remedy I can use with safety and that does all that is claimed for it. It is curing my deafness.—B. W. Sperry, Hartford, Conn.

Some Things Learned by Experience.

That a tablespoonful of salt thrown on a coal fire that is low, will cause it to burn up quickly. That you can clean oil cloth with milk and water; while soap and brush will ruin it. That the skin of a boiled egg is the best remedy you can apply to a boil. That you can't cure Rheumatism or Neuralgia without taking Menard's Rheumatic Bullets. That you can buy them of LeGro & Lynde for $1.00 per bottle. cow7

Advice to Mothers.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of Mrs. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. Mrs. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle. 1y23

IS CONSUMPTION INCURABLE?

Read the following: Mr. C. H. Morris, Newark, Ark., says:

"Was down with Abscess of Lungs, and friends and physicians pronounced me an Incurable Consumptive. Began taking Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, am now on my third bottle, and able to oversee the work on my farm. It is the finest medicine ever made."

Jessie Middlewart, Decatur, Ohio, says: "Had it not been for Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption I would have died of Lung Troubles Was given up by doctors. Am now in best of health." Try it. Sample bottles free at LeGro & Lynde's Drug Store. 5

DON'T EXPERIMENT.

You cannot afford to waste time in experimenting when your lungs are in danger. Consumption always seems, at first, only a cold. Do not permit any dealer to impose upon you with some cheap imitation of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, but be sure you get the genuine. Because he can make more profit he may tell you he has something just as good, or just the same. Don't be deceived, but insist upon getting Dr. King's New Discovery, which is guaranteed to give relief in all Throat, Lung and Chest affections. Trial bottles free at LeGro & Lynde's Drug Store. Large bottles $1. 6

GIVE THEM A CHANCE!

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air passages but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, croup, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else has failed you, you may depend on this for certain. 1y46eow

TOWN WARRANT.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS, HAMPDEN, ss. To George W. Ely, constable of the town of Palmer, Greeting.

In the name of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, you are hereby directed to notify and warn all the inhabitants of the town of Palmer qualified to vote in elections and town affairs to meet at the Town House in said Palmer, on Monday, the twenty-sixth day of September, current, at two o'clock p. m., to act upon the following articles, to-wit:

ARTICLE 1. To choose a moderator to preside at said meeting.

ART. 2. To see what action the town will take regarding the construction of a high school building, the location thereof, and purchasing land for the same.

ART. 3. To see if the town will vote to accept and allow the highway as laid out by the selectmen, to-wit, a highway about 95 rods in length, beginning on road leading from Whipple's bridge to Bondsville, about 12 rods westerly of Central Massachusetts railroad crossing, thence northeasterly over land of E. G. Hastings to road leading past house of E. B. Gates, and also vote to discontinue that portion of the old road leading from near Whipple's bridge to the northerly end of the new road above mentioned.

ART. 4. To see if the town will make any order or by-law regarding preserving the peace and good order of the town and maintaining the internal police thereof, particularly the dispersing of crowds from the side walks of the several villages of town.

ART. 5. To see if the town will vote to allow individuals to empty their water closets and privy vaults into the town sewers.

ART. 6. To see if the town will vote to raise and appropriate four hundred dollars for grading and widening the hill on the Springfield road near Three Rivers; also hill on road from Three Rivers to Thorndike near French Catholic church.

ART. 7. To choose all necessary committees and give them instructions.

ART. 8. To hear reports of committees and act thereon.

ART. 9. To see if the town will vote to raise and appropriate five hundred dollars for hardening the road between Blanchardville and Cooley's bridge.

ART. 10. To determine how money for any of the foregoing purposes shall be raised and in what manner the same shall be paid.

And you are hereby directed to serve this warrant by posting up attested copies thereof at the different public places designated by the vote of the town, seven days, at least, before the holding of said meeting, and to cause this warrant to be printed in the Palmer Journal, at least two issues before the holding of said meeting.

Hereof fail not, and make due return of this warrant, with your doings thereon, to the town clerk, on or before the holding of said meeting.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.—HAMPDEN, ss. PROBATE COURT.—To the heirs-at-law, next of kin, and all other persons interested in the estate of Ellen Rourke, late of Palmer, in said county, deceased, greeting:

Whereas, a certain instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased has been presented to said court, for probate, by Stephen S. Taft, of said Palmer, who prays that letters testamentary may be issued to him, the executor therein named, and that he may be exempt from giving a surety on his official bond as such executor.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Springfield, in said county of Hampden, on the first Wednesday of October, next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, against the same.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof, by publishing this citation once a week, for three successive weeks, in the newspaper called the Palmer Journal, published at Palmer, the last publication to be two days at least, before said Court, and to mail a copy of such notice to each of said Next of Kin who may reside out of this Commonwealth, fourteen days, at least, before said Court.

Witness, William S. Shurtleff, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this seventh day of September, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven.

The Stubtailed Mule.

All up the street at a stately pace
The maiden came with her April face,
And the roses I'd paid for, upon her breast
Where white as the eggs in a partridge-nest,
While behind her—the driver upon his stool—
Tinkled the bell of the street-car mule.

"Going to walk up the street?" I said;
She graciously bowed her beautiful head.
"Then I'll walk too; 'tis a lovely day"—
Thus I opened the ball in my usual way.
"Do you see the car behind?" inquired
The April face, "I'm a trifle tired."

I urged a walk; 'twas a useless suit!
She gently waved her parachute;
The stub-tailed mule stopped quick enow;
I handed her in with a stately bow.
And the bell rang out with a jangled quirk,
As the stub-tailed mule went off with a jerk.

Three men as she entered solemnly rose
And quickly trampled their neighbor's toes;
A dudish masher left his place,
And edged near the girl with the April face,
Who sat on the side you'd call "the lee"
(With the same sweet smile she'd sat on me).

The day was lovely; mild the air;
The sky like the maiden's face was fair;
The car was full and a trifle stale
(Attached to the mule with the stubby tail),
Yet the maiden preferred the seat she hired
To the stroll with me; for I made her tired.

And now when the maiden walks the street
With another's flowers, and a smile so sweet,
I wave to the driver upon his stool,
And stop the stub-tailed street-car mule,
While I purchase a seat with half my pelf,
For it makes me a trifle tired myself.

HIGH AND LOW DEGREES.

It is about an old Scotch minister who was very poor and very pompous. He lived in the old days in Scotland, when, on the payment of a small sum of money, the college of St. Andrews would give a man the degree of LL. D. Now the old dominie had a servant, a faithful man, who had taken care of his bed and his board, his garden and his table for many a year. One day he called upon Jamie to come with him for a tramp to St. Andrews. And Jamie dutifully followed his master to the college and home again, having been a witness to the small negotiations of the two days' absence. On the morning following his return the dominie called Jamie to him and said:

"Listen, mon; if anybody comes here in my absence and asks for the minister you will say: 'The doctor has gone to the kirk,' or 'the doctor has gone to the post,' or 'the doctor is visiting the sick of the parish.'"

"Very weel, sir," said Jamie, "an' may I make bold to ask you a favor, sir?"

"Yes, mon," said the dominie, benignly.

"Weel, sir," said Jamie, "if anybody comes to ask for me, sir, will you kindly say that the doctor is scrubbin' the table or makin' the kitchen fire? I just thought, sir, as the degree was so cheap at St. Andrews, I'd be for buyin' one for myself, too, sir."

Mission Teacher—"Why were Adam and Eve cast out of the garden of Eden?"

Bright Pupil—"Because they ate something they hadn't ought ter."

"The idea is right, but the answer is not correctly worded. Can't you remember, now, what it was that made their Heavenly Father drive them from his presence?"

"Did He send 'em as far away from Him as He could?"

"I suppose so."

"And tole 'em not to come back for a long while?"

"They were prevented from coming back into His presence by a flaming sword. Can't you remember what they ate?"

"Guess it must a ben onions."

TOO MUCH ENTHUSIASM.—"Teaching, to me," said an enthusiastic young schoolma'am, "is a holy calling. To sow in the young mind the seeds of future knowledge and watch them as they grow and develop is a picture greater than I can tell. I never weary of my work. I think only of——" "I am sorry," interrupted the young man to whom she was talking, "that you are so devoted to your profession, Miss Clara. I had hoped that some day I might ask you—in fact, I called to-night to—but I hardly dare go on, in the light of what you——" "You may go on, Mr. Smith," said the young lady, softly. "I'm a little too enthusiastic at times, perhaps."—N. Y. Sun.

Servant, to the parson, who is very ill indeed—"If you please, sir, the chorister is down stairs and wants to know if you won't give him the hymns for next Sunday's service?"

Parson, feebly—"Tell him there will be no service; I expect to be dead before next Sunday."

Servant, exit and re-enter—"If you please, he says then will you be kind enough to send down the hymns you'd like sung at the funeral?" (Parson recovers much more rapidly than chorister.)—Burdette.

"Who is that fellow you were talking to just now?" said a man, addressing young Henley. "I have been introduced to him several times, but don't know his name," young Henley replied. "I live in New York you know, and never become familiar with people." "What does the fellow do?" "He works in my father's store, and I think—though I am not sure—that he is my brother-in-law."—Arkansaw Traveller.

"I have just returned from the ice cream saloon with your daughter, sir, whom I have left in the parlor," said the young man nervously, "and—and—may I say a word to you, sir?" "Certainly, certainly," responded the old gentleman with hearty encouragement. "Go right ahead." "Thanks. I want to ask you, sir, if—if you could lend me five cents to ride up to Harlem with?"—The Sun.

The pitcher had a little ball, and it was white as snow, and where the striker thought it was, that ball it wouldn't go. It had a sudden inshoot curve, it had a fearful drop, and when the striker widely struck, that ball it didn't stop. "Why does the ball fool strike us so?" the children all did cry. "The pitcher twirls the ball, you know," the teacher did reply.—Detroit Free Press.

Out of the Mouth of Three Witnesses One Fact is Established—A Scientific Miracle—Scattering a Fog—Coming Home by Steamer.

Chaplain Hall, of the Albany Penitentiary, writes as follows of the cure of his wife of Nervous Debility and Prostration, and Malaria:

"Under the Kaskine treatment all the dyspeptic symptoms showed instant improvement, and the daily fever grew less and soon ceased altogether. Side by side these diseases vanished, as side by side they had tortured their victim, for ten years, the dyspepsia alone having, as I have said, existed for twenty years. Her appetite improved from week to week until she could eat and digest the average food that any well person takes, without any suffering or incouvenience. With a renewed assimilation of food came, of course, a steady increase in flesh, until she now looks like her original self. She still takes Kaskine occasionally, but with no real need of it, for she is well. I consider this result a scientifice miracle, and the "New Quinine" is entitled to the credit of it, for from the time she began with Kaskine she used no other medicine whatever."

Under date of December, 1886, Mr. David J. Norton, of Albany, N. Y., writes of his cure of chronic Intermittent Malarial Fever:

"Now I come to the real cure and to the end of my story. In the summer of 1886 I first heard of Kaskine. I was struck with its being called "the New Quinine," and the high claims made for it. I didn't believe a syllable of them. Neither would you—in my place. Still there was a chance, and to a chronically sick man any chance is worth taking. "It can't hurt me," I said; "I'll try it." I did try it. To my astonishment and gratification I soon began to improve. Clearly I was getting better. As I continued with Kaskine I seemed to feel the malaria going out of me and health coming back. It was a genuine, scientific healing—not one poison temporarily disguising another. The uric acid with which my system was charged was presently expelled, and my stiffened joints became pliant as before I was ever in the Michigan fogs and miasmas. The indigestion also disappeared, my bowels grew regular, my head clear, my nerves steady, and restful sleep returned, I am now permanently well; have never had any return of malaria—nor any sign of it. Results so real cannot be disputed, and I may fairly attribute them to Kaskine, because, after beginning with it, I took no other medicine."

We quote from Mr. C. I. Titus' account of the recovery of his wife from General Debility and Malaria:

"In the summer of 1886 a friend who had experienced great and happy relief from Kaskine—the New Quinine—said to me, 'Why don't you try it for Mrs. Titus?' 'I will,' I replied. I can hardly convey to you in words the pleasure and surprise we felt at the change for the better wrought by that efficient and potent medicine. It came as the summer dawn comes, stealing noiselessly upon our sight. The disease was rebuked as from a Power that speaks by authority; the system gave clear signs of the approach of health; the appetite improved; food was more rapidly assimilated, and Nature proceeded to rebuild the wasted tissues, and to heal the hurt vitality. A delicate, nervous organization righted itself; the fires of fever went out as Kaskine destroyed the germs which fed them; the digestive processes became more active and natural, and all this was accomplished so rapidly that the waste of over six years was virtually repaired in six months.

As a people we live fast. We are overworked and overworried, so that old age comes upon us while we are yet young in years. We pass sleepless nights, or with a sleep that gives no rest. This is nervous exhaustion. We need a tonic that will restore the brain and nervous system to its natural condition, bringing back youth and vigor. The new quinine, called Kaskine, is the most powerful tonic known, and yet it can be borne by the most delicate stomach, and is admirably adapted to feeble and debilitated females. It removes that tired and depressed feelings, gives a good appetite, makes us feel strong and healthy, and imparts refreshing sleep to the languid and weary.

The full text of the letters from which the above extracts are taken can be obtained by calling upon or addressing The Kaskine Company, 54 Warren street New York, and 35 Farringdon Road, London.

Other letters of a similar character from prominent individuals, which stamp Kaskine as a remedy of undoubted merit, will be sent on application.

The Green Apple Terror.

The green apple in some form will torment us as long as boys are boys. There is but one thing to do, and that is to keep a bottle of Sanford's Ginger in the house, and thus provide a sure preventive and never-failing cure for ills incidental to summer, and to change of water, food and climate.

Sanford's Ginger, compounded of imported ginger, choice aromatics, and French brandy, convenient, speedy and safe, is the quintessence of all that is preventive and curative in medicine.

It is sure to check summer complaint, prevent indigestion, destroy disease germs in the water drunk, restore the circulation when suspended by a chill, and ward off malarial, contagious and epidemic influences.

Beware of worthless "gingers" offensively urged by mercenary druggists on those who call for

A Woman's Love.

A sentinel angel, sitting high in glory,
Heard this shrill wail ring out from purgatory:
"Have mercy, mighty angel. Hear my story!

"I loved, and blind with passionate love, I fell;
Love brought me down to death, and death to hell;
For God is just, and death for sin is well.

"I do not rage against his high decree;
Nor for myself, do ask that grace shall be;
But for my love on earth who mourns me!

"Great spirit, let me see my love again,
And comfort him one hour; and I were fain
To pay a thousand years of fire and pain."

Then spake the sentinel angel: "Nay, repent
This wild vow; see the dial fingers bent
Down to the last hour of your punishment.

But still she wailed: "I pray you let me go!
Oh! let me soothe him in his bitter woe!"

The brazen gates swung suddenly ajar,
And upward, joyous, like a rising star,
She rose, and vanished in the ether far.

But soon, adown the dying sunset sailing,
And like a wounded bird her pinions trailing,
She fluttered back, with broken-hearted wailing.

She sobbed: "I found him by the summer sea
Reclined, his head upon a maiden's knee!
She curled his hair and kissed him; woe is me!"

She wailed: "Now let my punishment begin;
I have been fond and foolish, let me in,
To expiate my sorrow and my sin."

The pitying angel answered: "Nay, sad soul, go higher;
To be deceived in thy true heart's desire
Were bitterer than a thousand years of fire."

CITY RELATIONS.

"Are you sure you've got everything in the trunk, Lili?" said Mrs. Kesley.

"And a blue ribbon tied around the key, so that if you chance to drop it, it will be easily found again?" added Amaranth.

"And the paper of sandwiches and the apple turn-over?" added Verona, who was the practical one of the family.

"It's all right," said Lili. "At least, I believe it's all right!"

She looked fresher than any rosebud in her gray alpaca traveling dress, with the pretty little hat trimmed with artificial pink flowers and the scarf-mantle of black lace. Her eyes sparkled—her cheeks were flushed with a soft color. And why not? Was she not going to the city to visit Aunt Helen and Kate, who had spent the whole live-long summer at the farm?

Aunt Helen and Kate were very nice, Lili thought. They were always saying how much pleased they should be to welcome the Spiceberry Farm people to the city; but somehow they never appointed any particular time for the visit. Mrs. Kesley had once proposed to come in the winter, but Aunt Helen telegraphed back that they had a house full of company, and not a single bedroom at liberty. Uncle Peter and Simeon, the eldest son, had gone up at the time of Grant's funeral, but Kate was very sick, and the doctor had forbidden any one to came to the house. At least so Mr. Wainwright said; but to this day Uncle Peter declares that he saw Kate herself riding on hoseback in Central Park that very morning with an elegantly dressed gentleman, and a liveried groom trotting behind! But, as Mr. Kelsey said, how could that possibly be?

At Spiceberry Farm the Wainwrights had always had the best rooms, the freshest berries, the thickest cream. No matter how much the horses were needed on the woodland clearings, Aunt Helen always had the carry-all when she wanted it. No matter how busy George was with the haying, he was always ready to leave it and escort Kate to any place of interest toward which her fancy tended. And there could be no sort of doubt, argued Mr. Kesley, but that Aunt Helen and Kate would be glad to entertain Lili in the city, while she took a peep at the picture galleries, bought herself a new dress and had the dentist look at her teeth.

If the Kelsey family could, having conquered time and space, have a peep into the breakfast-room of the Wainwrights when Lili's letter reached them, they might have been astonished.

"Coming here?" said Mr. Wainwright, a fair, puffy-faced gentleman. "Here! To-morrow!"

"I never saw such persistency in my life," said Kate, yawning, as she looked darts at the rosetted toe of her bronze kid slipper.

"But we can't have her," said Mrs. Wainwright, impatiently. "Only think of the inconvenience of a country cousin!"

"And the expense of trotting her around town, too!" said Mr. Wainwright. "Can't we get out of it, somehow! Strange that these people can't be taught their place!"

"Just when Mr. Allerton is coming to the point, too!" said Mrs. Wainwright, who looked at affaires du cœur from a strictly business point of view.

"That would make no difference," assented Kate, tartly.

"I'm not so sure of that," said Mrs. Wainwright. "The child has a plump, milk-maid sort of beauty; and men are so fickle it is best not to run any risk."

Kate laughed scornfully, and turned her dimpled hands around so that the sunlight should flash on her rings and bring out their corruscations of blue and emerald flame.

"I have no fears of that sort," said she; though I don't want the trouble of her any more than you do, mamma."

"Something has got to be done about it," said Mr. Wainwright, rumpling up the fringe of iron-gray hair that grew around his bald head, as one sometimes sees a circle of rushes growing around a colorless pool in the woods.

"I've got an idea," said Kate suddenly. "Let's pack up and go to Newport on the afternoon boat, and papa can go to stay at a hotel. We can make her believe that our plans were all made before her letter came. Maria can cover up the chandeliers and tack the crash over the carpet, and close all the blinds with newspapers, as if it was an old arrangement; and I'll wager a box of No. 5 kid gloves that our country cousin will make no very extended stay. As for us, we shall be at Newport in time for Nellie Mordaunt's tennis breakfast and the croquet tournament, and we can easily return at the week's end."

"Capital!" grunted Mr. Wainwright.

"Yes, I think it will do," said Mrs. Wainwright, meditatively.

So the house presented but a dull appearance when the hack left Lili Kesley at its door. Maria, a wrinkled old woman, stared at her with curious, lack-luster eyes.

"The family has gone to Newport," said she.

"Gone to Newport!" echoed Lili. "Didn't they expect me?"

"I dunno nothin' about expectin', said Maria. "They've gone. That's all I know."

"But—" gasped the child, "what am I to do?"

Maria eyed her with a flashy glance.

"Well," said she, "I guess you can come in and make yourself comfortable. You're the country cousin, eh?"

Lili colored.

"Is that what they call me?" said she, involuntarily.

Maria nodded. Her wages were three months in arrears, and Miss Kate had given her a scolding because her white peignoir had a scorched spot on the ruffle,—and Mrs. Wainwright had incidentally mentioned that the next time the milkman was found flattened behind the furnace-room door, Maria should be "sent packing" with a policeman by way of escort.

"Oh, yes," said she, "they calculate you won't stay long, if you find the house shut up. I'm to cook supper for you. I hope you like salt mackerel?"

"N—not very much," said Lili, faintly.

"Because there ain't nothin' else for supper," said Maria, scratching her nose.

The tears came to poor Lili's eyes as she crept spiritlessly into the house. There was only one daily train to the vicinity of Spiceberry Farm, or she would instantly have returned. As it was, she knew that she must perforce remain all night under this inhospitable roof.

She did not unpack her trunk. She only washed the railway dust off her face and hands, brushed out the yellow, crinkly curls that were so like spirals of sunshine. She would have sat in the little hall bed-room to which Maria conducted her, if it had not been so terribly warm, and the odor of the frying mackerel had not made her sick. As it was, she crept down to the front steps and sat there in the sultry twilight. People sat on their steps in the neighborhood of Spiceberry farm,—why not here?

Presently a tall, well-dressed gentleman came down the street,—glanced up at the steps,—went a little way further, and then paused and looked around. In a minute he came back and paused at the foot of the flight.

"Kate!" he said, lifting his hat from a mass of wavy-brown hair, "is that you? I beg your pardon, but it is so dark I can not see."

Lili jumped up.

"No," said she; "I am Lili Kesley. My cousin has gone away."

"But you are crying," said Hadley Allerton. "What is the matter? Has anything happened? Can I be of use?

"Oh, I want to go home!" sobbed Lili in a sudden influx of home-sickness, as she burst into a fresh torrent of tears.

Hadley Allerton came up the steps. It was not in man's nature to resist grief like this.

"You must be Lili," said he. "Tell me what troubles you. I am an acquaintance of Mrs. Wainwright. My name is Allerton."

Lili took him into the parlor. She could not light the gas, for the chandelier was tied up in a bag of Holland crash, but she called to Maria to bring a candle.

That functionary, who came upstairs in a sort of movable atmosphere of salt mackerel, fumbled in her pocket.

"There was a note I was to send to Mr. Allerton yesterday," said she, "and I clean forgot it until this moment. Here it is now."

Mr. Allerton took it, but he was too much absorbed in comforting this poor little shipwrecked damsel to do anything but thrust it into his pocket—for the present, at least.

"Miss Kelsey, don't cry," said he. "I know its awfully dreary here, and the smell of this damaged salt fish is enough to drive any one wild. But I am your aunt's friend—"

"Oh, yes!" said Lili, with brightening eyes. "I have heard her speak of you."

"So you and I will go to Delmonico's and get our supper," said he; "and then we will finish the evening at the Casino, and see the new comic opera. Maria, get your bonnet; you shall accompany Miss Kesley, so that you need not feel in the least timid or lonesome. And, to-morrow, Miss Lili, I will take you back to your father's house. I think the Wainwrights placed you in a very unpleasant situation, and I mean to see you safely out of it."

Once more Lili's eyes sparkled.

"Ah," she cried, "how kind you are!"

And Maria, grinning all over, left the mackerel to its fate, and hastening to make herself gorgeous for what she called "an evenin's pleasurin'."

Between Delmonico's, the Casino, and Mr. Allerton, Lili thought she was in fairyland. She dreamed of all three at night, and the next day Hadley arrived, bright and early, to escort her to the train.

"The very weather for an expedition to the country," said he, cheerily.

At the week's end the Wainwrights returned. The tennis breakfast and the croquet tournament had turned out a failure. Mrs. Wainwright was out of spirits, and Kate decidedly cross.

"Dear me! how dusty and neglected everything looks!" said the latter. "I don't think Maria has kept the place decently clean. Well, Maria," as that personage answered her repeated peals on the bell, "did the country cousin go home?"

"Yes'm; the next mornin'," said Maria, wiping her soapy hands on her apron. "And Mr. Allerton he went with her. To see her safe home, he said."

"Mr. Allerton!"

And then Maria related, with "ghoulish glee," the story of Delmonico's, the Casino, and her own share of the treat.

"There!" said Mrs. Wainwright. "We might have known that something of the kind would happen! Those country girls are so pushing!"

"I don't care!" said Kate with a burst of hysterical tears. "I wish I was dead! I just do!"

"Hush, my dear," said Mrs. Wainwright. "You are tired and weary with traveling."

"So was poor Miss Lili," said Maria, shrewdly. "Bless me! how sorry Mr. Allerton was for her!"

"Maria, hold your tongue!" said Mrs. Wainwright. "We had better send our card to Mr. Allerton at once, dearest."

Maria took the card after tea, and brought back the unwelcome message that "Mr. Allerton has gone down into the country and has not returned."

When he did return, however, his first call was at Mrs. Wainwright's house.

"Truant!" cried Kate, with a playful smile.

"Congratulate me," said Allerton, radiantly. "I am engaged to the sweetest girl in the world—your cousin, Lili Kesley."

There was a great deal of the Spartan boy about Miss Wainwright—she called up a galvanic smile to her lips, and murmured an indistinguishable something which might answer for congratulations, or anything else.

While little Lili, at home, was beaming like her garden namesake in the sunshine.

"And it all came from my visit to my city relations," said she.

"No thanks to them," said Amaranth, curtly.

"I don't believe they'll visit us again," said Uncle Peter, chuckling.

He was right. They never did.

A PATHETIC INCIDENT.

Mrs. Merriam Grant, one of the people wounded in the Chatsworth disaster, was in the rear car with her husband. In this car was a party of six people. In order that they might sit together, Mr. and Mrs. Grant changed seats with a young man and his bride. Their courtesy saved their lives, for the young couple were both killed. Mrs. Grant thought this party were theatrical people or concert singers, they were so jolly and sang so well. They could sing, and they laughed and told stories and anticipated the pleasure of the trip until late at night. Then Mrs. Grant composed herself in her chair and covered her face with her handkerchief to go to sleep. Nearly everybody in the car was quiet but the jolly party of six. About this time the young bride was requested to sing "Nearer, My God, to Thee." Something in the desire to sleep and rest recalled the sweet old song. The young woman sang and all listened while the train sped on.

As the little gleam of devilish fire appeared far down the track their voices swelled in:

"Yet in my dreams I'd be,
Nearer, my God, to Thee."

The speed of the train increased down the grade. Again the song swelled:

"There let the way appear, steps up to Heaven."

The way was already in sight.

"All that Thou sendest me, in mercy given,"

And then with but a moment of life left for each, even when poor Ed McClintock's hand was giving its last desperate wrench to the throttle of his engine the singers sang to their God, who seemed not to be holding them in the hollow of his hand,

"Angels to beckon me,
Nearer my God, to Thee."

Enough. It was finished. The engines struck the frail bridge and it sank. The car containing the singers crashed like a bolt of Jove through the two cars in front of it, killing and grinding as a foot kills a worm. In the same instant another car crashed through it and the singers were dead.

THE BOOKWORM'S BRIDE.

A former old bachelor of Spruce street, New York, employed an old woman to take care of his rooms. The work of arranging and dusting the library led Martha to be smitten with a taste for reading. She began to spend all her earnings in buying books. Not long ago she entered the library with a parcel of books picked up at a book stall. Her employer seizing one of the books, exclaimed:

"How much did you give for this?"

"Thirty-cents," replied Martha.

"Thirty-cents! Why this book is worth $3000," cried the collector. I will give $5 for it."

"You have just told me it is worth $3000. I will not sell it for less."

The book was a first edition, extremely rare, of Montaigne. The servant would not take less than $3000. This was more than the bookworm would agree to give for it. He thought the matter over for a mouth. Finally he said to himself:

"This woman takes good care of me. She seems to have the same passion for old books that I have. Why should I not marry her? I should then have my Montaigne."

He popped the question, was accepted, and the old servant brought him the book by way of a dowry.

"I wonder what makes those buttons burst off so?" exclaimed a lady, petulantly. "Force of habit, I should think," he said softly.—Hartford Courant.

The Guest.

He came unbid, I know not whence;
This wondrous guest, unknown before;
All silent and unseen he came
Within my door.

He gently heals my lifelong pain,
He charms the frequent tears away,
And all my grief from me beguiles,
And still will stay.

Sweet thoughts arise and eager climb,
Like birds that sing in upper air,
The song that close to heaven's high gates
Becomes a prayer.

Yet half I fear his tender wiles;
Oh, tardy love, too late delayed!
My coward heart shrinks back in doubt,
And hides, afraid.

And fain would trust, but questions still;
Too late delayed! too long forlorn!
Can night so darksome break so soon
To such fair morn?

Not for pale brows and faded hair,
Oh, love, do thy red roses blow;
Take back thy crown, I weeping cry—
He doth not go.

But lingers still and lingers yet,
And bears him in such winning wise,
Such holy benedictions shine
In his dear eyes.

I can but trust, I can but list
The winged hopes that softly sings;
Canceled at last mine ancient wrong,
And love is king.

NORAH.

She was sitting dejected and tired looking on the benches of the intelligence office, hushing a crying babe in her weary arms, when some ladies came in to look for a girl.

She saw them glance at her, and heard what the woman who kept the office was saying:

"A widow—husband died of ship fever coming over—wants to keep the child with her."

She could not help hearing this, for every sense was alert and strained, nor the comments of one of the ladies.

"She looks strong enough to do my work, but the child is a nuisance. Can't she give it away?"

She heard, and clasped the little one to her in a more eager embrace.

"You might try her," the woman was saying; "she is not young or giddy, and losing her husband so lately, and having the care of her child, will keep her steady."

"Y-e-s! I've a great mind to try her. There's a little room off the kitchen where she could keep the child. What did you say her name was?"

"Norah."

"Norah, would you like to try a place with me?"

The lady's voice was pleasant. She had a light, cheerful face, was young, and looked happy and prosperous.

"I would, ma'am, indeed, and I'll try to keep little Mary as quiet as I can, so she won't disturb you."

"You see I have children of my own, Norah,—three of them,—and you will have to help take care of them."

"I will, ma'am, only try me."

So pretty Mrs. Weeks took home the strange woman who had come such a long way, only to find a home with strangers in a strange land.

Norah was deeply thankful for this opportunity. A home for herself and that poor unwelcome baby, who had no friend in the world but its mother.

The new girl did her work well, and Mrs. Weeks declared to her friends that she had found a treasure.

"But," she added, "we must get rid of the baby."

For it cried nights and disturbed Mr. Weeks.

And several times Norah had been obliged to leave what she was doing, and hush it to sleep.

Mrs. Weeks never tonched it.

"Its father died of ship fever," she said; "there's no knowing but some contagion may cling to it."

For that reason she did not allow her own children to play with the poor little stranger.

A scheme was maturing in her mind; she was a woman with benevolent propensities—public ones, that got into the newspapers occasionally.

"I'm going to send Norah's baby to the children's hospital and pay for its keeping," she said, much as if she were designing a new world.

Norah heard her. She was singing under breath a sad bit of song, the refrain of which was "When the sea gives up its dead."

She went into the little catch-all of a room, where her baby was asleep in a clothes-basket.

"She is like our blessed Lord," she said, as the tears dropped on the sleeping face; "He had not where to lay His head."

She made no outcry when Mrs. Weeks told her of her plan; indeed, how could she?

The child would be well cared for there, better than she could for it; and after she went to the place and saw the pretty white cots, the pictures on the walls of Christ blessing little children, and the kind nurses, she tried to be content. "Perhaps He will suffer her to come to him," she thought, arranging in her own mind a text she saw there.

My own opinion is that a child is better off in a kennel with its mother, if she loves it, than alone in a palace of comfort.

Norah could do twice as much work without her baby, and she did it. She was neat, diligent and obliging, and she never went out except on the day she was permitted to visit the little hospital.

It was a hot summer. The baby faded like a plucked lily. Norah herself was faint and weak from the excessive heat, unlike anything in that cool, green isle, which we are told is "fair as the smile of God." It was all she could do, to cook and work and take care of the children, as well as to bear her own burdens.

But she distinguished herself by excellence.

"They also serve who only stand and wait." Whatever she did was well done. The family soon leaned on her as a sure and safe prop.

One afternoon she appeared before Mrs. Weeks with a hurried request to go out.

"This is not your afternoon out," said that lady, quietly. She was making a lace cap for her youngest child, a sweet little girl, and poised on her hand it looked a dainty thing. "You know, Norah, one of the reasons why I keep you is that you are not always wanting to go out. I hope you are not going to disappoint me."

"No, ma'am," answered the girl, respectfully, "I will not; but they've sent me word from the hospital that Mary is worse, and my work is all done up."

"Nonsense," answered her mistress shortly; "I saw her yesterday, and she was as bright as she could be. Besides, I am going out myself. I expect my sister every moment, and we will not be home until evening."

Norah's head drooped. Her fingers clutched her apron to still the agony in her heart. Mrs. Weeks was getting ready now to go.

"You must not leave the children a moment, Nora," she said as she went; "little Arthur is quite feverish. I would not trust him with any one but you. And I'll tell you, Norah—you can go and see your baby the first thing in the morning."

So she did. There was a white cloth spread over the little cot. When she turned it back with frantic haste, she looked on the face of an angel!

All this happened some time ago. Norah is still with Mrs. Weeks, still the patient, faithful drudge, who is "so faithful" and "never goes out."

When the day is over and her work is done she goes into her little room and closes the door.

It is her Gethsemane.—Mrs. M. L. Rayne in Detroit Free Press.

THE DOCTORS DISAGREE.

As an illustration of the old saying that "doctors will differ," the following is related by a physician of unquestioned veracity, says a London paper: "In the course of a lecture which he was delivering before a number of students, he had brought in by the mother a child six months old, which was suffering from a very peculiar affection—one seldom seen in this country—and he requested five of the students present each separately to diagnose the case.

The first gave it as his medical belief that the child was suffering from incipient pneumonia; the second, after examination, pronounced it incipient diphtheria; the third staked his reputation upon its being peritonitis, the fourth called it mirasmus, while the fifth said it was "malaria." When they had each made a careful examination the lecturer said:

"Well, gentlemen, have you anything further to say in regard to the case?"

"Nothing more than already has been said," was the reply of each.

"Well," said he, taking the little one and holding it up before them, "this is a child that has never had a day's sickness since its birth. It is the most perfectly healthy child that I have ever seen."

AN ABSENT-MINDED DOMINIE.—One of the most absent-minded of men, a most worthy minister of the Gospel, lived and died not long ago in a town not far from Concord. He once called on a lady parishioner, and invited her, with characteristic politeness, to go to ride. She accepted gladly, and "fixed up," only to find, when the dominie reached her door, that he had made his call on horseback, and that his chaise was at his home a half-dozen miles away. One morning the loafers on the piazza of the village store were dumbfounded to see the parson come out of the barn with the halter dragging from his hands folded behind his back, pass slowly down to the brook, then turn and look at the horseless halter and hasten back to the barn where thirsty old Dobbin in his box stall was pitying his kind, forgetful old master.—Concord (N. H.) Monitor.

In Petosky, Mich., a lady rubbed phosphorus on her bunion, presumably, to ease the pain, and then retired to her downy couch. Along in the night her husband, who was a drinking man, by the way, thought he saw a fiery eye looking at him. He imagined that he saw the frightful winged monster with one blazing eye staring at him, and afterstanding it as long as he could he decided to kill it. Slowly he reached under the bed until he found his boot-jack, and after spitting on his hands, he whaled away. The next moment his poor wife gave a yell that nearly lifted him out of bed, but when he found out the true state of affairs, he was immensely relieved, even though his wife has been obliged to walk on crutches ever since.

A CHILD'S GRIEF.—Children are sensitive plants in the human garden. Touch them roughly and they shrink from you. Few of us appreciate the depth of feeling they possess.

At the Wednesday night concert in Grand Circus park last Wednesday evening, a gentleman noticed a little girl crying.

"What is it, little one? he asked."

"It's the music," said the child sobbing. "I don't like to hear the band play, cause my little sister's dead."

"A BAG WITH HOLES."—What has become of the billions of dollars in this country paid to the working classes? Some of these moneys have gone for house rent, or the purchase of homesteads, or wardrobe, or family expenses, or the necessities of life, or to provide comforts in old age. What has become of other billions? Wasted in foolish outlay. Wasted at the gaming table. Wasted in intoxicants. Put into a bag with a hundred holes!—Dr. Talmage.

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 30, 1887.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND starts to day on his three-weeks' trip through the West and South, accompanied by Mrs. Cleveland, Col. Lamont and two personal friends of the president.

THE New York supreme court has unanimously confirmed the conviction of Jacob Sharp, the briber, but Chief Justice Ruger of the court of appeals has granted another stay of execution until October 6.

MICHIGAN has a new local option law which went into effect Wednesday, and under which one-fifth of the voters of a county may apply for an election to determine if liquors shall be sold in the county.

THE state civil service commissioners have scored a point in their claim that under the soldiers' exemption law veterans must still apply to the commissioners for certification for appointment, even if without examination, their claim haing been sustained by the supreme court.

NEW YORK Democrats came near having a split in their state convention at Saratoga this week, on the civil service question, but a compromise was finally adopted, favoring a submission of the reform question to the people. Democracy and reform seem to be mixing poorly in this year's conventions.

FOR the first time in 21 years the Asiatic cholera has crossed the Atlantic, the steamer Alesia, which arrived at New York from Marseilles last Thursday night, having several cases on board, while eight of her passengers died of the disease on the passage. Vessel and passengers are detained at quarantine, and there is little danger of the plague reaching land.

THE U. S. circuit court has decided against the government in its suit for the setting aside of the Bell telephone patents, the court holding that the government has no authority of law for bringing a suit to set aside this or any other patent. This was the suit generously undertaken by the administration for the benefit of Attorney General Garland, who is, or was, a prominent member of the Pan-Electric Telephone Co., which would have been greatly benefited by a favorable decision.

AMERICANS can but feel highly gratified with the result of the first race between the yachts Volunteer and Thistle, in New York Bay, Tuesday. The breeze was very light, just the kind in which the Thistle was understood to excel, but though she crossed the starting line first the Volunteer soon passed her, and the race became a procession, the Volunteer coming in some two miles ahead, and beating the Scotch cutter 19 minutes and 23¾ seconds. The second race was to have come off yesterday, but was postponed until to-day, on account of fog and a calm.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY WATERMAN'S promotion to a position on the state ticket will open the way soon for the choice of a new prosecuting attorney in this district. It is suspected that an effort will be made to carry out a little arrangement made some time ago, whereby Berkshire county was to fall in line solidly for Lawyer Brooks of Holyoke for this office, when the time came, and it is interesting to note, in this connection, that as soon as Mr. Waterman's nomination at Boston was announced he hastened to pay a friendly visit to Brother Brooks. These little arrangements are not always sanctioned by the voters.

THE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

Two hundred and forty delegates were present, according to the credentals, at the state convention in Tremont Temple, Boston, on Wednesday, though the largest number voting was 835. The knowledge that the old state ticket, with one exception, would be renominated, detracted from the interest in the convention's doings, and it would have been a very tame affair but for the unexpected turn of affairs in the nomination of a candidate for attorney general. Everybody expected that A. E. Pillsbury of Boston was the coming man for that office, and the informal vote showed 384 votes for him to 297 for A. J. Waterman, and 132 for F. T. Greenhalge. While this vote was being counted many of the eastern delegates went out for lunch, and there was where they missed it, for the expected recess did not follow. A formal ballot was ordered, the Western Massachusetts men put in some effective work, and the result was as follows:—

Whole number votes	646
Necessary for a choice	325
Fredrick T. Greenhalge had	56
A. E. Pillsbury,	251
A. J. Waterman,	339

Three rousing cheers were given when the ballot was announced, and the nomination was at once made unanimous. The other nominations were made by acclamation, and the ticket, complete, stands as thus:—

For Governor—Oliver Ames, of Easton.
Lieutenant-Governor—J. Q. A. Bracket, of Arlington.
Secretary of State—H. B. Pierce, of Abington.
Treasurer—Alanson W. Beard, of Boston.
Auditor—Charles R. Ladd, of Springfield.

Chairman Burden urged the importance of organization, and Congressman Rockwell devoted his address, which was listened to with close attention, to national affairs, saying that the Republican administration of the state cannot be assailed, and needs no defense. The platform, aside from its treatment of national affairs, pledges the party to the maintenance of the present civil service law of this commonwealth, advocates the continued enactment of progressive temperance measures by the Legislature, renews last year's recommendation of the submission to the people of a prohibitory amendment, depreciates any attempt to array labor against capital, and has a ringing sentence in defense of common schools and their maintenance free from all partisan and sectarian control.

Birdie Danahey, the little Amherst girl who mysteriously disappeared last April, was drowned in Fort river, according to a confession just made by her companion, Carrie Train, a stubborn child now in the industrial school at Lancaster. She says Birdie accidentally fell into the swollen river, but she did not tell of it for fear she would be charged with pushing her in.

Gen. Henry S. Briggs, the first colonel of the old 10th regiment, died at Pittsfield last week Thursday, aged 63 years.

UNIVERSALIST CONVENTION.

Twenty-Eighth Annual Meeting of Massachusetts Churches.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES, THE ANNUAL SERMON, ETC.

The eighth annual meeting of the Massachusetts Universalist convention has been held in St. Paul's church in this place this week—Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. The entertainment committee had made arrangements for 300 guests, and had fully that number to provide for. The exercises commenced at 2 p. m. Tuesday, the church being well filled. The convention was called to order by Rev. Dr. Richard Eddy of Melrose, Rev. G. H. Emerson leading in prayer. A report of the session of the convention in Gloucester last year was read by the secretary, Rev. W. A. Start of Cambridge, and a committee appointed to examine the credentials of delegates, some 200 being in attendance. Rev. C. R. Tenney of Stoughton was appointed assistant secretary to help Mr. Start. The Lord's supper was then celebrated, Rev. F. W. Betts of Palmer and Rev. E. L. Houghton of Springfield conducting the services. The report of the fellowship committee followed, being read by Rev. Edwin Davis of Quincy, the secretary. It showed that twelve meetings have been held during the year, and that by that time there had been no case of withdrawal, resignation or discipline. There have been 13 licenses granted, one approved, one given to a lay preacher, two ordinary councils called and one held, seven letters of fellowship granted and six transfers allowed. There has been only one death among the members during the year, Rev. Dr. John Greenleaf of Boston, on May 4th, aged 76. He came from Ohio, and has been a member since 1876. Rev. E. B. Burger of Wakefield had also died, but was not a member of this fellowship for some of years.

The treasurer's report showed that at the last report there was $6377 on hand. The receipts for the year have been $10,378. The expenditures have been—For missions, $6066; relief fund donations, $275; permanent funds, $51,344.

The report of the executive committee was read by Rev. W. A. Start. It showed a marked improvement in all branches of the department's work in this state. The contributions from parishes in the past 12 months have been $4573, Palmer giving $45. The ministerial relief fund has received $153, and $1474 have been collected from other sources, making a total of $6532. A legacy of $1800 has been received from Robert Fears of Gloucester, which has been set apart as the "Robert Fears Mission Fund." A large amount of encouraging missionary work has been done in the past year. Several churches have been repaired and remodeled, and a new one will probably be built soon at Monson. New churches have been erected at Fitchburg, Norwood and Attleboro, at a cost of $78,000. There are 12 branches of the Woman's Universalist Missionary society, 8060 families attend public worship, an increase of 228, and there are 6040 church members, an increase of 119. A new church has been established in South Acton of 25 members. There has been an increase of 161 members in the Sunday-schools, making the total now 14,757. The entire church indebtedness has been lessened $7386 the past year, 19 churches having either reduced or paid their debt. There have been 267 persons added to the churches from the Sunday-schools. The society has one college, one divinity school and one academy devoted to the spread of Universalism.

The annual sermon in the evening was preached by Rev. George L. Perin of the Shawmut church, Boston. He took as his scripture lesson the first part of Acts xix, relating Paul's address to King Agrippa, and took his text from Luke xvii: 7-10. He said the passage was a hard one for us to apply to ourselves. We do not like to conceive of our relations to God as like those existing between a servant and a hard task master, yet throughout the gospels we find Jesus referring in this same way to the hard duties that a Christian may be called upon to perform. The life of a Christian is represented as hard by Christ himself. Jesus sets out to teach us the necessity of hard service in the Christian course. Let us look at our lives without flinching and find out what we are and in what we fail. Our theme to-night, then, will be the kingdom of God, its exacting nature and the demands it makes on us. If Jesus gave us strict rules we must remember that he carried them out in his own life. He shrank from no duty, fled from no temptation or trial, and failed not to do whatever his soul told him was right. Nothing in this world was ever done except by persistent effort. There are Christians who believe in that sort of religion which is satisfied with one hour a week of spiritual culture. The day on which it comes must also be fair and the hour itself be short. We are very apt to let Christian work be done simply by moral machines. We have asylums for the blind, the deaf and the insane. We have hospitals for the sick and institutions for other purposes. Schools do the work of education and the government is a vast machine, called upon for many purposes. So it is with Christian work. Fathers and mothers very often leave duties, which formerly were done at home, to the church and Sunday-school. Fifty years ago the boy and girl were taught the catechism and Bible at home. Now the parents think their work is done if they see that their children spend an hour each Sunday in church. "What is the use in teaching morals and religion," they say "when there is a good machine kept running expressly for that purpose? Why should we pray when the pulpit can do it for us? If there is too much sin in the world, the fault is with the church, not with us." We think that the atmosphere of progress that belongs to the 19th century will purify matters after a while. Sin in the cities and towns stands menacing and powerful, while we remain still and wait supinely for divine influences to be felt. Our people to-day do not have moral and Christian heroism. There are a great many Christians afraid to soil their hands in dirty work as they call it. A great many are living on their past reputations. They were good church workers in some other place at another time, but a simple change of conditions has made them indifferent to the church. I want to know whether they are good Universalists now. I like a man who will be a good Christian in any place or at any time, and is ready to work for the church of his choice in any capacity. The world needs now more than anything else a vital church, headed by a vital ministry, and supported by a vital faith. Let our denominational life become broader and deeper. Let no coward enter the church. All who come should be ready for hard work. Paul said: "Whereupon, King Agrippa, I was not disobedient to the divine command." Shall we be obedient to the divine command? When shall we take up our part of the work and carry it forward? Then, and not till then, will our lives be crowned.

The exercises on Wednesday were commenced with a conference at 8.30 a. m., Rev. J. H. Farnsworth of Westfield presiding in place of Rev. John Vannevar of Canton, who was unable to be present. Rev. A. E. White of Cambridge offered the opening prayer, and matters concerning the welfare of the cause were considered, several clergymen taking part. The annual meeting of the Woman's Christian Missionary Society was held at 9.30, presided over by Mrs. Philena C. Start of Cambridge. Mrs. Z. E. Harris of Worcester made the opening prayer, and Mrs. Harriet M. Ayer of Somerville read the secretary's report. The treasurer's report was read by Miss Caroline A. Eastman of Melrose. The permanent fund at the beginning of the year was $660; during the year $2686 had been received and $769 expended, leaving a balance of $1916. The report of the board of managers, by Mrs. Harriet M. Ayer of Somerville, showed that six regular, two special and one adjourned meeting had been held during the year. Agents have been appointed in 23 parishes. There are contributing members in 79 parishes, and 16 new life and 445 annual members have been added, making 33 life and 1164 annual members. Miss Barry of Newtonville read the report of the literary committee. Thirty-eight members of the society were reported present by the committee on elections, the report of the committee on nominations was accepted and these officers elected: President, Mrs. Philena C. Start of Cambridge; vice president, Mrs. J. L. Patterson of Roxbury; secretary, Mrs. Harriett M. Ayer of Somerville; treasurer, Miss Caroline A. Eastman of Melrose; trustees, Mrs. Zelia E. Harris of Worcester, Mrs. Hannah B. Sanders of Norwood, Mrs. Caroline C. Marshall of College Hill, Mrs. Frances E. Foy of Boston, and Mrs. Sarah H. Spinney of Lynn. The office of general agent for collection of funds was abolished, and the number of trustees made six instead of five. An excellent talk was then given by Mrs. Start on the duty of women to join the society and help in the work, after which short addresses were made by Mrs. Bray of Gloucester, vice president of the Women's Christian Association of Massachusetts, Mrs. Zelia E. Harris of Worcester, Rev. Mr. Libby, state secretary of Connecticut, and Rev. Dr. Sawyer of Tufts college.

Rev. Dr. T. J. Sawyer of Tufts college created some excitement in the afternoon by protesting against the substitution of water in the place of wine Tuesday in the celebration of the Lord's supper. He said he did not drink it then and should not drink it when offered yesterday. Rev. Mr. Betts of Palmer defended the use of water, saying that if the time ever came when he should have to choose between leaving the ministry of the gospel and passing wine over the communion-table, he should resign his ministry. Rev. Dr. Miner moved that it be the sense of the convention that unfermented wine was the proper symbol of the blood of Christ. It was finally found that the convention at a previous session had committed itself on the question, deciding then that water should be recommended for use at the Lord's table. Rev. Dr. C. W. Biddle of North Cambridge moved that the whole subject be indefinitely postponed, and the matter was quickly dropped. In the evening the discussion of "Our past and present possibilities" was opened by Rev. W. A. Start of Boston. He said that within 28 years $40,000 had been expended in behalf of churches under the convention, only $5590 of which had been upon churches now dead. Of 46 parishes helped in the last 10 years, 19 had become self-supporting. Nineteen of the twenty-three cities in the state had liberal churches. In the 325 towns of the state, 161 larger ones have churches. We can have 100 more parishes easily if we have men and money, but it is not practicable, and it is better, I think, to work in other directions. We are stronger to-day than ever before, and a grand future is before us.

The last day of the convention opened at 8.30 yesterday morning with a conference led by Rev. J.M. Bartholomew of Spencer, in which many women took part. The last session of the council was held at 9.30, and the report of the executive committee fully discussed. These officers were elected for the coming year: President, Rev. Dr. Richard Eddy; vice president, N. E. Denison of Cambridge; treasurer, J. D. W. Joy of Boston; trustees for three years, Rev. S. M. H. Harris of Worcester, Rev. S. W. Sample of Chelsea; committee of fellowship, Rev. N. E. White of Cambridgeport, Rev. Edwin Davis of Taunton, Rev. R. A. Greene of Lowell, Eben Alexander of Boston, W. H. Hollis of Chelsea; preacher of annual sermon, Rev. J. C. Snow of Haverhill. Delegates were also chosen to the general convention, and it was voted to ask each church to release their pastor one Sunday in the year to engage in missionary work.

At 1.15 p. m. the discussion of "What field of work does Universalism open for the young people?" was taken up. Rev. W. C. Selleck of Franklin thought that the Universalist church was growing in numbers and activity every year, and that a conception of their work should be pressed on the minds of the young people. Rev. R. N. White of Newtonville compared the situation to that of a farmer who looks over his fields and selects one that has been little worked, but which may prove to be the best he has. This is like the Universalist church. She has the field of foreign missions, the educational field, and the denominational field. The first he believed was beginning at the wrong end; we should first convert the heathen at home. The educational field is well filled, its institutions having an endowment of two and one-half million dollars. The denominational field is being well worked. The philanthropic field promises the greatest rewards. Work in this field is the great need of everyday life, and he urged organization to carry on the work. The Universalist church lacked in this respect, the only approach to it in the denomination being the Chapin Home in New York. This work lies close to the genius of our religion, and the belief of our church must not be preached at arm's length, but we must go down into the slums and hard parts of the cities, and touch our hearts to their hearts, our lips to their lips, as did Elisha when he raised to life the Hebrew boy. The discussion was closed by Rev. S. W. Sample of Chelsea, who believed the same fields of work were open to our young people that were open to young people of other denominations. A good field of work for young people is increasing reverence for sacred things. He had noticed a tendency in the church to fear that we shall do something orthodox, but let us have our prayer-meeting even if our evangelical brethren do, let the young people attend these meetings with an idea of prayer, even though they may not pray. Preparation for an interview with God cannot but be a benefit. The most vital want of to-day is home missionary work. A large stream of immigration is pouring in on us, much of it of the baser sort, and unless we can work among these people, the question is shall we have churches in 25 years. The slums of the cities are asking us to do something to reach the unchurched. The most successful churches were those which united old and young in their church work.

Enos Calkins and J. B. Shaw are taking the annual inventory at the state primary school.

Rev. Dr. T. Sawyer of Tufts College will occupy the pulpit of St. Paul's church next Sunday.

James Waterman is to move back to Palmer from Springfield, city life not agreeing with him.

G. A. Bills and D. W. Taft have been drawn as jurors for the next term of court at Springfield.

The Palmer Water Company announces a special discount on water rates paid Oct. 1st, if paid at once.

Fifteen tickets were sold at this station for the Boston and Albany road's excursion to New York, yesterday.

The Bulls and Bears of Holden's mill will play a game of ball on Holden's lot to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The broker's office in Strong's block will be opened for business the first of next week by J. V. Allen of Boston.

J. H. Smith is building a boarding house at his shoddy mill just across the Monson line. F. F. Marcy has the job.

A freight train off the track at North Grafton Tuesday morning delayed the eastern expresses some two hours.

It is reported that A. K. Belcher severs his connection with the Nassawanno House to-day, and will be succeeded by a Boston man.

District Deputy E. H. Johnson of Putnam, Ct., made an official visit to the local Ancient Order of United Workmen lodge Tuesday evening.

The clerks went to Monson Wednesday afternoon and defeated the clerks of that place 25 to 8, in a game of ball. This makes one game for each team.

The George A. Hill Theater Co., with Miss Minnie Lester as the leading lady, will commence a week's engagement at the Park street rink next Monday evening.

A horse attached to Caryl Bros'. delivery wagon indulged in a short run at the depot Monday morning, but did no damage beyond the breaking of a few bottles of soda.

A machine which will enable you to ascertain your correct weight—by dropping a nickel in the box—has been added to the furnishings of the Converse house office.

Round trip tickets to the meeting of the American Board of Missions, to be held in Springfield four days next week, commencing Monday, will be sold for 45 cents from Palmer.

The 11.04 a. m. express west yesterday morning was made up of two sections, to accommodate the large number who were availing themselves of the excursion rates to New York.

The Prohibitionists of the town will hold a caucus at the town house to-morrow evening at 7.30, to choose delegates to the several conventions and elect a town committee for the ensuing year.

Mrs. L. M. Burleigh and Mrs. J. M. Converse have gone on the Raymond excursion to the Luray caverns, Gettysburg battlefield, Washington and other points. Dr. W. H. Stowe is also with the party.

At the meeting of the school committee last Saturday it was voted to engage another assistant teacher for the high school, there being more scholars than the present corps of teachers can handle to advantage.

The Palmers were "done up" at Southbridge last Saturday 16 to 7, and now the latter club claims the championship of Central Massachusetts. The Palmers dispute this claim, and stand ready to play them for fun or for a purse.

John E. Kellogg, who died at Holyoke Tuesday at the age of 52, will be remembered by numerous Palmer people as a former resident and business man of this village, being associated with H. H. Bartlett, in the store now occupied by G. C. Ellis.

The third reunion of the children and grandchildren of Guy and Lucinda Goodwill was held last week Thursday at the house of O. E. Butler. Seven of the nine living children were present, from Hartford, Winsor Locks, Springfield, Stafford and Monson. Each child was presented a bedquilt pieced by Mrs Goodwill at the age of 78. After dinner there was music and the reading of an original poem.

Applications to entertain delegates to the annual meeting of the American Board of Missions next week have come in so numerous that Springfield people are unable to accommodate them all, so that neighboring towns on the line of railroads have been called upon. A special train will be run to Palmer from Springfield after the exercises next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, and a large number of delegates will be entertained by Palmer hotels and private families. The extra train will leave Springfield at 9.30, connecting at Palmer with the trains for Ware and Amherst.

THE SPECIAL TOWN MEETING.

PALMER TO HAVE A NEW HIGH SCHOOL BUILDING AT LAST.

Few regular, and certainly no special town meetings were ever so largely attended as the one Monday afternoon, there being fully 300 present. S. S. Taft was chosen moderator, and it was moved to take up article third, to see if the town would accept a highway about 95 rods in length, leading from Whipple's bridge to Bondsville, and discontinue the old road. This was easily done, as it was shown that the new road would cost the town nothing, provide a much better and safer highway along the line of the Central Massachusetts Railroad, and satisfy all parties interested. Article six, to see if the town would grade the hill on the Springfield road near Three Rivers, and the hill near the French Catholic church, on the road from that village to Thorndike, came next. The sum of $125 was voted to grade that part of the highway near the French Catholic church, but no motion was made regarding the hill on the Springfield road. It was then moved to take up article eight (to hear reports of committees) and all articles referring to the matter of a new high school building. Rev. T. J. Sullivan reported for the committee appointed at the last meeting to find a suitable location, to the effect that the most desirable site was the so-called "Dr. Downing lot," on the corner of Thorndike and Park streets in the Depot village, with an adjoining lot in the rear, making a frontage of about 100 feet on Park street and 300 on Thorndike street, the whole of which could be purchased for $1800. A motion to lay the schoolhouse matter over until the next annual meeting was declared lost by the moderator but was doubted, and a division of the house called for, which showed by about five to one that the moderator was correct. A motion to adjourn the meeting was also voted down. E. G. Murdock of Thorndike moved that a committee of three be appointed to purchase the old Methodist church property at Four Corners, which could be had for $1200, and convert it into a high school building. It is needless to say that this was also voted down. It was then moved that the report of the committee be accepted and adopted, which was done after a good deal of rambling talk. A motion was then made that a committee of nine be appointed to purchase the lot recommended in the depot village, and erect a high school building thereon, at a total cost not to exceed $12,000. This was almost unanimously carried, and the chair appointed the following building committee: W. C. Greene of Thorndike, O. B. Smith of Bondsville, M. W. French of Palmer, Dr. S. Ruggles of Three Rivers, Rev. T. J. Sullivan of Palmer, Thomas Moran of Thorndike, J. S. Holden of Palmer, Dr. Smith of Bondsville and E. B. Gates. Mr. French declined to serve, as did also Mr. E. Brown, and the house placed Mr. Taft in the vacancy. The selectmen and treasurer were authorized to borrow the necessary money on the note of the town, and to pay the road expenses out of the taxes of the ensuing year. Article nine, to see if the town would harden the road from Blanchardville to Cooley's crossing, was indefinitely postponed, and a set of by-laws were adopted, the selectmen being appointed a committee to present them to the proper court for approval.

BRIMFIELD.

George W. Sherman has been drawn as juror for the criminal court.

Rev. Joseph Kyte and wife returned Saturday, and he preached last Sabbath.

WEST BRIMFIELD.

Mrs. J. P. Eastman is visiting friends in Vermont.

F. H. Eastman is home on a short vacation.

While Will, our local sportsman, was on his way to the recent house-warming he fell into the minister's spring, rendering it unfit for use for some time to come.

BELCHERTOWN.

The agricultural dinner will be served in the Methodist vestry the coming cattle show day. Congressman Russell will address the people in the audience room.

Thomas Smithies, who left his home on the 18th for Chester, saying he should return on the same evening, has not been heard from. Detective Munyan is on his track. It is generally thought that he has been foully dealt with, or that he has become insane, as he is a man of firm principles and his finances are all right. He has only been in this town four months. He bought out J. R. Gould and has been doing a good business, and his mysterious disappearance has excited this community not a little. It is hoped a successful search will be made for him, and the mystery solved.

WEST WARREN.

The Good Templars have placed a piano in their lodge room.

Postmaster William Sheehan is out again after a severe illness.

George W. Allen is putting in the foundation for a new house on his lot on Main street. Edward Bigoness has the contract for building.

Members of hose companies 1 and 2 will give a social dance in Washington Hall to-night. Driscoll's orchestra of Holyoke will furnish music.

Beacon Light Lodge of Good Templars gave a basket social in Crossman's Hall last Thursday evening. A musical entertainment was furnished, and everybody had a pleasant time.

Edward Hanfield, the liveryman, has been having extremely bad luck with his horses lately. Sunday night one died with lung fever, and a few days ago one was stolen, and a while before this he lost one by being overdriven.

WARREN.

Harvest concert at the Congregational church next Sabbath evening.

Charles D. Keyes left Friday for Las Vegas, N. M., to spend the winter.

A large number of our people are planning to attend the meeting at Springfield next week.

The Humphrey tool shop has resumed work again, after having been closed several weeks.

Mrs. Charles Bliss has had the ground graded east of her house, much improving her residence.

Mrs. Gilbert and Mrs. Holder have returned to New York, after spending a few weeks in town with friends.

Rev. Mr. Clark and wife have returned after an absence of four weeks. He will occupy his pulpit next Sabbath.

A large number availed themselves of the opportunity to attend the musical convention at Worcester the past week.

Mr. Peterson, the artist, has been in town and is now engaged in work in Spencer, but will return to Warren and spend a few weeks sketching some of our fine landscapes.

The Harvest supper Tuesday evening was a success. The sum of $30 was secured. The ladies are rejoicing over the prospect of water being brought into the kitchen adjoining the parlors.

The teachers held their monthly meeting Wednesday evening in the high school building, electing these officers for the ensuing year: Mr. Ayers, president; Miss Joyce, secretary; Miss Merrick, Miss Mary S. Hitchcock, executive committee. The next meeting will be held at West Warren, the last Wednesday in October.

THORNDIKE.

There was skating and dancing at Union Hall Saturday evening.

A new telephone line has been put in between the Company's mills and office this week.

The Thorndike Company is enlarging the dye house at their new mill by increasing its length about ten feet.

The Thorndike orchestra gave a very successful dance at Union Hall last Friday night. W. G. Ryan of Springfield acted as prompter and Andy Johnson as floor manager.

Hill's Dramatic Company, with Miss Minnie Lester as the leading lady, has been playing to full houses this week at Union Hall. They give a change of bill nightly and a matinee to-morrow afternoon.

A child of Peter Boucher's strayed away from home last Thursday morning, and after a long search was found late in the afternoon in a swamp about a mile from home. Although waist deep in the mud and having been out in the rain for several hours, the child has fully recovered from its exposure.

The long-talked-of ball game between the Paper Citys of Holyoke and the Thorndikes took place here last Saturday, and resulted in an easy victory for the Thorndikes by the score of 15 to 9. Owing to Sullivan's being unable to play Shay was put in the box, where he pitched a splended game and was perfectly supported at the plate by Green. Although several of the Thorndike players were out of their regular positions, their errors were few and they played a winning game from the first. Worthy of mention was the heavy batting of the Thorndikes, especially Greene, and the good playing of the first baseman of the Paper Citys.

THREE RIVERS.

Special consecration services will be held at the Baptist church next Sunday.

A. C. Rodman, proprietor of the Milford House, at Milford, Conn., and wife, were in town this week.

Joseph Garaut, the well known tonsorial artist, has removed his shop to the office in Rieerside hotel.

George W. Penniman, the well known temperance lecturer, will speak at the Union Church next Tuesday evening, October 4th. Mr. Penuman spoke here in the spring and is a very able and interesting speaker. The admission is free and it is hoped a large number will attend.

Interesting services were held at the Baptist church Wednesday evening, the occasion being the installation of the newly called pastor, Rev. John Eyers. The invocation and reading of scriptures were by Rev. A. C. Hurd of Thorndike, the sermon by Rev. C. H. Kimball, of Second Baptist church, Holyoke, and the right hand of fellowship and charge to the church by Rev. A. W. Weeks of Palmer. The sermon was based upon I Cor. XII: 27, and was an impressive discourse. On account of sickness Rev. H. K. Pervear of Clinton, to whom was assigned an important part, was unable to be present. Mr. Eyers has for several years been preaching in England, but has not before been settled over a church in this country. He enters upon this field full of enthusiasm and zeal, and having the cooperation of a united church, a large blessing is looked for as a result of his coming.

MONSON.

The Monson House roof has been reshingled.

The exterior wood work of St. Patrick's church is being painted.

Oscar Thompson has commenced the study of medicine at New York.

The straw shop buildings of Fay, Peck & Co. are receiving a coat of paint.

The household furniture of Mrs. E. F. Willis was sold at auction yesterday.

The house recently vacated by S. Darling is being enlarged for a boarding house.

A large number of Monson Universalists attended the convention at Palmer this week.

Fernando Strong and L. A. Abbie attended the great yacht race at New York, Tuesday.

The Seymour-Stratton Company will present "Mayblossom" at Central Hall next Wednesday evening.

R. M. Reynolds has sold his bay gelding "Bodine," with a record of 2.19¼, to Dr. George H. Bailey of Portland, Me.

Rev. Albert Hammatt, a former pastor of the Universalist society, was in town Wednesday, calling upon his many friends.

W. J. Ricketts and Marvin Bradway were the delegates from Monson to the Universalist convention at Palmer this week.

John B. Finch, the celebrated advocate of prohibition, will deliver an address in Memorial Hall next Tuesday evening. All are invited.

At the last regular meeting of the Grand Army, Commander Meacham was asked to relate some incidents of his army life at their next meeting.

A. M. Guilford is soon to occupy the position so long held by George H. Newton, as public auctioneer. All who know Allie—and who does not?—will readily see that he is well fitted for the position.

The truck of a frieght car jumped the track north of this station Monday morning, and ran about a mile before it was discovered. The track was considerably torn up, and the boat train north was somewhat delayed.

E. M. Fuller, who graduated from the academy in '84, has just been ordained to the Baptist ministry in Canaan, N. H., and report says that he is soon to take one of Monson's fair daughters as a helpmate in his new duties.

Mrs. J. G. Merriam is still suffering from a stroke of paralysis received two years ago, and is unable to move hand or foot. Mrs. Merriam was born in Pepperell in 1812, her father being a grand-nephew of General Joseph Warren.

On account of a break in the gas machine the services in Central Hall were obliged to be omitted last Sunday evening. Next Sunday evening services will consist of solo and anthem singing by the choir, with a short address by the pastor; also a praise service in which the congregation will join.

The repairs in the vestry of the Methodist church being completed, it will be rededicated next Sunday. Rev. George F. Eaton of Springfield, presiding elder of the Springfield district, will preach a dedicatory sermon at 10.30 a. m., after which the exercises of dedication will take place in the rooms below. A hard maple floor has been laid, through the generosity of R. M. Reynolds; the ceiling has been sheathed in hard wood, new seats put in, and numerous minor repairs made. A large new Richmond furnace has been put in for heating the church, for which the society is indebted to C. W. Holmes, C. W. Holmes, Jr. and S. F. Cushman. Next Monday evening a musical and miscellaneous entertainment will be given, followed at 9 o'clock by a re-opening of the vestry, when a free collation will be served.

WILBRAHAM.

Henry Clark has been drawn as juror for the next term of court at Springfield.

S. E. Phelps, traveling salesman for Chapman & Co. of Meriden, Ct., is home on a vacation.

FRENCH PROTESTANT CHURCH ORGANIZED.

The organization of the French Congregational church and installation of Rev. Thomas Dorion as the pastor took place Tuesday evening at the East Congregational church. The council, consisting of delegates from the Congregational churches in neighboring towns and the French Protestant churches of Springfield, Lowell and Holyoke. Rev. J. Coit, secretary of the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society, and Rev. A. E. P. Perkins, D. D., of Worcester were also present. Dr. Perkins was chosen moderator of the council, and Rev. Alfred T. Perry, scribe. A very seaching examination of Mr. Dorion was made by the moderator and other pastors that were present, with very satisfactory results, he passing unusually creditably. The cause of organization and the prospects of a church here were discussed, and the council voted unanimously to proceed to organize the church and install the pastor. All present seemed very favorably impressed with the earnest devotion and dignified manner shown by the French pastors that were present. The evening exercises were of great interest to all who attended. The order of service was as follows: Organ voluntary, reading of the minutes of council, anthem, invocation and reading of Scripture by Rev. W. D. Brown, French hymn. The sermon was delivered by Rev. J. Coit, who took for a text Matthew 6:33, "But seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." Hymn in English, baptism of nine by Dr. Perkins, reading of the articles of faith and covenant by Rev. T. G. A. Cote, prayer of recognition and installation, Rev. C. E. Amaron, charge to the pastor, Rev. J. Provost, right hand of fellowship, Rev. A. T. Perry, address to the new church, Rev. J. Provost. French hymn, holy sacrament by Dr. Perkins and Rev. Thomas A. Dorion, closing prayer by Rev. J. L. Morin, and benediction by the pastor. The church was organized with twenty-two members, four joining by letters from other churches, and eighteen on profession of faith. The church is in need of better accommodations in the way of a place to hold services. It is hoped and expected that they will soon purchase land and erect a chapel.

Of what good is "party organization" when its leaders so ignore the well-known and oft-expressed conviction of the party as emphatically set forth in their state convention platform and by the Legislature year after year on the question of biennial elections of our state officers; and the sooner the overwhelming will of the majority, amounting to almost the unanimous republican party action, is respected and accepted by the very few Republican office holders, who thus far have managed to successfully prevent the requisite two-thirds vote in the Legislature, the sooner our party will rejoice in the value of unity and "organization."—Theodore C. Bates.

JOTTINGS FROM THE HUB.

From our Special Correspondent.

BOSTON, Sept. 28, 1887.

This week's events here have been the Volunteer–Thistle race, and the Republican state convention to-day. To be sure the yacht race was at New York, but the interest in Boston in the Boston-built, designed and owned boat has been intense. Washington street was blocked for hours in front of the newspaper offices so that it was almost impossible for the street cars to force their way through. The Herald and Globe had large blackboards in front of their offices with a crayon artist to post the bulletins and to amuse the crowd by drawing cartoons. The Globe man had a telephone wire, communicating with the office, about his neck and the telephone in his hand ready to catch the latest information from the race. Brother Jonathan and John Bull, the American eagle and the British lion, were favorite pictures with these artists, and as the news of the race went on, the American representative was drawn with a comical advantage over his adversary. Cheers greeted the constant announcements that the Volunteer was gaining, and the papers published extra editions announcing the victory. There is a high feeling of confidence in the result of the next race.

To-day's Republican convention has gone as was expected, save that District Attorney Waterman of Pittsfield has received the nomination for attorney general, instead of ex-President Pillsbury, who was commonly regarded as sure of the nomination. At the Tremont House last night there seemed no chance whatever for Waterman, and the result shows how uncertain politics is and how some unseen factor may be quite potent. The Greenhalge men made no impression last night. The Waterman force had no organization, strength or coherence. Pillsbury's men were active. He was on hand himself early and received men in his room. Just before the convention, the best posted Waterman leader would have been satisfied with 150 votes. Greenhalge had opened headquarters this morning and was certain of a handsome complimentary vote. Not a solitary delegate in the convention, so far as I know, was there but expected Pillsbury to have a large majority over all on the first ballot. Yet the convention surprised itself by nominating Waterman.

Now, how was this done? It is a curiosity of politics. Several forces were at work against Pillsbury. One was his speech in the Senate last year against the soldiers' exemption bill. Many of the soldiers have not forgotten that speech, nor certain expressions in it, or rather, expressions which they say were in it. One, as stated, was that the soldiers were using their Grand Army badges as passports to office. It is, of course, inconsistent for the Republicans to adopt a strong civil service reform platform, and then to defeat a candidate because he opposed a bill hostile to the reform. Possibly the result may be to make a martyr of Pillsbury, though I really do not expect to see him put in a very lofty niche among the illustrious of that class.

Then again, that old Beverly quarrel had something to do with it. To-day it is charged that Mr. Pillsbury went to Governor Ames to urge him to veto the bill, thus rebuking the lobby. But, say some legislators who voted for the division of Beverly, Mr. Pillsbury had a fee of $400 in the case, and it was given in part for his services in lobbying against the bill. They do not see why a lobby on one side is not just as respectable as a lobby on the other, and so they voted against him. Still again, it is said that some of his Boston friends did not stand by him. Certainly his first vote was far less than was generally expected, and then his friends, after the informal vote, went out to the number of some 200. Be the causes what they were, the result was a genuine surprise to every delegate in the covention. Yet the talk afterward is that the best thing has been done, and that the ticket will be much stronger for the selection of one western man than it would by taking all of the candidates from Boston and its vicinity.

The reception of Congressman Rockwell's speech and of the platform was especially noticeable. Rockwell made a fine appearance and delivered his speech well. The platform is strong, of sound stuff and well put together from a political point of view. Of course those who believe in restricting the liquor trade, but do not believe in putting into the constitution that which belongs in the statute book only, will have their criticisms of the prohibitory amendment plank. But as a political matter, it was well done. The plank is stronger than last year's, as it calls for the election of legislators who will vote for a submission of the amendment to the people. Perhaps the most enthusiasm was manifested over the plank in favor of the common school. This is an outcome of the recent decision in Malden that the public school building may be used for parochial schools. Such a resolution was probably never thought of by the Democrats, and could never have been passed if it had been. It makes a new issue in the campaign, one that will unite the Republican party and tend to divide the opposition, if it has any effect at all on them.

The platform is far less severe on the president than might have been expected, there are so pronounced opinions held against him by some party leaders. But undoubtedly the certainty that with conciliation the Mugwumps will be found back with the Republicans this year, had much to do with the moderate tone of the platform.

It was said here to-day that an arrangement had been made to have the ticket for next year Draper and Haile—Gen. W. F. Draper of Hopedale and W. H. Haile of Springfield. But that plan leaves Gov. Ames out of the account, and he will probably want a third term the same as all other governors.

A meeting was held here to-day to see what can be done toward removing Rev. Dr. Alden from the prudential committee of the American Board. LANDON.

DON'T EXPERIMENT.

You cannot afford to waste time in experimenting when your lungs are in danger. Consumption always seems, at first, only a cold. Do not permit any dealer to impose upon you with some cheap imitation of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, but be sure you get the genuine. Because he can make more profit he may tell you he has something just as good, or just the same. Don't be deceived, but insist upon getting Dr. King's New Discovery, which is guaranteed to give relief in all Throat, Lung and Chest affections. Trial bottles free at LeGro & Lynde's Drug Store. Large bottles $1. 6

A SOUND LEGAL OPINION.

E. Bainbridge Munday, Esq., County Attorney, Clay County, Texas, says: "Have used Electric Bitters with most happy results. My brother also was very low with malarial fever and jaundice, but was cured by timely use of this medicine. Am satisfied Electric Bitters saved his life."

Mr. D. I. Wilcoxson, of Horse Cave, Ky., adds a like testimony, saying: He positively believes he would have died, had it not been for Electric Bitters.

This great remedy will ward off, as well as cure all malarial diseases, and for all kidney, liver and stomach disorders stands unecaqualed. Price 50c. and $1, at LeGro & Lynde's. 6

IN BRIEF, AND TO THE POINT.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existence. It is easy to put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Greens August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents. 2

POND'S EXTRACT

VEGETABLE

PAIN DESTROYER.

Hemorrhages, Bleeding from the LUNGS, stomach, nose or from any cause is speedily controlled and stopped.

Sores, Ulcers, Wounds, Sprains and Bruises. It is cooling, cleansing and HEALING.

Catarrh. It is most efficacious for this disease, cold in the head, etc. POND'S EXTRACT CATARRH CURE, specially prepared to meet serious cases, should be applied with Pond's Extract Nasal Syringe.

Rheumatism, Neuralgia. No other preparation has cured more cases of these distressing complaints than the extract. POND'S EXTRACT PLASTER is invaluable in these diseases, Lumbago, Pains in the Back or Side, Etc.

Diphtheria, Sore Throat, use the EXTRACT promptly. Delay is dangerous.

Piles, Blind, Bleeding or Itching. It is the greatest known remedy; rapidly curing when other medicines have failed. POND'S EXTRACT OINTMENT is of great service where the removal of clothing is inconvenient.

For Broken Breast and Sore Nipples. Mothers who have once used The Extract will never be without it. Pond's Extract Ointment is the best emollient that can be applied.

Female Complaints. In the majority of female diseases The Extract can be used, as is well known, with the greatest benefit. Full directions accompany each bottle.

CAUTION.—POND'S EXTRACT has been imitated. The genuine has the words "POND'S EXTRACT" blown in the glass, and our picture trade-mark on surrounding buff wrapper. None other is genuine. Always insist on having Pond's Extract. Take no other preparation. It is never sold by bulk or by measure.

SOLD EVERYWHERE. Prices, 50 cents. $1.00, $1.75.

The Base Ball Coacher.

Sometimes at first, sometimes at third
The jolly coacher's voice is heard;
And one doth hear
What would appear
One long-drawn and sonorous word
"Goitjimmynowsyerchance—

That's—thewaytoplaybaseball!"

Now fast the innings come and go,
The game is close, the winning blow
Must be struck
To fix the luck
Of one or t'other, friend or foe;
"Keepyoureyespealedmeboys—

The game at last its end doth near,
The coacher's club brings up the rear;
And does he cease,
And hold his peace?
Not much—his voice is loud and clear

A RIDDLE IN PUNCTUATION.

The following article forcibly illustrates the necessity of proper punctuation. It can be read in two ways, describing a very good or very bad man, the result depending on the manner in which it is punctuated. It is well worth the study of all, and particularly young printers and newspaper correspondents:

"He is an old and experienced man in vice and wickedness he is never found in opposing the works of iniquity he takes delight in the downfall of his neighbors he never rejoices in the prosperity of his fellow creatures he is always ready to assist in destroying the peace of society he takes no pleasure in serving the Lord he is uncommonly diligent in sowing discord among his friends and acquaintances he takes no pride in laboring to promote the cause of Christianity he has not been negligent in endeavoring to stigmatize all public teachers he makes no effort to subdue his evil passions he strives hard to build up Satan's kingdom he lends no aid to the support of the gospel among the heathen he contributes largely to the evil adversary he pays no heed to the devil he will never go to heaven he must go where he will receive the just recompense of reward."

WELL PROTECTED.

It is all too common to misunderstand the true nature of a medicine, as any one must confess, remembering the story of the nurse who awoke her patient in order to administer a sleeping potion.

When shower baths became an active fashion, a certain physician one day met a neighbor and inquired, "Well Jackson, how did your wife manage her new shower bath?"

"Oh, she had real good luck. Mrs. Smith told her how she managed with hern. She made an oiled silk hood, with a big cape to it, that came down over her shoulders."

"She was a fool for her pains," said the doctor, impatiently. "That's not the way."

"So my wife thought."

"And your wife did nothing of the kind, I hope."

"Oh, no, no. My wife she used an umbrella.—Youth's Companion.

A Specific for Malaria, Rheumatism, Nervous Prostration, Dyspepsia and all Germ Diseases.

A Powerful Tonic that the Most Delicate Stomach will Bear. The Most Scientific and Successful Blood Purifier.

SELMA, N. C., Feb. 11th, 1887.

Gentlemen:—Your inquiring whether or not I had been benefitted by Kaskine, and if so to what extent, etc., is at hand. In reply will say that my health has not been as good in twenty years as it is now. I suffered with chills from malarial poison contracted while serving in the Confederate Army on the Peninsular Campaigns in Virginia. Did not miss having a chill at least once in twenty-one days, more frequently once in seven days, for fifteen years. The result was very poor health and a general letting down of the system which only those similarly affected can appreciate.

In this condition I visited New York in November, 1885, on business. While there I stopped with Mr. E. D. Barker, of the University Publishing company. I told Mr. Barker of my condition. He called my attention to your Kaskine and procured for me a bottle. After my return home I took the pellets as directed, and found much relief afforded thereby. Of this change I wrote Mr. Barker, who sent two or three bottles during the past year. My health greatly improved. I increased in weight from 165 pounds to 200 pounds, my present weight. I believe the Kaskine did it. Quinine failed, as had other remedies usually administered in such cases.

Now, unless in case of exposure to extra bad weather, I do not have chills, and my general health is quite good. I turned over half a bottle to a young lady friend a few weeks since. I learned from her mother that she was much benefitted from it while it lasted.

I trust that you may be able to introduce Kaskine generally in this country, in which many suffer from diseases consequent upon malarial poison in the system. From my own experience I can emphasize its excellence for such diseases. If I can serve you call on me.

I am very truly yours,
JOHN C. SCARBOROUGH,
Ex-Superintendent of Public Schools, North Carolina.

Other letters of a similar character from prominent individuals, which stamp Kaskine as a remedy of undoubted merit, will be sent on application.

Old Saws in Rhyme.

Actions speak louder than words ever do;
You can't eat your cake and hold on to it, too.

When the cat is away, then the little mice play;
Where there is a will there is always a way.

One's deep in the mud as the other in mire;
Don't jump from the frying-pan into the fire.

There's no use in crying o'er milk that is spilt;
No accuser is needed by conscience of guilt.

There must be some fire wherever is smoke;
The pitcher goes out to the well till it's broke.

By rogues falling out honest men get their due;
Whoever it fits, he must put on the shoe.

All work and no play will make Jack a dull boy;
A thing of much beauty is ever a joy.

A half-loaf is better than no bread at all;
And pride always goeth before a sad fall.

Fast bind, and find, have two strings to your bow;
Contentment is better than riches, we know.

The devil finds work for hands idle to do;
A miss is as good as a mile is to you.

You speak of the devil, he's sure to appear;
You can't make a silk purse from out a sow's ear.

A man by his company always is known;
Who live in a glass house should not throw a stone.

When the blind leads the blind both will fall in the ditch;
It's better born lucky than being born rich.

Little pitchers have big ears; burnt child dreads the fire;
Though speaking the truth, no one credits a liar.

Speech may be silvern, but silence is gold;
There's never a fool like the fool that is old.

LOSS OF THE PARAGON.

Ralph Rawson Nutford was the fifth officer on board the steamship Paragon, one of the fastest boats on the Cable line of steamers, which plied between New York and Seringapatam. Her captain was justly renowned as an expert navigator, for he was in the habit of performing the journey of 10,000 miles in four weeks, seven hours, forty-two minutes and nineteen and one-half seconds, with much regularity, and had never yet been run into by another vessel.

Having attained this pitch of marine preeminence, Captain Sir Clement Lane—he was a baronet of ancient creation—entered heart and soul into his profession, and thought there was nothing like it. His fifth officer, however, didn't care much about it; he had been the youngest of a large family, pitchforked into the service of the Cable line by a rich uncle, who paid his fees, and took an interest in his progress as long as he saw nothing of him. But Ralph R. Nutford, being young, good-looking and human, found his profession remarkably dull. "You see," he remarked to a chance acquaintance, who had introduced himself to him as they lunched together at the same table at Delmonico's, one day, shortly before the Paragon was to start on the homeward journey; "you see, we junior officers don't have much fun on board. The seniors, if they care about it, can have no end of amusement, but what chance has a fifth officer? I have to go about my duties like an automaton; and at dusk when every corner that one turns is immediately the theater of a sudden disentanglement and precipitate flight, the effect is, to say the least of it, tantalizing; and one wishes one were either senior officer or passenger, instead of fifth in command."

The genial stranger was properly sympathetic, and after making inquires concerning the arrangements and dicipline on board the Paragon, he nodded a "Good Day," and disappeared.

On the evening before the departure of the Paragon the new hands and most of the homeward-bound passengers were on board, when a gorgeous specimen of the Wall street Yankee, accompanied by a lovely creature of some nineteen summers and an equal number of winters, came on board, and, addressing Ralph Rawson Nutford, who was standing near the gangway, asked that worthy whether he was the captain of the boat. On his replying that he was the fifth officer the Yankee remarked:

"Well, sir, I'd be obliged to you if you could take me to the captain, under whose charge I want to place this young lady, whom I may as well introduce to you—as you are one of the officers—right now. Miss Nellie J. Robinson, my niece; Mr. Nutford—thank you—fifth officer of the vessel."

While the captain was being found Miss Nellie J. Robertson was doing great execution with her great soft eyes; and by the time Captain Sir Clement Lane had duly identified the fair passenger in the list, and had undertaken to take charge of her during the voyage, the impressionable fifth officer was quite ready to put her up on a coil of rope—no pedestal being handy—and fall down and worship her. The swell Yankee, with much ostentatious farewell pantomime, having returned on shore, the fair Nellie was left with the captain, and a new passenger came on board—a green-eyed monster, who attached himself to the susceptible Ralph, and proceeded to share with that gentleman his meals, his berth and his whole existence.

Next morning they were all out at sea when the captain's protege came on deck. How beautiful she was! When she went up to Nutford and putting both her hands into his, captured his soul with a look and requested to be shown the vessel, the fifth officer could have clasped her in his arms and sprung overboard like a new Chafmides, taking his Pallas with him. His joy, however, was short-lived, for in the midst of their peregrination the captain met them, and telling Mr. Nutford to go aft and see to something about which there was no earthly hurry, undertook to relieve him of his duty as cicerone. As they came up the companion, Nellie—stumbling against Ralph, squeezed his hand and whispered "An pliasir!"

The flirtation of these two young things for the rest of the day had to be pantomimic; it was, therefore, the more unrestrained. Ralph didn't worship the sea, but he was a conscientious officer, and wouldn't let his love, which grew fiercer and fiercer, interfere with his duties. Besides, the captain took great pains about his fair charge, and kept a sharp lookout upon his fifth officer, whose eloquent looks he considered to be in the worst possible taste. An opportunity occurred to them, however, just before the last meal, when they met under the shelter of a friendly stateroom.

"I never knew," she said, "that sailors were so nice. Do you know," she added, putting her hands upon his shoulders, "that this uniform makes you very handsome? I believe that's the only reason you are here at all."

A fool would not have caught her to his breast and kissed the passionate lips and eyes which raised themselves to a level with his. Ralph Rawson Nutford was no fool.

"I must go away," he whispered. "When can we meet again? I shall be on watch to-night, and shall wander up and down thinking of nothing but you. Come on deck early to-morrow, and I shall then be free."

"No," said she; "let me come on deck while you are on watch. It will be a very dark night, and I'll wear a dark frock. There will be no moon to night—there was none last night. Do let me come?"

"Impossible! The laws are Medic and Persaic. No one can let you come on deck save the captain. It would be ruin to me if you came without leave. You wouldn't like that dear, would you?"

"Oh! very well. How maddening those lips were when pouted! "I've no doubt the captain will let me come up during his watch, and I'll come then. How horrid you are! I don't believe you care for me one bit. There will be no one on this deck but the two men watching with you, and they couldn't see me. I came up last night and no one saw me. Well—shall I come up during your watch or the captain's?"

Nothing more was said—in words. Ralph was madly tempted, as he went forward, to dance about and shout aloud.

It was a pitch dark night, though the air was clear of fog. The two lovers sat beneath the bridge, and he told her in whispers all about himself, and how fatal it would be if it were discovered that he had yielded to her prayer and let her come on deck. But what did anything matter while her soft, smooth fingers twined and knotted themselves in his, and her glory of golden hair was the only thing between her cheek and his shoulder.

Suddenly there was a great jar and a dull crashing report. Nellie crouched in the shadow as Nutford sprang to his feet and learned from the men on watch that the Paragon had been run into. In a moment all was confusion, or apparent confusion. The captain, cool as if he had been taking his seat at dinner, came on deck and said in a loud, calm voice to the now terrified pasengers:—

"We have been run into and the Paragon is sinking. There is no danger to us personally. The sea is calm and the boats are in perfect order in preparation for such an accident. In a hour we shall be on board the ship that has run us down, which is waiting for us close by." Then under his calm and careful orders, passengers and crew embarked in the Paragon's boats, and in a short time the little flotilla was pulling away from the disappearing liner. But the ship that had sunk them was nowhere to be found! Favored by the darkness, she had got away, without stopping to learn what had become of the Paragon and her living freight.

Nellie and Ralph Nutford were together in one of the boats. No inquiry had yet been made into the disaster; but the two men on watch, who were in the same boat with them, said they had suddenly seen the ligths of a steamer close to them, and as they sprung to hail her and give the alarm, she had struck them, and when they recovered from their momentary consternation she had disappeared!

"You hear!" said Nellie to the terror-stricken fifth officer, whose side she had never left—"they didn't see her till she struck us. You must support their statement, or you are a ruined man. Your certificate will be cancelled, and, oh, Ralph! if the truth should be known, think of my everlasting shame! For my sake, if you love me, save my good name and yours, and back up their story. You see that they are both agreed and you were further from where she struck us than they were."

The men repeated their story again and again. Morning broke, and before any one had time to suffer very much a steamer, bound on the same journey, picked up the whole company.

The captain interrogated the men on watch and Mr. Nutford as closely as possible. There was no doubt about the facts. The Paragon had been run down by a mysterious vessel, the name of which no one had observed, and had taken advantage of the darkness to desert the ship she had run into. The home voyage was satisfactorily accomplished, and Ralph and Nellie, the former no longer hampered by navigation, had ample opportunities of carrying on their love affair, which had been accomplished by such an overwhelming catastrophy. Nutford easily succumbed to Nellie's soft causistry, for to own his neglect of duty would be ruin to his own career and to hers, and would render their marriage, which to him was a forgone conclusion, an absolute impossibility.

A minute inquiry naturally was held at Seringapatam, at the conclusion of which it was decided—though in official language—that there was some mystery somewhere, and a good deal more in the circumstances of the collision than met the eye or ear; but that there was no direct evidence reflecting upon the conduct of the fifth officer, who came home from the inquiry, a man about whom nothing definite was said, but a good deal is implied, and in this enviable state of mind he found waiting for him Nellie, his affianced bride, and a blue envelope.

The latter from a firm of solicitors announcing that his old uncle had died, leaving him sole heir.

"Thank God!" he exclaimed. "Poor old gentleman, he has done me a good turn when I required it most. Nellie—sweetheart—I am a rich man. To-morrow I throw up this profession, which, if I cared little about before, I loathe now. This day three weeks, darling, we will be married; and then we'll go abroad for six months. Does this suit your views?"

The answer of the young person addressed has not been recorded; it is sufficient for us to know that two months later Nellie—Mrs. Ralph Nutford—was installed in an exquisite little apartment looking out upon the Champs Elysees, and her husband, who had been down to the Riviera to look out for a permanent habitation for himself and his bride, was hastening back to her in a first-class carriage on the Paris-Marseilles railway.

In the corner opposite to him sat an American, who, with the affability of that free-born race, had entered into conversation with him, and the conversation had turned upon the shipping at Marseilles.

"You seem to know a thing or two about boats, stranger," observed the American.

"Well, I ought to, seeing that I was connected with an American line for some two years."

"You were! Then you must have come across funny yarns in connection with those same steamers. Lord bless you! There's a deal of romance connected with those lines! I could tell a story—but, there, it wouldn't interest you, perhaps."

"On the contrary," replied Mr. Nutford, "I should like very much to hear some of your experiences; we have the end of a long journey before us."

"Oh, they're not my experiences; but a friend of mine from Chicago told me a run. story about the Cable line a few days ago. Remember the Paragon? Went down mysteriously the first of the year? Yes, you know. I'll tell you a story about that if you like. Shall I? Very well—we've got half an hour. It happened like this; but mind you promise on your British honor never to let this go any further? All right."

"Col. Jedediah Z. Spinks got planted with a huge consignment of hides; got 'em as his share of a steal, or something of that kind, and all his pals laughed at him because they said that even he couldn't get a profit out of 'em. So what d'ye think he does? Ships them all aboard the Paragon, as cargo, declares them as Indian bullion embroideries, and insures them against all risks at $500,000. He spotted the Paragon because there was a young fool of a fifth officer on board, named Mudford, or Retford, or something like that, who was just the kind of soft he wanted, and he had him sounded to make sure, one day at Delmonico's, by a friend, who went and sat with him, and entered into conversation—just as you and I have done; and then the colonel got a girl, lovely and without relations, with the cheek, and the pluck, and the beauty of the devil, but down on her luck and hard up for cash and excitement, and sent her on board as his niece, making the voyage to Seringapatam under the care of the captain! She made tremendous love to the young spark, playing the pompous old ass of a captain off against him, got him to herself on deck one dark night when there was no one else on deck but two men sent on as part of the extra crew by the colonel himself, and instructed by him. While she flirted with him well out of sight under the bridge, these two men let down over the side a Remington dynamite machine and blew the bloody old boat to blazes, and then cocked up a story about a mysterious 'wessel' that had come upon them suddenly, run them down and got clear away! Lord! I knew you'd laugh. The young fool, in no end of a funk about his certificate, supports their yarn, and, of course, never says a word about the girl. They come over; the loss is proven bona fide accidental, and Col. Jedediah Z. Spinks nets £100,000 sterling clear profit bang out of the insurance offices! But wait a minute. The end 's the tragic part of it. That beautiful girl, with her marvelous talents, that would make her an empress if she wanted to be one, goes and falls in love—the real thing—with the man, and won't touch a penny of her share of the plunder. Waste of genius, I call it. But all women are alike. And, egad, sir, she's married him! What d'ye think of that for a yarn?'

"Most startling and amusing. But here is Paris. Thank you so much for your delightful company. Your story has indeed interested me greatly."—London Truth.

WHERE THE HOUSE-FLY BREEDS.—But few know the origin of the house-fly. The eggs, mere whitish specks to the unaided eye, are laid in little agglutinated piles in warm manure or in decomposing vegetation, especially that about our stables and barnyards. From 80 to 100 are laid at a time and probably at three or four different intervals by the same fly, though on this point we have no exact data. Within twenty-four hours, in summer, they hatch into footless maggots, which, after rooting in filth till their tender skins seem ready to burst, become full-fed in less than a week, and descending into the earth or sheltering under some old board, contract to brown shining objects, rounding at both ends and technically known as pruraria. Within the darkness of this hardened skin changes rapidly take place; the insect passes through the pupa to the perfect state and finally, in about five days, the anterior end of the supariam is pushed off, and the fly quickly crawls out. At first its parts are pale and soft and its wings are crumpled and useless, but these soon expand and suddenly, without practice or teaching, the new fledged fly wings its way to our tables to mock our displeasure and to share our repast.

The St. Johnsbury Caledonian advertises for sale a "perfect animal under the saddle and a fair driver." We don't want any horse, but a "fair driver" rather agitates us. What is her name, blonde or brunette, age, accomplishments and general disposition?—Burlington Clipper.

Drifting.

In the pleasant cool of evening,
As the sunset's ruddy glow
Cast resplendent its reflection
On the dancing waves below,
From the shore I loosed my row-boat,
Peace and quiet for my quest,
Floated down the sparkling river,
Indolent, with oars at rest.

Dreamily I saw the shadows
Deepening so thick and fast;
Dreamily heard strains of music
In the villages I passed;
Noticed not how time was speeding,
How the river more and more
Widened e'en while I expected
Soon to turn my skiff to shore.

But at last my wandering senses
To my course attentive grew,
And I sprang up quickly startled,
As the sea breeze o'er me blew.
Not so easy now the turning
Of my little bark would be;
In my lethargy I'd drifted
Past the river out to sea.

So in life we all are passing
Through some crisis it may be;
We cannot tell where ends the river,
At what point begins the sea;
And perhaps we find on waking
We had better used the oar,
For we've drifted, all unconscious,
Beyond turning to the shore.

ROSE SCENT JARS.

'Tis a pity, says a writer in the Kansas City Journal, that so few housekeepers, comparatively, know the never-ending satisfaction to be derived from the possession of a rose scent jar, yet at the cost of a little pains taking they are within the reach of a majority.

Nothing gives more subtle delightful perfume to an apartment than one of these jars, which should be opened every morning after the necessary cleaning and dusting is finished, for an hour, and then carefully closed.

All your friends will ask: "What gives your rooms so delightful a fragrance?" It is such a pure yet delicious odor, that it charms everyone.

Gather the rose petals in the morning, let them stand in a cool place, tossed up lightly for one hour to dry off, then put them in layers with salt sprinkled over each layer into a large covered dish—a glass berry dish is a convenient receptacle. You can add to this for several mornings till you have enough stock—from one pint to a quart, according to size of jar—stir every morning, and let the whole stand for 10 days. Then transfer it to a glass fruit jar, in the bottom of which you have placed two ounces of allspice, coarsely ground, and as much stick cinnamon, broken coarsely. This may stand now for six weeks, closely covered, when it is ready for the permanent jar, which may be as pretty as your ingenuity can devise or your means purchase. Those with double covers are the best, and very pretty. One in the blue and white Japanese ware, I believe the dealers call it kaaga, holding over a quart, can be bought for seventy-five cents.

Have ready one ounce each of cloves, allspice, cinnamon and mace, all ground, not fine, one ounce of orris root bruised and shreded, two ounces of lavender flowers and a small quantity of any other sweet-scented dried flowers or herbs; mix together and put into the jar in alternate layers with the rose stock, add a few drops of oil of rose geranium or violet, and pour over the whole one-quarter pint of good cologne.

This will last for years, though from time to time you may add a little lavender or orange flower water, or any nice perfume, and some seasons a few fresh rose petals. You will derive a satisfaction from the labor only to be estimated by the happy owners of similar jars.

GETTING HIS FIVE CENTS' WORTH AT SARATOGA.

I turned and looked at that beloved man, and I see that he wuz a drinkin' lavishly of that noble water. I see that he wuz a drinkin' more than wuz for his good, his linement showed it, and sez I, "Pause, Josiah Allen, and don't imbibe too much."

"Why," he whispered, "you can drink all you are a mind to, for five cents. I am bound for once, Samantha Allen, to get the worth of my money."

And he drinked the tumberful down at one swaller almost, and turned to the weary boy for another. He looked bad and eager, and sez I, "How many have you drinked?"

Sez he, in a eager, animated whisper, "Nine." And he whispered in the same axents, "Five times nine is forty-five. If it had been to a fair, or Fourth of July, or anything, it would have cost me forty-five cents; and if it had been to a church social—lemme see, nine times ten is ninety—it would have cost me a dollar bill: and here I am a havin' it all for five cents! Why," sez he, "I never see the beat on't in my life."

And ag'in he drinked a tumberful down, and motioned to the frightened boy for another.

But I took him by the vest and whispered to him, sez I, "Josiah Allen, do you want to die because you can die cheap? Why," sez I, "it will kill you to drink so much."

"But think of the cheapness on't, Samantha,—the chance I have of gettin' the worth of my money!"

But I whispered back to him in anxus axents and told him, that I guessed if funeral expenses wuz added to that five cents it wouldn't come so cheap, and sez I, "You won't live through many more glasses, and you'll see you won't. Why," sez I, you are a drownding out your insides.

"There is such a thing as bein' too graspin', Josiah Allen." Sez I, "The children of Israel used to want to lay up more manny than they wanted or needed, and it spilt on their hands."—From "Samantha at Saratoga" by Josiah Allen's Wife.

SNAKE FARMIMG.

A correspondent of the Atlanta Constitution describes a farm in Illinois, the products of which are of a nature to make the flesh of any but enthusiastic naturalists creep with horror. The farm is carried on for the purpose of propagating rattlesnakes, which are sold at a good round price. A certain firm is at present using rattlesnake oil in the manufacture of a remedy for rheumatism, and the Illinois farmer has agreed to furnish two hundred and fifty snakes for the laboratory during the season, no reptile being less than six years old, or measuring less than four feet in length.

There are thirty-seven "mounds" on the farm—slightly raised hillocks—where the snakes burrow in winter, and live with their young in summer. On the south side of the mound, where they could get the full benefit of the sun, were to be seen, on the day of the reporter's visit, over fifty reptiles, which took not the slightest notice of the presence of spectators.

"That mound," said the farmer, "probably contains a dozen nests, and each nest at least ten eggs. I have seen nests holding eighteen young rattlers, the largest not over two inches in length. The eggs are about the size of those of a partridge, but have a soft shell."

In the farmhouse was a box of sawdust under the stove, containing twenty-seven rattlesnake eggs, which are almost at the point of hatching. After they had done so, the tiny reptile would be fed upon flies, caught for them by the children.

Several pet snakes glide by the house. They are absolutely harmless, the poison sac having been removed from their mouths, and their fangs clipped with pincers, while they were under the influence of chloroform.

The reptiles have no equals as mice exterminators, and in the summer not only keep the place free from bugs and flies, but from human intruders.

HAPPINESS AND HEALTH.

Healthy people are usually happy, and happiness is essential to health. Happiness, like everything else, is partly a matter of habit. People form habits of being cross, surly, irritable and disagreeable, and think there is no other way. They give themselves up to miserable emotions when they should be practising their positive virtues. Sidney Smith found the following scrap in a newspaper, given as a recipe for happiness, and read it every morning, and found it a good promoter of happiness:—

"When you rise in the morning, form the resolution to make the day a happy one to a fellow-creature. It is easily done; a left-off garment to the one who needs it; a kind word to the sorrowful, encouraging expression to the striving,—trifles as light as air in themselves,—will do at least for the 24 hours. And if you are young, depend upon it, it will tell when you are old; and if you are old, rest assured it will send you gently and happily down the stream of time to eternity. By the most simple arithmetical sum, look at the result. If you send one person, only one, happily through each day, that is 365 in the course of the year, and suppose you live 40 years only after you commence this course of medicine, you have made 14,600 beings happy, at all events for a time.

SIZE OF FIRST WATCH.

At first the watch was about the size of a dessert plate. It had weights, and was used as a "pocket clock," The earliest known of the modern name occurs in the record of 1552, which mentions Edward VI. had "one larum" or watch of iron gilt, with two plummets of lead. The first watch may readily be supposed to be of rude execution. The first great improvement—the substitution of springs for weights—was in 1560. The earliest springs were not coiled, but only straight pieces of steel. Early watches had only one hand, and, being wound up twice a day, they could not be expected to keep the time nearer than fifteen or twenty minutes in twelve hours. The dials were of silver and brass; and the case had no crystals, but opened at the back and front, and were four or five inches in diameter. A plain watch cost more than $1,500, and, after one was ordered, it took a year to make it.—Jewelry News.

A brave, active, intelligent terrier one day discovered a monkey, belonging to an itinerant organ grinder, seated upon a bank within the grounds, and at once made a dash for him. The monkey, who was attired in jacket and hat, awaited the onset in such undisturbed tranquility that the dog halted within a few feet of him to reconnoiter. Both animals took a long, steady stare at each other, but the dog evidently was recovering from his surprise and was about to spring for the intruder. At this critical juncture, the monkey, who had remained perfectly quiet hitherto, raised his paw and gracefully saluted by lifting his hat. The effect was magical. The dog's head and tail dropped, and he sneaked off to the house refusing to leave it until his polite but mysterious guest had departed.

The length of a flash of lightning is generally under estimated. The longest known was measured by M. P. Petitt of Toulousse. This flash was ten and a half miles in length. The longest interval ever remarked between the flash and the report was 92 seconds, which would correspond with a distance of fourteen miles. Direct researches have show that a storm is seldom heard at a greater disance than seven to ten miles, while the average are barely heard over four or five miles off. This fact is curious, as cannou may be distinctly heard double or treble that distance, and in equal cases much better.

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 7, 1887.

PRESIDENT and Mrs. Cleveland ought to be having a good time on their western trip. St. Louis, Chicago and the other places visited thus far have done themselves proud in their honor, and thousands flock to see and cheer them at every point.

EX-GOVERNOR WILLIAM B. WASHBURN of Greenfield died suddenly Wednesday in the city hall at Springfield, while attending the session of the American Board. Mr. Washburn had served the state in Congress and also in the United States Senate, and filled every position faithfully and well. He was in his 68th year.

CORNELIUS VANDERBILT'S new building for railroad men, on Madison avenue, New York, was formally opened on Monday. It cost about $100,000, and is a fine structure, with a large library and reading room, a handsome lecture room, class rooms, gymnasium, bowling alley, restaurant, bedrooms, and every other convience to make the men comfortable. The influences of such charity are far reaching and lasting.

THE meeting of the American Board in Springfield this week has been one of the most important ones in many years, and called out a large attendance. The policy of the board in refusing to send out missionaries who believe in a probation after death was sustained yesterday by a vote of 95 to 42. Rev. Dr. Richard S. Storrs of Brooklyn was chosen president by the largest vote ever recorded in the board's history.

MR. LOVERING, the Democratic candidate for governor, attempts a criticism of the administration of state affairs in his letter of acceptance, but the only thing he can find to say is the foolish assertion that the dominant party "has passed laws which in effect invade the constitutional rights of the people and obstruct them in their endeavor to reach the ballot box to record their protests." In view of the utterances of the Democratic platform in regard to the civil service reform, he wisely makes no allusion to that subject.

THE second race between the Volunteer and the Thistle last Friday was a repetition of the first one, the American yacht leaving her rival far behind and coming in some two miles ahead, an easy winner by 11 minutes 58$\frac{3}{4}$ seconds. There was plenty of wind for this race, so the conditions were just as desired, and it was a handsome victory for the Yankee center-board. For a yacht that had been so loudly heralded as the wonder of the age the Thistle made a very poor showing; but the bonny Scotchmen do not propose to give up the battle yet, and are already making plans for the building of another yacht for next year's races. The London News is convinced that it will be necessary to abandon the keel for the center-board, in order to stand any chance of winning the cup.

THE Republicans of Springfield are talking as calmly of nominating a Springfield man for senator next week as if the other towns in the district had no interest in the matter, their only difficulty being their inability to agree on the man. Col. Metcalf would like to try a winter in the senatorial end of the state house, and Lawyer Lathrop is credited with a longing to do the same thing once more. There are others doubtless who are ready to sacrifice themselves in a similar manner; but there is some friction in the Springfield camp, and it may be found desirable to go outside of the city for a candidate upon whom all can agree. In that event Eastern Hampden will have no difficulty in helping the Springfield brethren to the right man.

ATTORNEY GENERAL SHERMAN took his place upon the bench of the superior court last Saturday, and Gov. Ames promptly appointed Andrew J. Waterman, the Republican nominee for attorney general, to that office, while James R. Dunbar of Westfield was made district attorney for Hampden and Berkshire counties. Mr. Dunbar's name has been frequently mentioned in connection with this office, and his eminent fitness for the position is recognized on every hand,—so much so, indeed, that there probably is little question about his receiving the nomination for it at the approaching convention. There are other men in the district well adapted for the position, but with a competent man just fitted into place there is no reason for making a change simply to accommodate the desire of somebody for the office.

THE truth of the old adge that "there's many a slip," etc., was illustrated afresh at the councillor convention at Chester Wednesday. Senator Phillips of Springfield was confidently expecting a call to step up to a higher office, but he neglected to look closely enough after the very essential matter of seeing that there were delegates enough on hand to give him the call, and he accordingly "got left." The informal ballot resulted as follows: Whole number of votes, 144; Orlando Mason 4, Henry M. Phillips 67, Levi J. Gunn of Greenfield 72. The formal ballot followed, giving Mr. Gunn one more vote and the nomination. Mr. Phillips may have the consoling reflection that if the missing Hampden county delegates had been present "It might have been." Mr. Gunn has been in the senate, and will make a good councilor. It was decided to hold future conventions at Springfield.

A young woman in Cleveland, O., recently received a severe shock of electricity while visiting an electric light establishment, which has transformed her from a young, handsome girl into an old woman, with gray hair, thin and wrinkled form and cracked voice. Physicians say the vitality of the principal nerves of the spine was also destroyed.

Rev. William F. Davis, who was convicted three times of violating a city ordinance by preaching on Boston common, and was dismissed from court with the understanding that he was not to preach there again, resumed his discourses last Sunday.

Wednesday was Palmer's day at the meeting of the American Board in Springfield, the majority of those who attended from this village going that day. Some six extra cars were filled at this station for the morning train.

An effort is being made to have all the stores in the place close Tuesday and Thursday evenings at 6 o'clock except during holiday week. This is a good idea, and one which ought to have the hearty coöperation of every business man.

A collision between two frieght trains on the Boston & Albany road at Grafton, early Tuesday morning, considerably delayed all the forenoon passanger trains, especially those from Boston. The first train west from this section was at 11.20.

Palmer Division No. 7, A. O. H., has made choice of these officers: President, J. J. Moynahan; vice president, J. T. Donovan; corresponding secretary, T. J. O'Connor; financial secretary, Hugh Hanley; treasurer, M. J. Dillon. The annual ball will be held in a short time.

A genuine mermaid from the South Sea Islands was discovered on our streets Wednesday, having evidently seen hard usage since arriving in this cold climate. W. R. Milligan was the good Samaritan who finally cared for the stranger, and will have her on exhibition at his store to-morrow.

The Palmer ball team has probably played its last game of the season, unless a game can be arranged to take place on the home grounds with the Southbridge nine. The Palmer nine has won 17 and lost only three games during the season, which is a pretty good average. The game arranged for with the Thorndikes last Saturday was given up because the Thorndike manager insisted upon an umpire who was obnoxious to the Palmers, and also refused to allow the use of men who have been playing steadily in the Palmer team for some time.

There is some prospect that at no distant day Palmer will be able to boast of a handsome little park among her many other attractions. There is a piece of ground which is most admirably suited for such a purpose—centrally located, on a corner, on good ground—and although not large would make a beautiful spot at a little expense. The owner (who declines to have his name mentioned) has suggested that it would be a splendid spot for a park, if not a public one, then a private one, and it is evident that by a little coöperation among the citizens of the place we might have a pleasant little beauty-spot in our midst.

Numerous inquiries are heard as to the whereabouts of the electric fire alarm. The alarm is all ready, and but for the non-appearance of the electric lights, would have been in operation long ago. It is intended to string the wire, which will be a light one, on the top of the electric light poles, and the committee feared the stringing of the heavy wire for the lights after the light alarm wire was up would misplace the latter, so they have been waiting until the other wire was up, so as not to be obliged to do their work over again. At the same time the taxpayers have paid out their money for the alarm, and think they ought to have it.

There are a good many Palmer people who will probably attend the concerts of Theodore Thomas's orchestra at Springfield, October 31st and November 28th. Many more would doubtless attend if they could get home the same night with any degree of comfort. By the way, it would pay the Boston & Albany road to put on a theater train, during the dramatic season, leaving Springfield at say 11 p. m. and running through to West Brookfield. There are many theater-lovers in the towns between these points who would be only too glad to go to Springfield frequently if they could have some such convenient way of returning to their homes after the performance.

According to the daily papers a "large petition, signed by many prominent citizens," has been circulated, calling another town meeting to reconsider the high school vote of the meeting two weeks ago. The "large petition" contained just 41 names, nearly all from Thorndike, and with the exception of E. G. Murdock, H. T. Bishop, A. M. Bond, George Mooers and Morris McCormick, probably not half a dozen of the signers pay a tax on $1000 worth of property, the majority of them being poll-tax payers only, and unmarried. The petition was presented to the selectmen, who have called a town meeting for one week from next Monday, the principal articles in the warrant being to see if the town will reconsider the vote to expend $12,000 for a high school building, and buy the old Methodist church property at the Four Corners for a high school.

F. A. Bowen was chairman and J. I. Milliken secretary of the Prohibition caucus Saturday evening. The following delegates to the several conventions were chosen: Eighth councilor at Chester, Thursday, Charles F. Gegenheimer, O. A. Parent, William Merriam, F. A. Upham, E. J. Wood, M. M. Thomas and F. H. Proctor. The same gentlemen were also appointed delegates to a convention of the Prohibitionists of the 12th Congressional district to choose delegates to the national convention in '88. County and senatorial at Springfield to-day—Rev. J. W. Fulton, F. A. Bowen, G. F. Wright, E. F. Shaw, Frank Clark, Geo. Shumway and F. W. Lavene. Representative—Dr. W. H. Stowe, Hubbard Lawrence, G. F. Wright, John Squier, J. I. Milliken, F. A. Bowen, A. A. Warriner, E. T. Potter, O. A. Parent, Chas. Armstrong, R. S. Milliken, C. N. Hanson. Town committee—C. F. Gegenheimer, G. F. Wright, A. A. Warriner, R. S. Milliken and Frank H. Proctor.

A PUBLIC HALL NEEDED.

That there is a need of some better place for the giving of entertainments in this village is manifestly apparent. For a time after Wales Hall was converted into lodge rooms people went to the rink rather than stay at home, because there was no other place to go to. The time has now come when they prefer to stay at home rather than stumble through the darkness of Walnut, Pleasant and Park streets to get to the rink. Then, who cares to attend an entertainment in such an unsightly place? Poorly lighted, with no interior decoration on the bare walls and beams, with a small stage and scanty scenery, people who appreciate good acting and good plays do not care to spend an evening in such a place, especially in view of its location. To be sure a local entertainment will draw a fair house, but nothing to what it would be under different circumstances. Then, too, really first-class companies, presenting new and popular plays, will not stop at Palmer on account of such poor accommodations, when otherwise they would be glad to do so. A public hall or opera house, located near Main street, would bring first-class artists and plays here, and draw out a large number of people who now stay at home. There are several good locations—A hall built on the vacant space back of J. M. Converse's frame business blocks on Main street could easily be reached by a passageway from that street; there is a vacant lot of the Boston & Albany road's on Main street, also the Feeney lot on Central street. A good hall or opera house on any of these spots, with a good stage and a fair amount of scenery, would net its owner a good interest on his investment, and be greatly appreciated by all in the place who ever attend a public entertainment.

WALES.

Several Wales people have attended the meetings in Springfield this week.

H. A. McFarland goes to Monson next Tuesday to sell a lot of property at auction.

The quarterly meeting of the trustees of the Wales Savings Bank was held Wednesday. Warren Shaw, Wm. L. Webber, Geo. S. Rogers and H. A. McFarland are the investing committee.

The Otis Co. has made a great improvement in the looks of Front street by taking down the fence in front of the block occupied by Paymaster Buell and Mr. Cheeney.

Good Cheer Division of the Sons of Temperance has chosen these officers for the coming quarter: W. P., Jennie Kendrick; W. A., E. Warriner; R. S., Nettie Thayer; F. S., F. A. Upham; treasurer, Mrs. F. A. Upham; C., Katie Downie; assistant conductor, M. Hunt; I. S., Barbara Downie; O. S., S. B. Barnes.

A small but appreciative audience listened very attentively to the talk on temperance which George W. Penniman gave at the Union church Tuesday evening. In his lecture Mr. Penniman, who is a very able and interesting speaker, made some very fine points, which might be regarded as "hits" on some of our local politicians. He stated that whoever voted the Republican or Democratic ticket voted for rum. He was very severe in his remarks in regard to those members of the clergy who were temperance men but not Prohibitionists.

THORNDIKE.

Agent W. C. Greene is away on a short vacation.

John. A. Wright has a new clerk in the person of Augustus Goodman.

If the foot walk and railing of the iron bridge were repaired it might save a broken limb.

Contractor Baker of Palmer has the contract for the sixty-foot extension on the dye house.

A large number of our citizens attended the meetings of the American Board at Springfield this week, and report them as being very interesting.

Samuel Sargent has the sympathy of the community in the loss of two of his children this week, one of them dying of diphtheria and the other from the result of burns caused by falling into a pail of boiling water last week.

WEST WARREN.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Cross were in town this week.

Dr. V. St. Germain has moved into the Elwell house.

George Allen is building a house on his lot on Main street.

Welcome Bowdoin has been visiting his uncle, Daniel Bowdoin.

Mrs. David Kennedy and son returned this week from Europe.

Mr. Joseph Davis is spending a week with friends in New Braintree.

Liveryman Handfield has bought the Blair residence of Mrs. S. P. Robbins.

Overseer James Grant has been presented with a fine silver watch by the weavers in No. 3 mill.

John Rhombeau, formerly of this village, now of West Hartford, Conn., spent Sunday with friends in town.

It is reported that C. C. Chapman, overseer of the weave room at No. 4, is to take charge of the weave room at No. 3.

Francis Holmes was thrown while riding horseback Tuesday afternoon, and the horse stepping on him cut a severe gash in his leg.

The ladies of the Methodist church gave a clam chowder supper in the church vestry Wednesday night. The entertainment that followed was thoroughly enjoyed.

Mr. Loiselle, of the firm of Herbert & Loiselle, has returned from a three-weeks' sojourn in Canada. He reports everything in that part of the country to be very dry, no rain having fallen for many weeks.

George W. Maxfield has resigned his position as foreman of spinning in No. 3 mill, and will move his family to Holyoke, where he is to take charge of the large boarding house belonging to the Holyoke Water Power Co. The house has already between 85 and 90 boarders. Mr. and Mrs. Maxfield were closely identified with the church interests here, and will be missed by a large circle of friends.

MONSON.

E. P. Burley sells his farm, stock, etc., at auction next Tuesday.

A. A. Gage is laying the foundation for a barn on his Main street premises.

"Truth" is reminded that we cannot notice anonymous communications.

Mrs. Waterman of Michigan is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dwight King.

The temperance lecture by Hon. John B. Finch of Nebraska, announced for last evening, had to be given up on account of the death of Mr. Finch in Boston Monday evening, he dropping death from heart disease in the Eastern depot on his return from Lynn, where he had been to make a temperance address.

With all of our boasted public improvements and wealth, there is probably not another town in the state of its size where the sidewalks and cross walks are in as poor condition as in Monson. In looking through the village only one crosswalk can be found, and that a private one. We might well imitate some of our neighboring towns and appropriate a certain sum each year for this much-needed improvment.

Last Sabbath evening the Congregational Sunday-school gave a concert which was worthy of note. "Our Country," a responsive exercise, was exceedingly well rendered. The singing,—particularly the hymn, "Only an Armor Bearer," under the direction of Mr. Lane, deserves special mention. In closing Rev. Dr. Dana, of St. Paul, Minn., Rev. Joseph Tufts, and Prof. Dustan made a few remarks upon the missionary work in America.

A SURPRISE THAT WAS A SURPRISE.

Last Saturday was the fifteenth anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Harlow Chapin, and it afforded their friends an opportunity of showing them in a small but practical way something of the esteem and love that goes out to them from their neighbors. Accordingly on Saturday evening, despite the rain and mud, Mrs. Chapin's home was stealthily invaded by a large and joyful company who came to pay their respects and show their gratitude. As symbols of what the heart could not tell they brought a large brocaded plush chair and hassock, and a silver pickle jar. These were presented to the astonished couple by a few appropriate remarks from Rev. Mr. Priest, to which Mr. Chapin feelingly replied. After a season of visiting the party broke up amid much merriment and good cheer. The Chapins have been in town seven years, and by their lively interest in, and by their willingness and ability in rendering efficient aid to all good movements, they have won the respect and esteem of all. May there be many returns of this happy anniversary.

THE METHODIST CHURCH VESTRY RE DEDICATED.

The re-dedication of the vestry of the M. E. church took place last Sunday, Rev. George Eaton preaching from the text: "I would rather be a door-keeper in the house of the Lord than to dwell in the tents of wickedness." A "love feast" was held in the evening. Monday evening a free collation was served from 6 to 7.45, followed by a very enjoyable entertainment, with the following program:

Piano Duet, Qui Vive.
Misses Ella Bills and Nellie Squier.
Song, "It was a Dream."
Mrs. A. D. Noreross.
Colloquy: "The Meeting of the Muses; or, Crowning of Florence Nightingale.

"Cradle Song," Miss Mary Feather.
Violin Solo, "Mocking Bird."
Mr. Claffee.
Song, "Speed On."
Charles Orcutt.
Orchestra.
Song, "The Nightingale Trill."
Mrs. Norcross.
Orchestra.

After a short intermission several speeches were made upon the general theme of "The Town of Monson." Educational Work—The Academy, was presented by Prof. Dustan; Business Interests—Agriculture, by Mr. W. M. Tucker, and Professions—Medicines, by Dr. J. P. Rand. By request we give Dr. Rand's remarks in full:

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen: You have called upon me to respond in behalf of a class upon whose lips the community have set the seal of silence. It is not considered good taste for physicians to talk much. They must be known by their works, and if they have no works with which to commend themselves to favor, they may as well make up their minds that they will never be known. Physicians are, however, sometimes talked about. They have even been known to talk about one another. So notorious is this fact that a disagreement among them is expected. Even the attendants of President Garfield wrangled and came to blows over petty grievances. When such incidents are observed in high life we are inclined to think that Dr. Holland was more than half right when he said: "As for the medical profession, I tremble to think how many enter it, because they have neither piety enough to preach nor brains enough to practice law. When I think," he continues, "of the great army of little men who are yearly commissioned to go forth into the world with a case of sharp knives in one hand and a magazine of drugs in the other, I heave a sigh for the human race." Of course the sighs of any great man must have actual weight, nor would we reduce it in any way by proclaiming the fact that the Doctor was "one of them" himself. It is not strange that he should have criticised a profession which, for twelve long months, in the city of Springfield, failed to afford him the means of support. The Doctor was human and a man of great ability, and he decided that it was better for him to "throw physic to the dogs," and teach a district school down South among the darkies, than to practice medicine in a place where a diet was nothing but "the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Now it is natural for every man to magnify his own office, and while I would not be unjust, or make any unfair comparisons between the professions, I am bound to follow the custom and stand up for mine. The pulpit, I know, may make man happier and better, it may promise a heavenly home beyond the grave, but never while health and friends remain will it render a mortal soul in any hurry to get there. Lawyers, too, are bound to defend the right, but wealth will make the blackest crimes appear a little gray, and surely the gray should have an advocate; and if it be true as the poet Tupper affirms when he says: "Verily there is nothing so true that the damps of error hath not warped it. Verily there is nothing so false that there is not a sparkle of truth in it," the spark of truth in the furnace of lies has ever been worthy of some small lawyer's notice. But there is a condition common to all, when the solace of the pulpit nor pleas of the bar is the solace that will please most. It is when insidious disease steals a march upon you. When "the eyes Pauguk glare upon you in the darkness," when the bullet of the assassin is lodged in your vitals, when the cry is "millions of money for an inch of time," it is then and there that this "great army of little men" without "piety," without "brains," and I might also add without money, become the source of all your hopes and confidence. To their trust you commit your most guarded secrets, by their advice you ingest the most nauseating drugs, at their fears you tremble, and exult with joy when they speak of hope. The physician's office is sacred! He stands at the alpha and omega of life. He watches its fevers of summer and its chills of winter. Where the colored flag warns the priest and counsels of danger, his duty calls him to go. Where the playne and pestilence abound.

"He dares a fate the bravest well might shun,
Nor finds reward save only Heaven's: Well done."

Mr. Chairman: In behalf of the medical fraternity of this town I extend to you the congratulations of the hour. Be assured that they rejoice with you in your present good fortune, and hope for your continued prosperity.

WARE AND VICINITY.

H. O. Packard has gone to Missouri, to be gone about a month.

The church at Ware Center has voted to call Rev. Samuel E. Evans of Hanover as their pastor.

F. L. Bassett has put into his jewelry store a fine regulator, and the standard time may be had there at any time.

C. H. Ormsby has purchased back the Oriental Tea Store, which he opened and sold to Jerry Linson some time ago.

To-day is the last day in which application for naturalization papers can be made, in order to secure a hearing this fall.

The Ware Cadet Band has revised its by-laws and rules and regulations, and will post copies of them in its band room.

Rev. G. W. Kent of Halifax, N. S., is to preach at the Unitarian church on next Sunday, and also on the following Sunday.

Lizzie Whitehall, supported by a good company, is to appear in the town hall this evening in the drama "Mountain Queen."

The Ware River News, to be published by R. E. Capron, is expected to be issued about the 20th. The press arrived this week.

Horato Fisherdick, Edwin E. Richardson and John Dady have been drawn as jurors for the October term of civil court at Northampton.

Two liquor raids have been made the past week, on Nelson King and Joseph Labunton. Their cases are expected to come up to-day.

Emma M. Holden returned Wednesday from the West, where she has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Gould, formerly of this town.

Seventy advertisers have been secured for the paper which Rev. James Boyle is to issue during the fair. Work on it will be begun soon.

Dr. J. A. LaGage, a French physician, formerly of Millbury, has taken the office lately used by Dr. Chouinard, and is to practice medicine here.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Mongrain, who were recently married, were presented with an elegant rattan chair with plush cushion, by their shopmates.

Duncan Clark's Female minstrels are booked for the town hall on Wednesday the 12th inst. They come with a reputation of giving a good show.

At the oyster supper given by the ladies of the Episcopal Society last Friday evening, there was a good attendance, and the society cleared $29 36.

Miss M. Storrs, who has been in the millinery business here for many years, longer than any other, will have her opening of choice goods to-morrow.

An extension of Vigeant street was laid out Wednesday and damages for land estimated at $450. It would seem rather high, but the survey cut several lots which had been sold.

The Farmers' Club of Ware Center will hold the first meeting of the season next Monday evening, when it is expected arrangements will be made for meetings through the winter.

J. C. Dexter is entering a new department of the photograph business, that of making enlargements direct from the negatives from which card or cabinet photographs have been made.

George P. Campbell is building a large blacksmith and carriage shop in the rear of his old shop on North street. When the old shop is removed it will make a good site for another business block on that street.

E. D. Howard, the jeweler, has on exhibition in his window twelve very neat silver-plated drinking cups, which he has presented to the town to be placed with the drinking fountains that have just been put up.

Monday and Tuesday evenings the town hall was well filled to witness the dramas presented by the Seymour-Stratton company. The audience seemed well pleased. The proceeds were for the benefit of the G. A. R. post, and $51 was cleared.

Hathaway Brothers, contractors, have brought suit against C. H. Trench to recover cost of building a dwelling house for him. Mr. Trench claims they have not fulfilled their contract. A hearing was given last Saturday, and the case continued.

William W. Barnes, while chipping a piece of iron with a cold chisel this week, had a piece fly into his right eye, so injuring it that it is feared he will loose the sight of it. By the advice of local doctors he went to Boston Wednesday for treatment.

George Joslyn's house, the old Edwards place, in the northwest part of the town, was burned Tuesday with all of the household furniture. The house was insured for $400, and the furniture for $200. The cause of the fire is supposed to be accidental.

The new list of voters of the town has been posted this week. It contains 802 names, but will be revised twice more before election. The greatest number of any one name is that of Brown, of which there are 12. There are 19 each of Cummings, Marsh, McBride and Shea, 8 each of Kennedy, McMahon and Smith, 6 each of Barlow, Clark, Gilbert, Kelly, McArdle, McGrath and Murphy.

It is rumored that a train will be run on the Central Mass. road to the cattle show at Belchertown next Tuesday, but at the time of writing we are unable to ascertain if it is true, the objection being that the construction trains at work on the road would have to lay off to be out of the way. The track is already laid to a point beyond Belchertown.

The Worcester and Hampshire district Democratic senatorial convention is to be held at the town hall, Ware, on Thursday, October 13th, to nominate a candidate for state senator and elect a member of the state central committee. These districts include the towns of Athol, Barre, Dana, Gardner, Hardwick, Hubbardston, Petersham, New Braintree, Oakham, Phillipston, Rutland, Templeton, Amherst, Belchertown, Hadley, Pelham, Prescott, South Hadley and Ware. It is desired that Mr. P. L. Keefe of Ware be notified as soon as possible how many will probably attend, that necessary arrangements can be made to entertain them.

On Wednesday and Thursday next occurs the 18th annual fair of the Stafford Agricultural Society, the last, but not least, of the fairs in these parts. This society never advertise more than they perform. Prof. O. R. Gleason, the "King of horse trainers," will give an exhibition of his ability to subdue vicious and ugly horses, and his own celebrated horses "Hamlet," Mustang, "Texas Nell" and the pure White Arabian stallion "War Eagle." This is probably Prof. Gleason's last exhibition in this country, as he sails for Europe the following week. The poultry show will exceed that of former years. The bench show will be very complete, entries from Pennsylvania, Ohio and other states are already made, which include some of the finest dogs in this country. The hook and ladder tournament will be an interesting feature, some of the finest companies in Massachusetts and Connecticut being expected to compete. There will be athletic games, bicycle race, feats of strength by the modern Sampson, Edward Stickney, of Albany, N. Y., and a dog race by a kennel of racing dogs. For the horse racing the entries exceed those of any other fair in New England this season. The running races will be very interesting. A fine display of neat cattle, sheep and swine is expected, and prominent among them will be the herd of thoroughbred Holsteins of Benj. Hare of Barre Plains, Mass.; S. Moore of St. Johnsbury, Vt., exhibits a pair of working oxen weighing over 7000 pounds. The judgment of such men as T. S. Gould, secretary of the

JOTTINGS FROM THE HUB.

From our Special Correspondent.

SPRINGFIELD, Oct. 5, 1887.

The great event of the week warrants me in changing my date line from Boston to Springfield, in speaking first of the meeting of the American Board here, and then in mentioning Boston matters later. Enough has occurred already, before the meeting is half through, to show that the conservative element is largely in the ascendancy, though the progressives have every possible advantage in the location of the meeting. Conservatism regarding the future probation doctrine is much stronger in the West than in the East. Andover adherents are more numerous in Boston than elsewhere, and the proportion decreases with distance Westward. Up to this noon nearly every corporate member of the board from Massachusetts was present, and the total was 158 out of about 220 in all. That is the largest number in the history of the board. At Des Moines last year there were only 89 present, and the highest number before recorded was 129. So the progressives are in position to make a better showing according to their strength in the denomination than are the conservatives.

Last year on a test vote there were 24 members out of 70 voting who were in sympathy with Prof. Egbert C. Smyth of Andover in his views of future probation. This year they expect to poll a larger proportion, and the test will come on the candidate who will be voted for in place of Dr. E. K. Alden on the prudential committee. The progressives say that they expect the Alden men will carry the day, but they think that public opinion is on their side and that Dr. Alden will be forced by that opinion to retire within two years. They have no idea that any split in the denomination will occur. The only effect in practical consequences of the triumpth of the conservative view during the next year will be, they say, that the contributions to the board will fall off. They believe they will surely succeed hereafter. So they are waiting patiently, biding their time and not having any idea of flying off or doing anything rash.

The death of ex-Gov. Washburn on the stage this forenoon was shockingly sudden. He was sitting with the other corporate members, and his wife was in the audience. He was stricken with apoplexy and died in a few minutes. The body was taken to the police station in the basement of the city hall, (where the meeting was being held), and afterward to the city morgue, where it could be cared for better. Later it was taken to Greenfield. Singularly, the undertaker whose services were required was also named Washburn. As the body was taken to the morgue, the hat and umbrella of the dead man were put in and carried along too. What a pathos and eloquence there was in the silent articles! Such little things made the suddenness of the blow seem all the more real.

To-day's report by the prudential committee (who were appointed last year as a special committee on the subject,) that it was inexpedient to call councils to pass upon the theological fitness of missionary applicants, was received with much approval by the conservative wing of the audience, who, indeed, seemed to be a large part of the whole gathering. The report was prepared by the Rev. Dr. Thompson, and is regarded by its friends as exhaustive and unanswerable. All this afternoon was devoted to debate upon it, and after the report had been formally accepted (without indorsing its argument), its adverse recommendation was adopted by 110 to 19. This, however, does not prove that the progressives are in so small a majority on the question of future probation.

Yesterday afternoon the report of the prudential committtee upon the home department of the board was read by Dr. Alden. It is a strong defense of the course of that committee in refusing to send out missionaries who do not believe in the doctrine of future probation, and gives very fully the correspondence in the cases of the three men whom the committee have refused to commission. The disposal of the report is of much importance; the committee to whom it has been referred is said by a moderate member of the board to be fair minded.

Among the latest arrivals from Europe was Rev. Dr. Henry M. Dexter, of the Congregationalist, who is here at the board meeting. With him on the Catalonia was Asa French, who is of the council for the complainants in the Andover matter. Dr. Dexter is strong, but he is clearly getting on in years and his step is becoming heavy.

The contribution to the board of $2400 from the Swedes of this country for use in relieving the famine sufferers in Asia Minor, is an example to the rest of us to contribute liberally. The money was raised through the Swedish newspaper, the Chicago Bladet.

Western Massachusetts has been quite prominent in the recent changes in the state law department. The appointment of Mr. Waterman to be attorney general in place of Gen. Sherman has been criticised, but I think the common sense of the public will approve Gov. Ames. It is as certain as anything political can be that Mr. Waterman will be elected attorney general by the people. Then why should there be two changes in the office when only one will answer? Ex-Senator Dunbar was summoned to Boston last Friday by telegraph by the governor in regard to being made district attorney in Waterman's place. He agreed to accept, and so was nominated and confirmed. He was a true friend to Mr. Pillsbury in the recent contest, so his promotion comes to him in spite of his self-sacrifice.

We are getting to have anti-poverty societies and anarchist meetings in Boston, and things may be unsettled for a while, but thus far I recall no instance of men throwing the laws of the universe out of gear, and I have no fear of the consequences. It is a historical truth, however, that the men who oppose those laws surely get nipped, and it may happen again.

LANDON.

October Magazines.

The frontispiece of the October Century is a striking portrait of Harriet Beecher Stowe, engraved by T. Johnson from a photograph by Sarony. This portrait is apropos of a paper by James Lane Allen, entitled "Mrs. Stowe's 'Uncle Tom at Home Kentucky'," which recounts the life of the Kentucky slave of the old time. "The American game of Foot Ball" is the subject of a paper by Professor Alexander Johnson of Princeton College, in which the development of the Rugby game on this side of the Atlantic is described, and interesting aspects of the game are considered. This paper is admirably illustrated with spirited engravings by Irving R. Wiles. Mr. Steadman contributes a paper of criticism, entitled "Twelve Years of British Song." "The Hundredth Man," by Mr. Stockton, reaches its conclusion in the present number with a denouement which will be somewhat of a surprise to many readers. The third and last part of Mr. Harris's novelette, "Azalia," is also given. The short story of the number is by John Heard, Jr., a new name in magazine literature, and is entitled "Hand Car 412. C. P. R." The Lincoln History consists of a concise recital of the Session Movement as exhibited in Congress, in the Cabinet of Buchanan, and in the correspondence of certain of the Southerd leaders. A chapter is devoted to the secession of South Carolina and to affairs in Charleston Harbor, and another to the Commissioners from South Carolina, and the growth of the movement in the different states is rapidly traced. The November part will deal with the President-elect at Springfield. The papers in the War Series consist of "Marching through Georgia and the Carolinas," by Captain Daniel Oakey; "Sherman's March from Savannah to Bentonville," by General Henry W. Slocum; and "Battle Bentonville," by General Wade Hampton; these papers presenting a graphic view of Sherman's operations after Atlanta, which is reinforced by a number of interesting pictures, many of which are from war-time photographs or sketches. In "Topics of the Time" are editorial articles entitled "Soldier and Citizen," "Personal Records of the War," "The Last Hope of the Mormons," "The Jury System," and "Shall Immigration be Restricted." There are "Open Letters" on "Christian Union and Baptism," by Rev. Herbert W. Hawkes; "Christian Union and Pending Public Questions," by Rev. William Chauncy Langdon; and a note on "Secret Societies in College," by Rev. Charles S. Robinson.

Scribner's Magazine for October has for its leading article a richly illustrated description of the "Paris School of Fine Arts," by Henry O. Avery, who is a graduate of that institution, and therefore writes from abundant knowledge and with true appreciation. This number contains the seventh and concluding installment of the Thackeray Letters, which have so completely won the praise and even the affection of the reading public in this country and England. "French Traits—Sense and Sentiment," by W. C. Brownell, is an admirable essay, and Professor N. S. Shaler contributes another of the notable papers in his series relating to the surface of the earth and allied topics, this time on "Caverns and Cavern Life." The number also contains a timely and thoughtful article on "Municipal Government," by Gamaliel Bradford. The serial story, "Seth's Brother's Wife," by Harold Frederick (which will conclude in November), contains in this installment a very strong scene between Milton and Annie, and "The Sacred Flame of Torin Ji," Mr. E. H. House's story of Japanese life, which was begun in September, is concluded in this number most happily. Octave Thanet contributes a strong and pathetic story of the Arkansas river-bottoms, entitled "The Mortgage on Jeffy," which contains a very original motive and fine character drawing. Under the title of "In the Village of Virger," Mr. Duncan C. Scott contributes several charming character-sketches of Canadian village life. The poetry of this number includes a delicate tribute to Thackeray by H. C. Bunner, entitled "On Reading Certain Published Letters of W. M. T.;" a sonnet called "Fredom," by Elyot Weld; and poems by Graham R. Tomson and Charles Edwin Markham,

The October number of Harper's Magazine is wonderfully rich with drawings by Abbey, Frost, Pyle, Reinhart, Fenn, Gibson, Du Maurier, and copies of Sargents painting. The opening article, Our Summer's Outing," is an autoblographical story by Kate Field, telling the comical and exasperating experiences of a vacation party in a central New York village. Henry James contributes a skilful criticism of the young artist, John S. Sargent, and Wither's "Love Song" provides a delicate text for nine exquisite pictures by Edwin A. Abbey, one of which is the frontispiece. The smallest of American Republics (Costa Rica), is interestingly described by the author of the article on Chili in the last number, with an abundance of illustrations. Bishop Hurst writes of "A Dead Portuguese City in India," and the fourth part of Mrs. Davis's article, "Here and There in the South," penetrates into the bayou region ot Louisiana. Blanche Willis Howard's bright Novelette, "Tony, the Maid," is concluded. The poems of the number are "Aaron Burr's Wooing," by E. C. stedman, illustrated by Howard Pyle; "A Mood," by Amelie Rivers; "To a Most Comely Lady," by Louisa Imogen Guiney. A masterly little love story by Miss Woolson, entitled "At the Chateau of Corinne," centers upon the famous Swiss home of Madame De Stael. The Easy Chair converses in charming style about Thackeray as a snob, the new regime at Niagara, car-window morals, and Buffalo Bill in England.

The October number of the Eclectic Magazine gives the place of honor to Prince Krapotkine, the celebrated Nihilist, who contributes an article entitled "The Coming Anarchy," in which he exemplifies his expectation of the means by which the philosophy of history will solve the difficult problems now before us. "Ireland's Alternativas" by Lord Thring, is an admirable presentation of the Anglo-Irish question—the most complete and judicial we have yet seen. The poet Swinburne, in a paper, which he calls "Whitmania," severely attacks the claims made for Walt Whitman by his friends. Wagner's "Letters to Frau Eliza Wille," throw light on the great composer's life and character, and are of great interest in themselves. Arnot Reid compares the English and American press, and Mr. W. H. Mallock continues his suggestive papers on "Wealth and the Working Classes." A second article by the great painter, Holman Hunt, finishes his interesting description of his painting one of his greatest pictures, and his Syrian adventures therein. The two closing articles are among the best in an excellent number, "The Roman Matron and the Roman Lady," by Mrs. E. Lynn Linton, a capital study of the status and character of women in old Rome; and "The Island of Serk; a Sermon in Stones," by Sophia Weisse, a charming desoription of one of the most wild and picturesque of the Channel Islands. The shorter articles are well selected and the editorial department of ordinary interest.

The October Wide Awake will delight the boys who love a humorous story about one of themselves, for in it Maurice Thompson tell an irrisistible stories about one of his own boyish escapades, entitled "My First Voyage." They will also enjoy "A Catskill Bear Story," by Henry Tyrrell. There are also three delightful out-of-door articles: E. S. Brooks' "Football," Grant Allen's "Pitcher-Plant" and Amanda B. Harris' "Indian-Corn Talk." Charles Egbert Craddock concludes the powerful serial of "Keedon Bluffs;" Mrs. Catherwood's Wabash River serial, "The Secrets at Roseladies," takes Sister and the Mound-Diggers too, through strange adventures; Howling Wolf, in Mrs. Champney's Indian serial, "The Lost Medicine of the Utes," goes campaigning with Geronimo; young Vangrift, in "A Young Prince of Commerce," forms a railroad syndicate; Margaret Sydney's Concord paper describes and illustrates the Concord library with its famous treasures, Mr. French's studio where the statue of the "Minute Man" was modeled, and the site of Thoreau's hut at Walden Pond. The biography, in Mrs. Bolton's series "Some Successful Women," is about Miss Alice Freeman, the president of Wellesley college; Mr. Holder, in "Wonder-Wings," has an entertaining chapter on "The Sports and Games of Animals," illustrated by J. C. Beard; the "La Rose Blanche" story, by Mrs. M. E. M. Davis, is about "An African Princess."

Physicians say that there is no remedy for consumption. In some cases this may be correct. We know however of many cures made by Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, and we will guarantee relief.

I have been a sufferer from catarrh for the past eight years. Having tried a number of remedies advertised as "sure cures" without obtaining any relief, I had resolved never to take any other patent medicines, when a friend advised me to try Ely's Cream Balm. I did so with great reluctance, but can now testify with pleasure that after using it for six weeks I believe myself cured. It is a most agreeable remedy—an invaluable balm.—Joseph Stewart, 624 Graud Ave., Brooklyn. 2w18

HOW I FELT.

Why, two years ago I was just about crazy, and no wonder that my wife and children were afraid of me. You just want to suffer with neuralgia with no relief as I did until I used Sulphur Bitters. They cured me, and now my wife says I am as meek as a lamb.—Robert Davis, American House, Boston.

Some Things Learned by Experience,

That a tablespoonful of salt thrown on a coal fire that is low, will cause it to burn up quickly. That you can clean oil cloth with milk and water; while soap and brush will ruin it. That the skin of a boiled egg is the best remedy you can apply to a boil. That you can't cure Rheumatism or Neuralgia without taking Menard's Rheumatic Bullets. That you can buy them of LeGro & Lynde for $1.00 per bottle. cow7

Advice to Mothers.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle. 1y23

PERSONAL.

Mr. N. H. Frohlichstein, of Mobile, Ala., writes: I take great pleasure in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, having used it for a severe attack of Bronchitis and Catarrh. It gave me instant relief and entirely cured me and I have not been afflicted since. I also beg to state that I had tried other remedies with no good result. Have also used Electric Bitters and Dr. King's New Life Pills, both of which I can recommend.

Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, is sold on a positive guarantee. Trial bottle free at LeGro & Lynde's Drug Store. 1y29

WONDERFUL CURES.

W. D. Hoyt & Co., wholesale and retail druggists of Rome, Ga., say: We have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery, Electric Bitters and Bucklen's Arnica Salve for four years. Have never handled remedies that sell as well, or give such universal satisfaction. There have been some wonderful cures effected by these medicines in this city. Several cases of pronounced Consumption have been entirely cured by use of a few bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery, taken in connection with Electric Bitters. We guarantee them always. Sold by LeGro & Lynde. 1y29

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.

THE BEST SALVE in the world for Cuts, Bruises, Sores, Ulcers, Salt Rheum, Fever Sores, Tetter, Chapped Hands, Chilblains, Corns, and all Skin Eruptions, and positively cures Piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For Sale by Legro & Lynde. 1y29

GIVE THEM A CHANCE!

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air passages but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, croup, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else has failed you, you may depend on this for certain. 1y46eow

A Solemn Charge.—"Before God and man, before the church and the world, I impeach intemperance. I charge it with the murder of innumerable souls. In this country, blessed with freedom and plenty, the Word of God and the liberties of true religion, I charge it as the cause—whatever be their source elsewhere—of almost all the poverty, and almost all the crime, and almost all the misery, and almost all the ignorance, and almost all the irreligion that disgrace and afflict the land. 'I am not mad, most noble Festus. I speak the words of truth and soberness.' I do, in my conscience, believe that these intoxicating stimulants have sunk into perdition more men and women than found a grave in that deluge which swept over the highest hill-tops, engulfing a world, of which but eight were saved.—Dr. Guthrie.

It is related of a young minister who was preaching "on trial" in the church at Portmoak, a small parish in Kinaossire, Ireland, that he being to thump the pulpit cushion in a very vigorous way. And as he kept on thumping, a mouse that had found a home somewhere in the pulpit was seen running about on the sounding-board over the speaker's head. Now it so happened that this mouse used always to come out when a certain minister preached, and as he had not preached for six months, the little animal of course had not been seen for that period. When, therefore, the congregation saw that this young man preached so effectively that he had caused the mouse to come forth as before, they accepted the matter as a "sign," and forthwith chose him for their minister.

The other day a bewitching 9-years old did something so outrageously bad, according to the maternal code of good conduct, that the mother declared she would tell her father. The offender knew that her father loved her above all, but she feared the offense would certainly provoke him, to wrath. She begged her mother not to tell him, but the mother insisted on doing so Finally the sly puss, coming to her mother says: "Mamma, if you must tell papa, tell him after I have gone to bed, and let him sleep on it before he talks to me."

THE SOUL SLEEPERS' BOY PREACHER.

The soul sleepers are not strong numerically, but they just now have among them one who is truly wonderful, viewed in whatever light he may be. As far as I can learn this sect is confined to the southern part of the state, and have their strongest settlement in Jefferson county. Boiled down to its simplicity their doctrine is simply this: That when the body dies the soul enters on a state of sleep in which it remains until the final resurrection of the body on the day of judgment, when it arises from the tomb. This re-united body and soul then appears before the throne for judgment.

To judge from the appearances and surroundings the believers in this state are not of the profound and learned class. As far as I could judge from what I could learn, they are unlearned and ignorant, and they certainly have a sleepy look as if both soul and body were more than half asleep. However that may be, they are evidently devout and earnest, and are a simple-minded and simple-mannered people. The peculiar doctrines they teach of the future seem to have affected them in many ways, especially in their habits and manner of living. In Jefferson county, not far from Madison, they have a church and quite a congregation. The pastor of the church—or rather the preacher—is a boy of 10 years of age, and really a wonder. When out of the pulpit he has a sort of far away, simple, and listless look and manner. His clothing is illy cut and poorly made and of the cheapest material, and with his preoccupied look, gives him the appearance of a prematurely aged child. His hair is thick, coarse and uncombed. In the church he sits on one of the front benches, his feet about six inches from the floor, and swinging in regular school boy style. No observer, no matter how attentive he might be, would ever take him for anything more than an ordinary boy. Uninteresting and really stupid as he appears, he has a marvelous and almost inspired conception of words and ideas, or a memory that is equally marvelous, for he preaches sermons that Beecher in his palmiest days might have been proud of. For purity of diction, logical arrangement, and beautiful similes, they are unsurpassed by any pulpit orator of the present day either in this country or in Europe. Neither by act, word or look, does he convey the impression that he is possessed with the idea that he has done anything extraordinary, even after one of his loftiest flights.

There is something about him so earnest, so simple and so childlike that the listener, as he preaches or prays, feels a kind of electric thrill, a creeping of the flesh and a tingling at the roots of the hair. Last Sunday he preached from the fourth verse of the 63d chapter of Isaiah: "For the day of vengeance is in my heart, and the year of my redeemed is come." His father, who is an illiterate man, being scarcely able to read, opened the services by reading the chapter from which the text was taken, the boy meanwhile sitting on the front seat swinging his legs, and apparently unmindful of what was going on around him. When the father concluded his reading he nodded to the boy, who arose and ascended the pulpit. His feet had scarcely touched the pulpit before a wonderful change came him. His listlessness was gone, and in its place was an enthusiastic earnestness seldom found even among the most devoted ministers. He knelt down and led the congregation in prayer. There was a depth, earnestness, pathos and entreaty in that prayer that made it wonderful even beyond the marvelous sermon which followed it. The prayer concluded with the following words spoken in a tone of earnest pathos that reached the hearts of the hearers if it did not the throne of God to whom it was addressed: "Oh, rather look in mercy and love on the sick and afflicted; oh, Lord, regard with sympathy and kindness the poor and afflicted; oh, Father and Lord, look with special favor and tender compassion upon the young men who are here to-day."

His prayer ended he took his place at the desk, his eyes fairly in flames from his communion with his Master, and without hesitation or embarrassment, and in a clear but deeply earnest voice proceeded to elucidate his text. I cannot give even a synopsis of the sermon, but it was clear, logical, forcible, and in some respects unique. In closing he claimed that the last of the prophesies were now being fulfilled and the day of judgment was approaching. He referred to the prophesy as to the time of the end of the world, that children should rise against their parents, and parents against their children, and said that at no time in in the world's history was that more true than to-day, when every paper was loaded down with accounts of parents being murdered by their children, and children by their parents. I cannot say that the sermon was his own composition. The language and ideas were too exalted for his tender years, but even if it was the work of another, his seat of memory in reproducing it and the elecutionary powers displayed were something uncanny. He is a prodigy whichever way it is taken, and his equal does not exist anywhere in the United States.

A Slight Mistake.—"But that is not so bad as to think one is in church when one is at the play. My wife is the daughter of a minister, and had never been in a theater until she came to Boston with me, and I was to meet her and our hostess at the Park theater one night. By some mischance I was late, and flurried and disappointed. The two ladies were ushered down what seemed to the countrywoman an interminable aisle, to the third row of stalls from the front. My wife, as she sank into her seat, dropped her head at once devoutly upon the rail in front. At this moment her companion gasped: "Sara, what are you going to do?" "Take off my rubbers," said the quick-witted woman, abandoning her prayers to clutch at a foot that was guiltless of overshoe."—From the Portfolio of the American Magazine.

W. D. KINSMAN,

SPRINGFIELD,

IS BETTER EQUIPPED FOR BUSINESS THAN EVER BEFORE!

DRESS and WRAP TRIMMINGS

Are a marked specialty. Also, the latest and choicest novelties, a line exclusively his own, in Western Massachusetts, at prices defying competition.

LACES

Are Displayed in Profusion.

The hand-run Spanish Fichus and Scarfs, Spanish Guipure Fichus and Scarfs, Black Chantilly Flouces with lace of various widths to match, Fedora laces, Point Gaze, Torchon, Medicis and Duchesse, together with the Duchesse and real Point Lace Handkerchiefs, make an array on which the eye feasts with pleasure.

Kid Gloves!

A Large Fall Importation.

Are opening splendidly. The variety in sizes, makes and colors, is extensive, and the rates are reasonable. There is no better kid glove than the "Alice Louise," Mr. Kinsman's own brand.

Hosiery

For Ladies, Misses, Boys and Babies,

Can be bought to advantage from a heavy stock, with many styles.

Merino Underwear

Has an Important Place

in the store, and the price and variety offered will be fully appreciated. Ladies' and Misses' Cotton Underwear is found in superior quality at figures like these:

"Going for the Cows."

Long before the crimson sunset
Flashes on the farm-house panes;
Long before the misty purple
Down the distant valley wanes;
Wistful eyes are looking fieldwards,
While the patient grandma sews;
And the old clock on the mantel,
Tic, tic, tic, so drowsy goes.
"Dear me, Jenny," cries the grandma,
With her specs above her brows;
"Do be quiet, it's so early,
Lots of time to fetch the cows!"

Shadows lengthen down the mountain,
And the swallows wing their round;
Scarlet sunlight flashes brightly
O'er the daisy-laden ground.
Anxious eyes are at the window
Looking down the meadow lane;
Tiny fingers softly tapping
On the kitchen window pane.
"Bless me, Jenny," calls the grandma,
"There's no peace in all the house;
Do go, if you can't be quiet—
Go at once and fetch the cows!"

Light the step that bent the clover,
Tripping o'er the meadow wide!
Two were meeting there together,
Talking softly, side by side!
Up the lane came Jet and Snowball,
Brindle, Bess, with steps so slow,
While the sunset softly lingers
On a maiden's cheek aglow.
"Girls are girls," old grandma whispers,
As she sees them thro' the boughs;
"Once I went, I well remember,
Very early for the cows!"

HIS FIRST WIFE'S RELATIONS.

Herbert Stickney's choice of a second wife was not generally approved. If Mr. Stickney had been an ordinary citizen, there would undoubtedly have been talk enough in regard to the unsuitableness of the match; but Mr. Stickney was not an ordinary citizen. He was selectman, surveyor, master of the Grange, general administrator and adviser on all legal, moral and domestic subjects. The Governor himself could scarcely be more in demand than this well-informed and high-minded Vermont farmer. Now for such a man to choose a companion from fashionable city life was inevitably to cast some doubt on the soundness of his judgment in the past, and so friends and neighbors shook their heads sadly, and told each other that Stickney's influence was a thing of the past.

Now this gentleman, honorable as he had certainly proved himself in every department of life, had not been quite frank with his lady-love. He had told her with some pride the exact amount of his income. He had pictured the fine old homestead with the warmth of one who loves what he is describing. His intended wife had known just how many elms there were in front of the house, as well as their ages and histories. The lawn, the orchards, the mountains, the little lake in the heart of the woods, she was perfectly acquainted with. In fact, there was nothing omitted from the picture but the human figures occupying the foreground. These were the first wife's relations, and no one knew better than Mr. Stickney how prominent were the positions they occupied.

The gentleman's voice did not seem quite natural when he presented his wife to the ladies assembled at the homestead to meet the travelers.

"Florence," he said, "allow me. This is Mrs. Mazonson," presenting the elderly lady, who certainly did not look very gracious, "and Miss Maria and Miss Susan Mazonson," indicating two ladies of uncertain age, equally stiff and uncordial.

Miss Susan Mazonson! The young wife, whose appreciation of the humorous was very keen, had all she could do to keep from laughing in the faces of the unbending trio with the comical names. It was very good of Mr. Stickney to invite friends to meet her, she told herself, as she pleasantly greeted her seeming guests. But why had he selected such a funeral-looking, party? At the tea-table, Mrs. Stickney, fresh as a rose in her pretty summer silk and dainty laces, sat beside her husband. The elder Mazonson presided at the tea-urn. This was more inexplicable than the rest; but perhaps it was the fashion in Vermont to treat the lady of the house as a guest for a time, and so this insult was good-naturedly accounted for. The table, though exceptionally appointed, and covered with every imaginable good thing, was waited upon by her guests. This was doubtless another act of courtesy, the newcomer told herself, but the sight of a servant would have been an inexpressible relief. It was very annoying to be served by one's visitors, but this being the fashion, she must make the best of it. After starting numberless topics of conversation, and having them all fall dead—even her husband seemed suddenly struck dumb—Mrs. Stickney was obliged to give up the contest. How different this was from the home-coming she had so lovingly anticipated! Such jolly good times as they had had all through their six weeks' wedding tour, and now, in "the twinkling of an eye," every thing had so changed, or seemed to change. Of course it was all seeming, the young wife told herself, but it was surely very disagreeable. After the wretched meal was over, Mrs. Stickney, almost ready to cry, invited her husband to take a walk, but here was Mrs. Mazonson at his elbow.

"Hiram had to go away this noon," she said, "so I suppose you'll have to do the milking, Herbert."

Mrs. Mazonson was very tall, very thin, very dark, and her voice was so unutterably deep and hollow that Mrs. Stickney could not rid herself of the notion that it belonged to somebody else. The city-bred young lady knew that cows had to be milked, but she had never associated her husband with the one that performed the operation, and now turned an astonished face to that gentleman and the assembled Mazonsons.

"It must be fun to milk," she remarked, determined to put the best possible face on affairs. "I'll go and see you."

"Not in that dress, I hope," said Mrs. Mazonson, as Mr. Stickney left the room. "I was going to say, a little while ago," she went on, "that seeing as you was dressed up, you needn't mind about the dishes tonight."

The dishes? What in the world did this dreadful woman mean? Before she had time to inquire, her tormentor had left the room; and now, more perplexed than ever, Mrs. Stickney went in search of her husband. She found him at last in the barnyard, and in the excitement of a new sensation almost forgot the disagreeable things that had preceeded it. In a dilapidated straw hat, patched coat and blue overalls, she did not at first recognize her husband; but when she did, she clapped her hands like a child, and laughed as merry a laugh as was ever heard on the Stickney farm.

"Is that the way people always dress when they milk?" she inquired, touching the old coat caressingly with her little white hands.

"One must dress according to one's work on a farm, Florence," Mr. Stickney remarked, sententiously.

Something in her husband's words or manner must have recalled her late annoyance, for the smile faded from her lips, and her eyes grew sad and troubled. "Herbert," she said softly, who are those—those ladies at the house?"

"Why, they are the Mazonsons, Florence—Mrs. Mazonson and her two daughters," the master of Grange replied.

"It was very kind of you to ask Mrs. Mazonson and her daughters to meet me," the young wife resumed, with a touch of something in her voice that her husband was not familiar with, "but I can't understand why they should seem so much at home, Herbert."

Mr. Stickney moved the three-legged stool to the side of another cow, and commenced milking again, before he replied.

"Didn't I mention to you, Florence, that these ladies lived with me?" he inquired. "I know I didn't dwell on the subject," he went on, "but I must have spoken of it."

"Mention to me that these ladies lived with you!" Mrs. Stickney repeated, oblivious of the rest of her husband's remark, a hard look settling around the pretty mouth. "May I ask, Mr. Stickney, who these ladies are? I know they are Mazonsons," she added, in the same singular tone, "but what are they to you?"

"They are relatives of my first wife," the gentleman replied, in a voice that had the calmness of desperation in it. "I must have taken it for granted that you knew, Florence. Mrs. Mazonson was Mrs. Stickney's mother, and Maria and Susan were her sisters."

"And have they always lived here?'

"For some time before and ever since Mrs. Stickney died Mrs. Mazonson has been my housekeeper, and the girls have been her assistants."

"Why was there no servant, Mr. Stickney, to wait on the table this evening?" was the lady's next question.

"We have no servants, Florence. It is not the custom with Vermont farmers, my dear."

"And all the work of your house is performed by the Mazonsons?"

"Yes."

"Who did it before the Mazonsons came?"

"Mrs. Stickney, my dear.

For a moment there was silence in the barn yard. Then there was a rustle of retreating silk, a light step going swiftly toward the house, and thus the singular interview ended. This was a very unpleasant commencement, Mr. Stickney told himself, and for a while that gentleman's milking was purely mechanical. From the bottom of his heart he wished he and his wife were alone. On the other hand, there was a great deal to do in the house, much more than Florence could ever manage if she worked night and day. At this point Mr. Stickney really did have serious doubts as to the wisdom of this second marriage of his. For the first time he asked himself whether it would be right to impose the drudgery of farm work on this young and delicately nurtured woman. He had thought very little about the domestic part of the programme. He was accustomed to seeing the women about him constantly occupied, and Florence knew she was accepting a farmer when she agreed to marry him. Then, too, Mrs. Mazonson was exceedingly competent; indeed, no housekeeper could be more so; and Mr. Stickney summed it all up by assuring himself that Florence could get along with Mrs. Mazonson easily enough if she had only a mind to think so.

In the mean time Mrs. Stickney had locked herself into her room, and with clinched hands and flashing eyes was recalling every moment of the time since she first met the man whom she had married. She had been grossly deceived and imposed upon, and worst of all, the deception had come from the one who had promised to love, honor and cherish her to the day of his death. The drawn lips grew tender and pitiful as she thought how utterly she had loved and trusted him, and how entirely she had believed in his affection for herself. "To live with these solemn and automatic Mazonsons would be worse than keeping house in a tomb, with skeletons for company," she sobbed. She could not and would not endure it. No man had a right to ask such a sacrifice from his wife. But she hadn't been asked. She had been cheated into her present position. She would leave the house where she had been and would continue to be unutterably wretched, and go straight back to her father. Little did he think that the honorable and rich Herbert Stickney would heap such indignities upon his daughter. She would go. No, she would stay, and show the Mazonsons, and her husband too, what kind of stuff she was made of.

That evening Mr. Stickney was detained below by callers. It was ten o'clock before he was at liberty, and then, to his great delight, Florence was fast asleep. The poor child had forgotten her troubles and the morning would show things in a more promising light. He would do everything he could to make up for the Mazonsons, and after a little everything would go smoothly enough. Mr. Stickney would not have been so certain of this if he had seen the tear-stained face and quivering lips. Ignorant of all this, and in spite of his ten years' experience as a husband, utterly ignorant of the delicacy and sensitiveness of a true woman's nature, Mr. Stickney went calmly and comfortably to sleep.

The next morning, after waiting to be called to breakfast, Mrs. Stickney, in the daintiest of muslin wrappers, presented herself in the dining-room. Her husband had just finished his early morning's work, and now greeted her with a smile and a kiss. The elder Mazonson looked exceedingly flushed and flurried, and Maria and Susan Mazonson flew briskly round at the bidding of their superior officer.

"I beg your pardon," said Mrs. Stickney, in her calmest and coolest manner, "I thought breakfast was ready. I hope I am not intruding."

A smile played round the lips of Miss Susan, who, in spite of her dreadful name, was not altogether so hideous as Florence had thought at first sight. The rightful occupant of the chair at the head of the table waited to see if Mrs. Mazonson would occupy it, and finding that she did, went calmly round and sat by her husband.

"Yes, breakfast is ready," said Mrs. Mazonson, in a voice between a growl and a groan. "It's been ready some time."

"I hope you slept well last night, Mrs. Stickney?" This from Maria Mazonson, whose voice Florence now heard for the first time.

"Very well, thank you," Mrs. Stickney, cordially replied.

"You slept late enough, if that's any sign," said Mrs. Mazonson, in her most sepulchral tone.

"I always sleep late, Mrs. Mazonson," replied Florence, as she slowly poured the cream into her coffee.

"You can't sleep late on this farm very well," the elder lady went on again, her face ablaze. "I've been up since half past four," she went on, "and now it's half past seven. I've skimmed eighteen pans of milk, washed all the pans and made twenty-five pounds of butter this morning."

"You must be very tired," Florence replied, looking the irate dame innocently in the face.

"Well, I guess I am tired, the housekeeper replied. "The girls helped me all they could, and—"

"Oh, ma," Susan interrupted, flushing painfully as she spoke, "why shouldn't we help you, I should like to know?"

At this point Mrs. Stickney made up her mind that she was going to like one of the Mazonson's after all.

"They got this breakfast, I want you to understand." Mrs. Mazonson finished what she had to say in spite of interruptions.

"It is a very nice breakfast," Florence remarked. "I don't know when I have enjoyed anything so much."

Mr. Stickney glanced at his wife. There was something in the tone which reminded him of the barn yard tête-a-tête. There certainly must be an understanding between himself and wife right away, he thought. It would never do to let things go on in this style. Mrs. Mazonson must be rebuked also. Her attitude was certainly very objectionable, and should be corrected immediately. Meanwhile Mrs. Stickney ate her breakfast with relish, and passed her cup for some more coffee. "Which of you ladies," indicating the Misses Mazonsons, "made this coffee?" she asked pleasantly. "It certainly is delicious."

"Neither of 'em made it," Mrs. Mazonson answered, promptly. "Do you think I would trust anybody to make coffee but myself?"

Mrs. Stickney had decided that her platform should be plainly understood both by her husband and the Mazonsons before she left the dining room. It promised to be a hard battle to fight; but the young woman had courage enough now for a host of husbands and a regiment of first wife's relations.

"Are you going to be very busy to-day, Herbert?" Mrs. Stickney asked her husband, as the meal drew to a close.

"I have been away for so long that my days will be occupied for some time to come," he replied.

"Perhaps, then, Miss Susan or Miss Maria would go to ride with me this morning?" and Florence threw a glance of sweetness at the Misses Mazonsons. "It is such a lovely morning!" she continued; "and after a little it will be too warm, I fear."

Mrs. Stickney waited a moment for some kind of a response, and receiving none, said, "You would like to accompany me, would you not, Miss Susan?"

This young lady was on the point of replying, but her mother came in ahead. "Herbert," she began, "I should think it was high time you gave your wife to understand what kind of a place she has come to live in. I don't suppose this wife can gad off and leave the work"—and now Mrs. Mazonson's voice shook with grief or anger, Florence didn't know which—"any more than your first wife, my daughter, Mr. Stickney. She never left the work till it was done."

"Perhaps if she had left it occasionally, she might be living now," the second Mrs. Stickney coolly suggested. At this crisis Mrs. Mazonson sniffled, and Miss Susan left the table.

"Florence will become accustomed to our ways after a while," Mr. Stickney responded, with so much consideration in his tone for the tyrant at the head of the table that his wife felt ashamed of him. "She'll work into that after a while," he added, endeavoring to appear at his ease.

"That furbelowed white gown looks like it!" said Mrs. Mazonson, defiantly.

"I am not afraid to trust my wife to do the proper thing, Mrs. Mazonson, Mr. Stickney remarked, with tardy decency.

"If it may be allowed," the young wife began, with the deliberation of one making a mighty effort for self-control, "I should like to say a word." As the brave little woman surveyed the assembled group, there crept into her face a look that one of the party never forgot. This one was her husband, who started to lay a detaining hand on her arm, but for some inexplicable reason gave it up." "When I take my rightful place as mistress of my husband's house," Mrs. Stickney went on, "then it will be time enough to talk of my duties. You may consider me a summer boarder, if you please," she added smiling, "but in whatever light you may regard me"—and now the sweet mouth grew firm again, and the fine eyes struck fire—"please remember that I am the wife of the proprietor of this establishment and the owner of these acres, and expect to be treated, if not with kindness, at least with civility."

"I should like to see you make twenty-five pounds of butter before breakfast!" said Mrs. Mazonson; when she could recover herself. Mr. Stickney played with his spoon, and looked steadily into his coffee-cup, but said nothing.

"You never will see me make twenty-five pounds of butter before breakfast," Mrs. Stickney responded, "and I think it very doubtful if I ever make any butter after breakfast either. I don't intend to give up my music, my painting, my reading, my writing, or anything else that I have been educated to enjoy, and I want this understood also."

"I wonder what you will do if I go away?" Mrs. Mazonson inquired, dubiously but respectfully.

"Mr. Stickney is abundantly able to pay for all necessary service," Florence replied. "If he doesn't choose to do this, then there is a last resort: I can go home to my father any time."

"I ain't got anywhere to go," said Mrs. Mazonson, now thoroughly subdued; "but I suppose I can find a place in a few days, if I may stay here till then. Maria is going to her uncle's to-morrow. The basso profundo was all broken up, and the tears rained down the old lady's face.

Mrs. Stickney arose from her seat, and walked around the table to the housekeeper's side. "As far as I am concerned, you are more than welcome to stay," she said, kindly, laying her hand on one tyranical shoulder. "You know better than any one else how things should be done, and have my husband's interests more at heart. I'm sure that Miss Susan and I shall be good friends," she added, sweetly, "and I see no reason why we may not be a very comfortable family. You understand, I hope, that I do not intend to do any hard work. If it were necessary I would, but it is not. I shall never interfere with you butter or coffee, my dear Mrs. Mazonson, and I am sure you will not with my affairs."

An hour later, Mrs. Stickney and Miss Susan were driving toward Lake Dunmore, as jolly a pair as one would wish to see.

THE LIVING EARTH.

In a paper published in the Indian Engineer, an illustration is given of the life that dwells in nature, the phenomena of earthquakes being cited. The peculiar terror of an earthquake lies mainly in the suddenness of its approach. Volcanic eruptions are usually preceded by vast rumblings, or jets of steam, or other unmistakable tokens. Hurricanes and cyclones, in like manner, have heralds that announce their coming. But with an earthquake there are no premonitory symptoms. The great earthquake which took place at Lisbon in the year 1755 found the people engaged in their ordinary occupations. All the shocks were over in about five minutes. The first shock lasted about six seconds. It that brief space of time most of the houses had been thrown down, and thousands of men, women and children crushed beneath the ruins. At times the ocean lends fresh terrors to the scene. Thus at Lisbon a wave of water over fifty feet high rushed in among the houses, and covered what still remained. In the island of Jamaica on a similar occasion two thousand five hundred houses were buried in three minutes under 30 feet of water. Recent delicate scientific experiments have disclosed the fact that the surface of the land is never absolutely at rest for more than thirty hours at a time. Thus those great earthquakes which make epochs in history are merely extreme cases of forces that seldom sleep.

THE WHITE FEATHER.—It is well known that the phrase, "To show the white feather," is a synonym for cowardice, and it is said that no game cock has a white feather. This expression must formerly have had a different meaning, as it arose during the war between the early settlers and the North American Indians. A Quaker, who refused to fly for safety, one day saw a band of Indians swooping down upon his home. As the tenets of his faith would not allow him to receive them with a volley of powder and ball, he invited them in and set food before them. The good, hearty meal so softened the savage heart that the chief, on leaving, fastened a white feather on the door as a badge of friendship and peace. Although after this many savage bands passed the dwelling, none ever violated the treaty by injuring the house or its inmates.

A NEW GERMAN FIGURE.—A popular figure in the "German" line at summer resorts is known as the "railroad." This requires six railroad tickets for the ladies, six placards for the gentlemen and a whistle for the leader. The gentlemen fasten the placards around their necks, while the tickets are distributed among the ladies. Upon the signal from the leader the orchestra plays a railroad galop and the gentlemen march into the room, imitating a train. At the sound of a whistle the train stops, and the leader calls the name of one of the stations upon the placards, when the lady with the corresponding ticket takes her partner, the rest following according to their destination.—Utica Observer.

BANK OFFICERS need to remember that speculation is next door to peculation.

NEW YORK now has eight political parties, with enough isms left over for the formation of several others.

SECRETARY LAMAR is understood to be booked for the vacancy on the bench of the United States supreme court.

THE members of GOV. Ames's staff have been giving the governor and family a very enjoyable trip through Franklin and Berkshire counties this week.

THE Springfield Republican suggests Lawyer C. L. Gardner of Palmer as the right man for county commissioner. The county will be fortunate if it can secure him for this position.

AN investigation of the quarantine islands in New York bay has revealed such neglect on the part of the attendants that it is believed New York is in serious danger of an extension of the cholera to the city within a short time.

BOSTON Democrats are aching for an organ which shall be a dyed-in-the-wool, thick-and-thin Bourbon, come what may, and it is claimed that $25,000 has been subscribed already toward starting it. There somehow seems to be more fun in sinking money in a newspaper than in almost any other way.

THE Republicans of the 2d Hampden district have nominated A. Higginbottom of Holyoke for senator. Unfortunately the district is likely to show a majority of Democratic votes, and Levi Perkins, the jolly, good-natured present senator from that district, is so popular with the "b'hoys" that he will in all probability be re-elected.

SCHEMES for a revolution in this country in 1889, the centennial year of the French revolution, are said to have been concocted by the Red International socialists, whose headquarters are in Chicago, and who claim a membership of 100,000. This kind of vermin needs close watching, and ought to be driven out of the country.

As an impromptu speaker President Cleveland is not a success. His talks at different points in the West have all been run through the same mold, and smack so strongly of the cyclopedia as to be both amusing and stale. Compared, say, with Gen. Grant's terse and statesmanlike utterances, they sink close to the schoolboy composition order.

THE district attorney field is being cultivated systematically and assiduously by the friends of Lawyer Brooks of Holyoke, and if they leave any political stone unturned they will go wide of their intentions. It is plain that Mr. Dunbar's friends must be awake and alert or they will surely get left when the convention meets. We do not learn that Mr. Brooks is possessed of superior qualifications for the position, but it is pretty well understood that his proposed nomination is simply the carrying out of an old arrangement.

STAFFORD SPRINGS, CT., suffers a deplorable calamity in the wrecking of the Stafford National Bank by its cashier, R. S. Hicks, who was arrested Wednesday noon, the bank being closed at the same time by Examiner H. A. Forman of Du Quoin, Ill., who had been making a special investigation of its affairs. When confronted with the evidences of his crookedness Cashier Hicks broke down, and finally acknowledged a shortage of $73,000. Besides this the bank holds notes of the Vermont Lumber Co. for over $40,000, of which Mr. Hicks is chief, if not sole owner, and there are other loans of uncertain value, which may carry the losses of the institution up to more than $150,000. The capital of the bank is $200,000, its surplus and undivided profits $29,000, and its deposits amount to about $190,000. Mr. Hicks has been connected with the bank for 15 years, and has been one of the most prominent and enterprising citizens of the place, being foremost in every public work, and a leading member of the Episcopal church. But the evil demon of speculation got hold of him, and position, character and everything that men hold dear was sacrificed in the vain race for speedy wealth. Since the 1st of July he had sent some $75,000 to one broker. It is the old and oft-repeated story, and the saddest part of it is the suffering and ruin entailed upon the community, and the inevitable shock to the confidence of man in man. The Stafford Springs Savings Bank, of which Mr. Hicks is treasurer, is badly involved, as it holds $69,000 of the National Bank stock, besides having a large deposit in the bank.

The mystery of the death of Cashier J. W. Barron of Dexter, Me., nine years ago, has been cleared up this week by the confession of Charles Francis Stain, who says that his father and two other men formed a plan to rob the bank. They supposed no one was in the building, but as they entered the vault room they met Barron coming from the cellar with a hod of coal. Stain knocked him down with a slung shot, striking him three times, and then bound and gagged him and placed a tight noose around his neck, after which they became frightened and took only a few hundred dollars. Barron was found unconscious and died without speaking, and the bank officers raised the theory of suicide to conceal crookedness and suspended all effort to discover the murderers, and their theory was finally accepted by the public.

The long contest between the Western Union and the Baltimore and Ohio Telegraph companies has been terminated, the latter company having been swallowed by its rival.

Let's settle the school question next Monday.

Mrs. J. D. Blanchard is painting her Park street residence.

Charlie Kempton is clerking in H. P. Longley's grocery store.

H. E. Bruce is the new driver of the American Express team.

Mrs. E. P. Moore is expected home at the Weeks House this week.

The weather yesterday and to-day savored quite strongly of winter.

G. L. Hitchcock and C. W. Johnson have made flying visits to town this week.

Miss Alice Hutchinson of Washington, D. C., is a guest at C. E. Fish's.

J. B. Shaw is presiding at the district court in the absence of Judge Robinson.

Brown & Abbe have a new clerk in the person of Leonard Upham of Brimfield.

S. J. Ferry won second prize with two of his pointer dogs at the Stafford bench show, yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Enos Calkins started yesterday on a trip to Linden, N. J., and New Haven, Ct.

Engineer Kenerson and Conductor Sedgwick of the Ware River road are taking short vacations.

Mr. and Mrs. C. K. Gamwell have given up housekeeping and taken rooms at the Nassowanno House.

The ladies of St. Paul's church held a very enjoyable social at the church parlors Wednesday evening.

At the Baptist church next Sunday morning Rev. Mr. Weeks will preach on "The Bible View of the Fatherhood of God."

W. P. Webster is now acting as engineer of the switcher in the New London Northern yard, instead of fireman on Sander's train.

Rev. H. W. Pope delivered an address before the Hampden county conference of Congregational churches at South Hadley Falls, Wednesday.

The Republicans will hold a caucus at the town house next Monday evening to choose delegates to the district attorney and representative conventions.

Large numbers of Palmer people have attended the Stafford fair this week, the special train being much better patronized this year than ever before.

W. E. Hermance gives his stereopticon entertainment, "From the Yellowstone Park to the Gulf of Mexico in a canoe," at the Baptist church to-morrow evening.

C. Fred Gould, son of Dr. J. B. Gould, a former resident of Palmer and well known hereabouts, was married at DeWitt, Iowa, September 28, to Miss Leonne Cleveland.

The Flynt Building and Construction Company has the contract to build a depot at Elizabeth, N. J., for the Central railroad, and also a large sewer job at Plainfield, N. J.

The potato crop is not a grand success in these parts this year. The yield is small, and the tubers rot soon after being put in the cellar. A good article brings $1, $1.15 and $1.25 per bushel.

At the Prohibition convention held in Springfield last Friday, George F. Wright of this place was nominated for county commissioner, and also made a member of the county committee.

Go to the special town meeting Monday, or forever hold your peace in regard to the result. There's nothing to hinder us from having the new school house in our own front yard if we are on hand with votes enough.

Palmer Division of the A. O. H. will give a grand ball at the Park street rink next Friday evening. The Palmer Orchestra of seven pieces, under the leadership of John Masterson, will furnish music, and H. A. Walbridge will prompt.

The New London Northern Railroad announces an excursion to New York next week, the tickets being good going from the 19th to the 24th, and returning until the 29th. The round trip fare from Palmer, Three Rivers and Monson is only $3.50.

Commencing with Monday, the 24th, the National and Savings banks will be closed from 12 to 1 o'clock each day, to give the bank officers an opportunity to get their dinner at the same time as other people. The banking hours will then be from 9 to 12 and 1 to 3.

The clerk of the Converse House heard an unusual noise in F. D. Barton's jewelry store about 11 o'clock Wednesday evening, and supposing it was caused by burglars gave an alarm. The racket proved to have been caused by the fall of a large sign over Mr. Barton's desk.

Supper was served in the vestry of the Congregational church Wednesday evening by the ladies' society, followed by a social. During the evening the pastor, Rev. H. W. Pope, was presented with a purse of nearly $175, which had been made up by his parishioners.

Brian O'Rourke, a farmer living in the eastern part of the town, has a "heap of trouble" in this world. His wife and children were forced to leave him some time ago, and last week an auction sale of his farm, stock, crops, etc., were announced for Tuesday of this week. Although his wife owns half the farm, Brian thinks she will have hard work to sell it without his consent.

The electric lights do not seem to throw any perceptible illumination on the oft-repeated query "When shall we have the lights?" If the present "company" is not ready to do anything about giving us the lights, it is understood that another concern is willing and anxious to string its wires and illuminate our streets and buildings. It would be some little consolation to know whether they are coming or not.

G. W. Randall, while digging in his garden Wednesday morning, unearthed a curious relic from a depth of about a foot below the surface. It is an old copper button of the days of Washington, being about 1⅜ inches in diameter, with the letters "G. W." in the center of the face, while around the edge are the words "Long live the president." Mr. Randall has refused a good sum for his curiosity, of which but few are in existence.

There is one young man in Palmer who is more than ever convinced that the course of true love never runs smooth. He deeply loved a maiden fair, and grew very attentive, but in an unlucky moment his mother discovered a letter written him by the object of his affections, and although nearly old enough to vote, his evenings are now spent under the watchful eye of his maternal parent, who declines to allow her share in his affections to be alienated.

The majority of the merchants have agreed to close their places of business at 6.30 Tuesday and Thursday evenings until May 1, 1888, holiday week excepted. There are the usual two or three who refuse to join, but the rest have wisely gone ahead and left them out of the question. Last year some of the merchants were not very careful about living up to their agreement, and if not more particular this year the early closing scheme will be apt to fall through.

Gov. Ames came to Palmer Tuesday evening on the train from Belchertown, where he had been to attend the cattle show. The train was late, and the 6.07 for Springfield did not wait, so his excellency was obliged to "hang around" Palmer until the 9.06 train came, along with about a hundred others. And to make it more aggravating, the 6.37 New York express was obliged to stop just east of the station that night because of a freight crossing on the New London Northern track, but before any of the belated passengers could board it, it pulled by without stopping.

The most brilliant event of the season in Springfield will be the two Theodore Thomas concerts to be given at the city hall, Oct. 31 and Nov. 28. C. N. Stimpson & Co., the extensive music dealers of that city, are the managers. Mr. Thomas, besides his 60 performers, will bring Herr Joseffy, the famous pianist, for the first concert, and Fraulein Aus der Ohe, the coming lady pianist of the age, for the second. Stimpson & Co. intend to give these concerts every season. Tickets for the two concerts are $2; single tickets, $1.25. Return trains will leave after the concert. This will be the only chance of the season to hear Mr. Thomas.

George Robinson met with a serious accident at his farm east of the village last Saturday afternoon. He was engaged in feeding an ensilage cutter, when in some way not yet clearly explained his left hand was caught between the rolls and drawn into the knives. The machine could not be stopped, and after a while Mr. Robinson managed, by exerting his utmost strength, to pull his arm out, though not until it had been cut into half-inch pieces nearly to the elbow. He was at once brought to this village and attended by Dr. Holbrook, and is doing as well as could be expected under the circumstances. He holds a $5000 insurance policy in a company which pays $2500 for the loss of a hand or foot.

A good story, with which a Palmer woman is connected, is told of a resident of a neighboring town. Not so very long ago both happened to be visiting Montreal at the same time, and while there the man bought a nice sealskin cloak for his wife, paying some $400 for it. Not wishing to pay the 33⅓ per cent duty upon it, he asked his lady acquaintance to wear it across the lines into the states for him. She kindly consented, wore it home—and is still wearing it when the weather demands it. He dare not claim the sealskin or attempt to take it by force, for she would then inform the authorities of his having smuggled the goods. It is said, however, that she sent the man a check for $50 as a soothing balm to his wrathful feelings, and it is safe to say that the next time he buys his wife a sealskin cloak no female acquaintance will get a chance to wear it home.

Editor Journal: An item in your last week's issue stated that the reason the Palmers did not play the Thorndikes on Oct. 1st was because the manager of the Thorndikes insisted on having the umpire, also that he objected to players who had been playing with the Palmers the most of the season. Now as manager of the Thorndikes I wish to say that I did not insist on having the umpire. I spoke of getting an umpire outside the town, but as the manager of the Palmers said they were entitled to theirs, I was agreeable. I did object to players who were not local, as both nines were to play none but local players, with the exception of the Palmers, who I agreed to let have a catcher, as they claimed they had no one who could catch. Outside this one player both clubs were to be composed of local players. And this is why the game did not come off. JOHN F. LUMAN, Man. T. B. B. C.

THE SENATORIAL CONVENTION.

The Republican convention for the first Hampden senatorial district, held at the district court room this morning, was a cut-and-dried affair, and only 19 minutes were consumed in transacting the business. The Springfield delegation arrived on the 9.43 train, and the convention was called to order by W. H. Haile of Springfield. Henry M. Phillips of Springfield was chosen chairman, and John F. Corse of the same place secretary. W. W. Leach of Palmer moved that all present be given the privilege of voting, but Mr. Judd of Springfield, Mr. Leach of Palmer, and C. L. Gage of Monson were chosen a committee on credentials. They reported 29 delegates present from Wilbraham, Monson, Palmer and Springfield. Mr. Simons of Springfield moved an informal ballot, and was appointed teller with E. D. Cushman of Monson and J. S. Holden of Palmer. A vacancy on the Palmer delegation was filled by J. B. Shaw, and the informal ballot was 24 for Edward H. Lathrop of Springfield, 3 for E. P. Kendrick of Springfield, 3 for S. S. Taft of Palmer, and 1 for N. S. Hubbard of Brimfield. On motion of Mr. Leach the nomination of Mr. Lathrop was made unanimous. W. H. Haile of Springfield was chosen a member of the state central committee, and the convention adjourned.

THE SCHOOL HOUSE QUESTION.

Whatever else may be doubtful in the minds of those who attend next Monday's town meeting, this much must be set down as certain: Somewhere, somehow, of some kind, a school building must be provided. The need is immediate and imperative; every day's delay is a disaster. The whole story has by no means been told. A visit to the quarters in which the high school is supposed to carry on its work will send any man away sad at the irreparable wrong which is being inflicted upon our boys and girls, and indignant that the present crisis has not been foreseen, or foreseen, has not been provided for. The neglect of the past can only be in part repaired by prompt action now. Whatever next Monday's result may be, let the meeting be so large, and the verdict so emphatic, that no hope of its reversal may remain in any quarter. When the will of the town is a matter of certainty, the work can be, and should be begun at once. What that verdict should be is not the concern of this article. This much however may be said: If the new school building is to be located in the depot village, certainly no reason exists for disturbing the action of the last meeting. No other lot possesses half the advantages of location. Notwithstanding the error in the statement of its dimensions, the spot selected is of ample size, having a frontage of 74 feet on Park street, 215 feet on Thorndike street, 210 feet on Converse street, and a total area of seven-eighths of an acre. Assuredly the appeal ought not to be in vain to the citizens of Palmer, to settle this matter in accordance with the dictates of reason rather than of prejudice. But two questions have any legitimate right to demand attention: First, from which village in the nature of things is the largest number of pupils likely to be drawn? and second, to which village is transportation the easiest, cheapest and most direct? Yes, there is one more: Shall the town pay for transporting all or part of the hundred students who will flock to the new school building? Let's have a fair trial and a verdict according to the evidence.

A delegation from the W. C. T. U. of Enfield paid the local union a visit and looked over the work of the Loyal Legion, preparatory to starting a juvenile department in their Union.

The mills shut down Tuesday, and a number availed themselves of the opportunity of attending the governor's reception at Belchertown and the effects upon some seemed rather too exhilarating.

WEST WARREN.

O. F. Holmes has bought out Geo. W. Maxfield, and will take charge of No. 3 boarding house.

The Good Templars are preparing for a dramatic entertainment to be presented later in the season.

The George A. Hill dramatic company, that has been playing in the surrounding villages, is billed at Washington Hall for one week.

Michael Connor's barn was burned by an incendiary fire last Sunday night. This is the fourth fire that Connors has had in the last few years, and the insurance agency at Warren have refused to insure him. He was insured through a Palmer agency, but in his son's name.

The Good Templars held open lodge Monday evening, and gave a very enjoyable entertainment. The fact of there being two programmes, gotten up by two members of the lodge as a sort of rivalry, added a good deal to the zest of the affair. "Clayton's Grand March," by the orchestra, was followed by a cornet duet by the New Brothers; piano and violin duet; trio, "Come where the lillies bloom so fair;" orchestra, "Admiration" waltz; reading, "Miss Maloney on the Chinese Question;" which ended the first part. The second part consisted of a song by F. Little; song and dance by the New Brothers; song, Miss Maxfield; reading, "The Drunkard's Home;" dialogue; impersonations by Andrew Warren.

A very pleasant affair Wednesday afternoon was the marriage of Miss Alla S. Carter to Mr. Arthur F. Blodgett of Warren, at the residence of the bride. The ceremony was performed by Rev. G. H. Morse of the Congregational church, in the presence of about fifty assembled friends and relations. The wedding party left on the 5.48 train for Springfield, and after a short journey will return to this village, where Mr. Blodgett is to engage in business. Among the guests from out of town were noticed Mr. and Mr. J. A. Howland, Miss Sarah Henshaw, Mr. Emmons Kenney and daughter, and Miss Colburn of Worcester, Miss Lottie E. Cross of Monson, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Henshaw, Miss Lillie Henshaw, Mr. C. F. Henshaw, and Mr. and Mrs. Myron Richardson of West Brookfield.

While out gunning yesterday Joseph Baker accidentally received a small charge of shot in his face from the gun of George Morris, both operatives at Reynolds's mill, Mr. Baker being boss carder. Although some eight or ten shot were received, no dangerous results are anticipated.

G. S. Rollins and Miss Helen Knowlton of this place were quietly married at Rockbottom last week Monday, and yesterday morning left for Wilmington, N. C., where they are to reside in the future. Mr. Rollins is teacher in an institution there, besides being engaged in ministerial work.

Some of the merchants deprecate the idea of theaters being allowed to show in a small town like Monson one week or more. As they look over the audience they find many in attendance every night who are unable to pay their store bills, but find money enough for these amusements. Some places much larger than Monson will not allow shows to be given more than three nights in a week.

Wednesday afternoon the annual meeting of the Dorcas society was held at Mrs. S. F. Cushman's. The following officers were elected: Mrs. C. M. Gage, president; Mrs. J. C. Aldrich, vice president; Mrs. C. Carpenter, secretary; Mrs. W. N. Flynt, treasurer; Mrs. A. A. Gage, Mrs. George Johnson, Mrs. M. A. Pease, Mrs. Fenton, Mrs. C. H. McMaster, Mrs. L. Hutchinson, directresses. The treasurer's report showed a balance of about $290 in the treasury.

Albert L. Squier, Monson's champion bicyclist, while out for a practice spin Wednesday was run into by a boy, throwing him off the wheel and hurting him so he was unable to race at the Stafford fair Thursday, also damaging his wheel somewhat. Bert feels very badly, having had his eye on the gold medal, and also being desirous of meeting Holden of Bondsville once more, not feeling satisfied with his defeat of two years ago.

Last spring the town voted no-license and appropriated $500 for suppressing the illegal sale of tangle-foot. The peace-loving citizens are beginning to wonder how much has so far been expended. The odors which greet their olfactories as they pass certain places of business are too suggestive to admit of even the most unsophisticated having any doubt as to what is the stock in trade of the parties who hold forth there. It is not an unheard-of thing for men to not only "bite the dust" of Main street, but swallow considerable gravel by way of dessert.

There is considerable feeling over the sentence given Patrick Denny last Friday by the superior court. It will be remembered that on the night of July 14 Denny made an assault on William Murphy with a knife, giving him a 12-inch cut across the abdomen, which did not, however, prove fatal, as Murphy grabbed his assailant's arm in time to partially stay the blow, which merely cut the outer flesh, and did not reach through to a vital part. Friday Denny pleaded guilty of an assault with a dangerous weapon, and was given four months' imprisonment.

WARE AND VICINITY.

The Cornet Orchestra has been engaged to furnish music at the fair of St. William's society, which begins on Monday of next week.

The Ware Drum Corps hold their first grand assembly in Music Hall to-night. They are to have Driscoll's orchestra furnish the music.

Trinity Episcopal society will have services in the town hall next Sunday at the usual hours. Rev. C. W. Duffield, who has accepted the call of the parish to become its pastor, will conduct the services, and is to reside here permanently.

Arthur G. Moulson and Miss Isabell Oglvie, both of Ware, were married last week Thursday morning by Rev. A. T. Perry. There was a reception at the home of Mrs. J. Holmes on South street in the evening, when they were serenaded by the Ware Cadet Band, of which Mr. Moulson he is a member.

J. H. Storrs has rented his new hotel to Fred Gilmore of Franklin. He is said to be a man of experience and very popular where he is known. He is to be here next week, and is expected to be ready for guests in about a month, or as soon as the furnishings can be put in, which are to cost $10,000, it is said.

Harry Smith, about twelve years old, while in his father's stable on West street, was kicked in the head and side by a horse last Saturday noon. When taken up he was thought to be dead, but recovered consciousness in the latter part of the afternoon. His skull was badly fractured, and several pieces were removed by Dr. Miner. He has improved since, and is doing as well as could be expected after so serious an accident.

The Democratic senatorial convention was held in the town hall Thursday. P. L. Keefe was chosen chairman and Owen McManus secretary. The committee on credentials reported eight towns represented by 20 delegates. J. M. Crosby was nominated by acclamation as candidate for senator, there being no opposition. P. L. Keefe was elected a member of the state central committee, C. A. Cowee of Gardner, Geo. S. Marsh of Ware, P. H. Babbitt of Barre, L. B. Morse of Athol, H. O. Pease of Amherst, district committee.

The female minstrel show at the town hall Wednesday evening was a disgrace to the town. It was whispered about during the day that gentlemen had better not take their ladies with them, and so there were but five present, and they left soon after the show commenced. A show that is not fit morally for our mothers, wives and daughters, is not fit for our young men, or to be seen in our beautiful town hall. We cannot believe our selectmen would have given a license for such a thing had they known its true character.

The fair under the management of Rev. James Boyle, for the benegt of the building fund of St. William's church, commences next Monday, will continue for two weeks, and promises to be the most enjoyable affair of the kind ever held in town. There are to be entertainments, music by the Cornet Orchestra, and a good time generally. There is to be a paper published every other day, containing the doings of the fair and much original and selected matter that will be interesting. One of the entertainments will be the drama, "Poor Henry," by 60 children under the direction of John Kennedy

The Social Science club hope soon to open their winter sewing school, as there is already a demand for it, and it had one hundred scholars last winter. The club has been very successful in its work, as the charitable branch of the society has been the means of aiding many of the worthy poor. The nursery may be looked upon as one of the permanent institutions of the town, as the average attendance has constantly increased from the first, and the mothers express themselves as well pleased with the care the children receive, and we are sure if any should visit the nursery and see the next appearance and the pains taken to make those there comfortable and happy, they would be pleased to see this work progress, and would help it on all in their power.

Another railroad horror occurred near Kout's Station, Ind., 50 miles from Chicago, Monday night, on the Chicago and Atlantic road. The east-bound express from Chicago had stopped to repair something about the locomotive, when a close-following freight train dashed into the rear of the passenger train, telescoping two cars. The wreck took fire immediately, and many victims who were pinned in the ruins were burned before the eyes of their more fortunate companions, a dozen bodies being taken from the ruins. The accident was due to the inexcusable recklessness of the freight engineer in following the passenger train too closely.

Two small canoes shot Lacine rapids successfully Sunday. This is the first time the passage has ever been accomplished by canoes.

JOTTINGS FROM THE HUB.

From our Special Correspondent

BOSTON, Oct. 12, 1887.

It is only in the eastern part of the state, so it is conveniently said, that there is much interest in politics. If there is not interest further west, then there ought to be for the sake of good government and for the peace of many families now cursed by liquor. Every one with a memory six months strong will recall the action of the Legislature of 1887 upon liquor questions. The House, elected without interference by the liquor interest, was strongly in favor of restrictive measures. The Senate, on whose membership the Liquor Dealers' Protective Association had spent much effort in the campaign of 1886, was hostile to restriction to a marked degree, and some valuable bills were killed. Now it is current rumor, and there is no reason to doubt it, that the liquor men are again at work on the Senate, and it is necessary for them to make a fight in a few doubtful districts only in order to win a majority of the whole body. Strong Republican districts can be neglected as useless to spend money upon. The Democratic districts are safe already. So it leaves only a small number in which sharp work must be done. Last year, in two or three districts, the Prohibitionists helped the Democrats successfully. They together were able to defeat a temperance Republican and to elect a rum Democrat, and those votes were of prodigious help to the liquor dealers. Of course if there is any way in which the liquor dealers can quietly help the cause of the Prohibitionists, they will do it and thus increase their chances of putting in their own men. In view of this quiet effort to keep the control of the Senate with the liquor men, it is doubtless of more practical consequence to vote for senator than for any other candidate on the ticket.

Both parties are suffering for lack of campaign funds. Col. Cutting and Mr. Thacher on the Democratic side have not contributed as was expected, and Gov. Ames declines to be bled beyond his judgment. It is reported that the Democrats are having their men naturalized as rapidly as possible. Here in Boston registration begins to-night, and will close on the 25th. It is within these few days that the Boston Democrats will really make their preparations for their city campaign in December. One of their leaders, in a moment of frankness, said to me the other day that they found that if they left the city election to be run on its own merits, their voters would not come out as well, but if they made a strong effort at the state election, then the impetus from that lasted until the city election and helped materially. So the voters in the country districts have the satisfaction of knowing that they have to meet not only the forces that would come out at the state election, but also the main effort of the Boston crowd to keep its grip on the city hall.

Every city and town in the state has now its Republican local committee. This is better than has been done for a long time, and confirms the impression that Dr. Burden, the chairman of the state committee, is a vigilant organizer. It is conceded at the headquarters that the Prohibitory vote will be larger than last year, and that it may go to 10,000, against 8251 last year. Most of the gain still seems likely to come from the western counties.

Among the comments on the American Board meeting at Springfield, there seems more misapprehension than one would possibly suppose. But on a religious matter, however, where feeling was high, it was doubtless impossible to come to an agreement as to the facts in the case, and if people can't agree on the facts, how can they unite in their conclusions? I can not see the events in any other way than that the conservatives gave better reasons for their course than the public might have expected, and that they will gain in the good will of those who study the case impartially. So far from being high-handed were they, that they gave their opponents all the time they wanted. They ought to have given the new departure side more than one out of the 14 new corporate members, but they deny any intent to be one-sided. Besides, the committee to nominate new members was appointed by Mark Hopkins last year, and it unanimously approved the list presented to the meeting. Some people are disturbed at the feeling shown in the debates, but such people, I believe, are not familiar with public discussion. Nothing occurred which is a circumstance to what we get in the Legislature every day and think nothing of it. Nothing occurred to make a minister or layman abhorred of the Board. The debate was bound to come and they had to put it through. Of course they could not stop for prayers and hymns, as is their custom in ordinary meetings, but they were none the worse, for all that. At the regular Congregational ministers' meeting here Monday forenoon the subject was "reports from Springfield." Both sides were ably represented in the reports, but, from the expressions of the audience, the ministers were five to one in favor of the policy of the board.

Elizabeth Stuart Phelp's story, "Jack the Fisherman," which Houghton, Mifflin & Co. have just issued in book form with illustrations, is said by Miss Francis E. Willard, president of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, to be the strongest temperance story of our time, and Mrs. Mary A. Livermore says: "It is one of the most artistic and powerful temperance stories ever written." Miss E. S. Tobey, president of the Massachusetts Woman's Christian Temperance Union, says: "It is a grand temperance story, strong and intensely interesting."

PEOPLE DEMAND PROTECTION.—PATENT MEDICINES.

What are they? As a general thing they are prescriptions having been used with great success by old and well read Physicians. Thousands of invalids have been unexpectedly cured by their use, and they are the wonder and dread of Physicians and Medical Colleges in the U. S., so much so, that Physicians graduating at Medical Colleges are obliged to discountenance Proprietary Medicines, as through them the country doctor loses his most profitable practice. As a manufacturer of Proprietary Medicines, Dr. G. G. Green of Woodbury, N. J., advocates most cordially,—in order to prevent the risk that the sick and afflicted are liable to, almost daily by the use of Patent Medicines put out by inexperienced persons for aggrandizement only, and the employing of inexperienced and incompetent doctors by which almost every village and town is cursed; and men claiming to be doctors who had better be undertakers, experimenting with their patients and robbing them of their money and health,—for the good of the afflicted that our government protect its people by making laws to regulate the practice of medicine by better experienced and more thoroughly educated Physicians, and thereby keep up the honor and credit of the profession, also form laws for the recording of recipes for Proprietary Medicines, under examination and decision of experienced Chemists and Physicians appointed for that purpose by the Government, before they are licensed for general use. He would most freely place the recipe of Boschee's German Syrup and Green's August Flower under such laws, had he the proper protection, and thereby save the prejudice of the people, and avoid the competition and imitation of worthless medicines.—Copied from the Chicago Mail, Aug. 3, '87.

I have been a sufferer from catarrh for the past eight years. Having tried a number of remedies advertised as "sure cures" without obtaining any relief, I had resolved never to take any other patent medicines, when a friend advised me to try Ely's Cream Balm. I did so with great reluctance, but can now testify with pleasure that after using it for six weeks I believe myself cured. It is a most agreeable remedy—an invaluable balm.—Joseph Stewart, 624 Graud Ave., Brooklyn. 2w18

Advice to Mothers.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of Mrs. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. Mrs. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle. 1y23

THE VERDICT UNANIMOUS.

W. D. Sult, Druggist, Bippus, Ind., testifies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles, and was cured of Rheumatism of 10 years' standing." Abraham Hare, druggist, Bellville, Ohio, affirms: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my 20 years' experience, is Electric Bitters." Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys or Blood. Only a half dollar a bottle at LeGro & Lynde's Drug Store. 2

A WOMAN'S DISCOVERY.

"Another wonderful discovery has been made, and that too by a lady in this county. Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly, and could not sleep. She bought of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night and with one bottle has been miraculously cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus write W. C. Hamrich & Co., of Shelby, N. C.—Get a free trial bottle at LeGro & Lynde's Drug Store. 2

IN BRIEF, AND TO THE POINT.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existence. It is easy to put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Greens August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents. 2

LACE DEPARTMENT.

GREAT SALE OF BLACK LACES.

This lot of Black Laces which we offer at such a terrific reduction from former prices was purchased from a large importer to clean up his spring stock before he opened his fall goods. We bought nearly $500 (Five Hundred Dollars) worth for $100 (One Hundred Dollars). We have put the entire lot on sale at 6¼ cents. None of the patterns was sold for less than 25c. up to 50c. We also offer a lot of Fine Ornamental Laces at 15 cents. Never sold for less than 37½c. to 50c. In the purchase were 400 pieces

Wide Hamburgs Which we offer at 25 cents. The goods would bring in New York 37½ cents wholesale.

This is a Great Bargain.

SILK & VELVET DEPARTMENT.

We shall open this week our Fall Importation of SILKS AND VELVETS, without any doubt the largest assortment we have ever had the pleasure of offering to the Springfield public, and at prices much under Spring. Ladies who desire a BLACK SILK DRESS that will wear and give entire satisfaction, should call and examine those beautiful Black Rhadames, of our own importation, a make of goods which we warrant to our customers for six months. ELEGANT ASSORTMENT OF COLORED RHADAMES AT $1. Same quality sold in New York at $1.25 by one of the largest retail houses. BLACK AND COLORED FAILLES in all the most desirable shades for street and evening wear. The best value in the country at $1.25. Examine our stock of Silks before you make a purchase. We are positive we can save you money every time. Making our purchases direct with the manufacturers, we save the jobber's profit.

HOSIERY DEPARTMENT.

We beg to announce to the ladies of Springfield and vicinity that we shall offer the largest assortment of Foreign and Domestic Hosiery ever shown in this city. Our stock will embrace products of the best English, French and German manufactures, having been selected with special care that we should have nothing but goods suitable for first class trade. We shall also offer an immense stock of Ladies', Men's and Children's Merino and Wool Underwear, in all qualities, from the cheapest up to the finest goods imported. As a special bargain we shall offer about 75 dozen Ladies' and Men's Underwear from one of the best manufacturers. This was their entire stock of odds and ends, after the season's business. We offer a lot at $1 each, worth $1.50 to $3. We offer a lot of Men's Jersey Shirts, Double back and front. This is a lot of shirts that was made for the California market, and is just the thing for men that are at work out of doors. Every expressman should examine this shirt. After they are gone no more can be had in this market. We offer them at $1.50, which is just half-price.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.—HAMPDEN, ss. To George W. Ely, Constable of the Town of Palmer, Greeting.

In the name of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, you are hereby directed to notify and warn all the inhabitants of the town of Palmer qualified to vote in elections and town affairs to meet at the Town House in said Palmer, on Monday, the seventeenth day of October, current, at two o'clock p. m., to act upon the following articles, to-wit:

ARTICLE 1st. To choose a Moderator to preside at said meeting.

ART. 2d. To see if the town will vote to reconsider the vote of the last meeting, whereby they voted to raise twelve thousand dollars and purchase a lot and build a high school building thereon at the Depot village.

ART. 3d. To see if the town will vote to purchase the Methodist church building at the Four Corners, so called, and repair it for a high school and appropriate money for the same.

ART. 4th. To see if the town will vote to purchase a lot or lot and building in Thorndike, or Three Rivers, or any other part of the town, and build a high school building thereon, and appropriate money for the same.

ART. 5th. To choose committees and give them instructions.

ART. 6th. To see if the town will vote to raise and appropriate two hundred and fifty dollars, for grading and widening the hill on the Springfield road near Three Rivers.

ART. 7th. To see if the town will vote to allow individuals to enter their water closets and privy vaults into the town sewers.

And you are hereby directed to serve this warrant by posting up attested copies thereof at the different public places designated by the vote of the town, seven days, at least, before the holding of said meeting, and cause this warrant to be printed in the Palmer Journal, at least two issues before the holding of said meeting.

Hereof fail not, and make due return of this warrant, with your doings thereon, to the Town Clerk, on or before the holding of said Meeting.

Given under our hands this fifth day October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven.

DENTIST,

HATCH'S BLOCK, PALMER, MASS

Set to Music.

A "major" loved a maiden so,
His warlike heart was soft as Do.

He oft would kneel to her and say,
"Thou art my life my only Re.

"Ah! If but kinder thou wouldst be,
And sometimes sweetly smile on Mi.

"Thou art my life, my guiding star,
I love thee near, I love thee Fa.

"My passion I cannot control,
Thou art the idol of my Sol.

The maiden said: "Oh, fie, ask pa.
How can you go on thus? Oh, La!"

The "major" rose from bended knee,
And went her father for to Si.

The father thought no match was finer;
The "major" once had been a "minor."

They married soon, and after that Lived in ten rooms all on "one flat."

So happy ends the little tale,
For they lived on the grandest "scale."

MAME AND SADIE.

"Why, Mame, is this you?"

"Why, Sadie—is it possible?"

"How did you happen to get the seat next to mine?"

"I don't know, really. Brother Jack got the seat for me."

"How perfectly lovely!"

"Oh, perfectly so!"

"I've just been wondering who would sit next me; and to think it's you!"

"I'm ever so glad!"

"I'm more than glad. And I've a whole pound of caramels."

"And I've marshmallows in this package."

"How lovely?"

"It's too lovely to think of our having seats right together."

"I've dozens of things to tell you."

"And I you. And I don't care a bit for this old concert."

"Nor I. I only came because everybody else did, and because Madame Screamer is to wear two new costumes."

"Is she? How lovely! I'm so glad I came."

"So am I—particularly since you're here.'

"How good of you to say so."

"I've been counting the new spring bonnets."

"Have you? I counted nearly one hundred at our church yesterday."

"There are more than that here to-day. And some of them are just lovely. I'll show you where they are. There's one at the end of the first row on the left side of in the dress circle."

"Isn't it lovely?"

"Perfectly so!"

"Yes; and there comes Madame Screamer. How do you like her costume?"

"Do you like it?"

"No; not much."

"I think it is horrid.

"So do I. Do take some more caramels.

"I will if you'll take more of my marshmallows."

"Let us not stay any longer."

"Very well. We'll go out and look at the new bonnets in Madame Flower's windows."

"That'll be lovely."

"So it will."

And they go.

Which is "too lovely" for all who sat within fifteen feet of them.—Detroit Free Press.

CACOPHONY.

Like a katydid singing, a mandolin's ringing just two doors above with its "zum-zum-zum;" and out on the street half a dozen boys beat on the head of a cask for a big bass drum. In the room just below, at the big piano a maiden is playing the tra-la-le-loo; and the children up-stairs, in trios and pairs, are practicing songs that are noisy and new. And over it all, through kitchen and hall, too bass for a shriek and too shrill for a squall, like a caliope yowling, our Bridget is howling the one line she's mastered of "Lanigan's Ball." Oh, Phebus Apollo! they warble and holloa, they shriek up to Izzard and growl down to A; they start in the morning without any warning, and their second wind comes at the close of the day. Why the very deaf mute makes a noise with a flute, and a blind man see-saws on a loud violin; and people born dumb still can tinkle and strum on things that are rattling and noisy as sin. So their music and songs go it hammer and tongs, old women and maidens and old men and boys, and I'm mad with delight from morning to night—I was born in a mill and am fond of a noise.

WHAT AILED THE NEGRO.—The attention of the passengers in a Texas smoking car was riveted on a strangely acting negro. He rocked himself from side to side without ceasing.

"What's the matter with you?" asked Andy Faulkner, who was in the car.

"Does you know Dan McGary?"

"Of course I do."

"Well, sah, he sold me a silber watch for $20," continued the negro, still swaying from side to side, an' ef I stops movin' dis hear way de watch don't go no moah."—Texas Siftings.

TOBACCO AND THE EYES.—"Cigarette smoking is doing more injury to the eyes than anything I know of," said an optician recently to a reporter.

"Smoking pipes or cigars is bad enough, but there is something in the paper with which the cigarette is rolled that is very injurious to the eyesight. There are more men and boys wearing glasses now than I have ever known before, and I attribute it all to excess in tobacco smoking. Nine out of ten Germans wear spectacles. They are inveterate smokers."—New York Mail and Express.

A COMING POSITIVE.—"I ain't afraid of lightning any more. God sends the lightning, and God would not hurt me; He only sends it to take away the bad air."

The little one's brother, who was of a very practical turn of mind, and who had seen trees and houses that had been torn up and bruised by lightning, sniffed at this declaration by his sister, and remarked:

"I want you to understand that God is pretty careless sometimes!"—St. Albans Messenger.

The remarkable statement is made that out of 35,000 men between 18 and 40 years of age in Milwaukee only 531 are in English-speaking Protestant churches and 263 attend prayer meetings.

POND'S EXTRACT

VEGETABLE

PAIN DESTROYER.

Hemorrhages. Bleeding from the LUNGS, stomach, nose or from any cause is speedily controlled and stopped.

Sores, Ulcers, Wounds, Sprains and Bruises. It is cooling, cleansing and HEALING.

Catarrh. It is most efficacious for this disease, cold in the head, etc. POND'S EXTRACT CATARRH CURE, specially prepared to meet serious cases, should be applied with Pond's Extract Nasal Syringe.

Rheumatism, Neuralgia. No other preparation has cured more cases of these distressing complaints than the extract. POND'S EXTRACT PLASTER is invaluable in these diseases, Lumbago, Pains in the Back or Side, Etc.

Diphtheria, Sore Throat, use the EXTRACT promptly. Delay is dangerous.

Piles, Blind, Bleeding or Itching. It is the greatest known remedy; rapidly curing when other medicines have failed. POND'S EXTRACT OINTMENT is of great service where the removal of clothing is inconvenient.

For Broken Breast and Sore Nipples. Mothers who have once used The Extract will never be without it. Pond's Extract Ointment is the best emollient that can be applied.

Female Complaints. In the majority of female diseases The Extract can be used, as is well known, with the greatest benefit. Full directions accompany each bottle.

CAUTION.—POND'S EXTRACT has been imitated. The genuine has the words "POND'S EXTRACT" blown in the glass, and our picture trade-mark on surrounding buff wrapper. None other is genuine. Always insist on having Pond's Extract. Take no other preparation. It is never sold by bulk or by measure.

SULPHUR BITTERS

THE BEST AND PUREST MEDICINE EVER MADE.

TRUTHS FOR THE SICK.

It will drive the Humor from your system, and make your skin clean and smooth. Those Pimples and Blotches which mar your beauty are caused by impure blood, and can be removed in a short time, if you are wise and use the great blood purifier, SULPHUR BITTERS.

DON'T GIVE UP! What makes you tremble so? Your nerves are all unstrung, and need a gentle, soothing tonic to assist nature to repair the damage which your excesses have caused. Sulphur Bitters is NOT a cheap rum or poor whisky drink, to be taken by the glass, like other preparations, which stimulate only to destroy. Why suffer with Boils? Why rave with that terrible headache? Why lay and toss on that bed of pain with rheumatism?

If you have failed to receive any benefit from other medicines or doctors, do not despair. Use Sulphur Bitters. They will cure you when all others fail. No person can remain long sick who uses SULPHUR BITTERS.

The dose is small—only a teaspoonful. It is the best and cheapest medicine. Try it, and you will be satisfied. Get it of your druggist. Don't wait, get it at once. If you are suffering from Kidney Disease, and wish to live to old age, use Sulphur Bitters. They never fail to cure.

DRESS and WRAP TRIMMINGS

Are a marked specialty. Also, the latest and choicest novelties, a line exclusively his own, in Western Massachusetts, at prices defying competition.

LACES

Are Displayed in Profusion.

The hand-run Spanish Ficlus and Scarfs, Spanish Guipure Fichus and Scarfs, Black Chantilly Flouces with lace of various widths to match, Fedora laces, Point Gaze, Torchon, Medicis and Duchesse, together with the Duchesse and real Point Lace Handkerchiefs, make an array on which the eye feasts with pleasure.

Kid Gloves!

A Large Fall Importation.

Are opening splendidly. The variety in sizes, makes and colors, is extensive, and the rates are reasonable. There is no better kid glove than the "Alice Louise," Mr. Kinsman's own brand.

Hosiery

For Ladies, Misses, Boys and Babies,

Can be bought to advantage from a heavy stock, with many styles.

Merino Underwear

Has an Important Place

in the store, and the price and variety offered will be fully appreciated. Ladies' and Misses' Cotton Underwear is found in superior quality at figures like these:

CORSET COVERS, 25c. AND UPWARD.
NIGHTGOWNS, 25c. AND UPWARD.
DRAWERS, 25c. AND UPWARD.
SKIRTS, 38c. AND UPWARD.

CORSETS

are a prominent feature. "The C. P. a la Sirene," a celebrated French sewed corset, and the "Common Sense," a French woven corset, each has many admirers. Dr. Warner's corsets, the "Health," "Coraline," "Abdominal" and "Flexible Hip," are kept, with other popular makes.

Infants' Furnishing Goods

delight a mother's heart, and the Saxony bands, Sacques, Caps and Bonnets, embroidered Blankets and Skirts, with Long and Short Dresses of every description, demand careful attention.

Drapery Silks,

the latest styles and most desirable goods can be seen. The 27-inch China and 19-inch India Silks, the Surahs and Satins, the 18 and 24-inch plushes of every shade, the Black and Colored Velvets and Plain and Fancy Serims form an unrivalled assortment.

Art Embroidery Materials

are sold in greater variety than at any other fancy goods store outside the largest cities. This department contains a complete stock of "Columbia" Wools of the best quality.

Ribbons, Buttons, Notions

and small Wares do much to make the store attractive.

"Too Many of We."

"Mamma, is there too many of we,"
The little girl asked with a sigh,
"Perhaps you wouldn't be tired you see,
If a few of your childs should die."

She was only three years old—this one
Who spoke in that strange, sad way,
As she saw her mother's impatient frown
At the children's boisterous play.

There were a half-dozen who round her stood,
And the mother was sick and poor,
Worn out with the care of the noisy brood,
And the fight with the wolf at the door.

For a smile or a kiss no time, no place;
For the little one least of all;
And the shadow that darkened the mother's face,
O'er the young life seemed to fall.

More thoughtful than any, she felt more care,
And pondered in childish way
How to lighten the burden she could not share,
Growing heavier every day.

Only a week, and the little Claire
In her little white trundle-bed
Lay with her blue eyes closed and the sunny hair
Cut close from the golden head.

"Don't cry," she said—and the words were low,
Feeling tears that she could not see—
"You won't have to work and be tired so,
When there ain't so many of we."

And the dear little daughter who went away
From the home that for once was stilled,
Showed the mother's heart from dreary day,
What a place she had always filled.

—Woman's World.

A BALSAM PILLOW.

Now that fir needles and hemlock needles have become recognized articles of commerce, and every other shop boasts its row of fragrant cushions, with their inevitable motto, "Give me of thy balm, O fir tree," I am reminded of the first pillow of the sort that I ever saw, and of what it meant to the girl that made it. I should like to tell you the little story, simple as it is. It belongs to the time, eight on nine years since, before pine pillows became popular. Perhaps Chateaubriand Dorset may be said, for once in her life, to have set the fashion.

Yes, that was really her name! Her mother met with it in a newspaper, and without the least idea as to whether it appertained to man or woman, adopted it for her baby. The many syllables fascinated that odd joy in a piece of extravagance which costs nothing, which appeals to the thrifty New England nature, and is one of its wholesome outlets and indulgences.

So the Methodist elder baptized the child "Chateaubriand," making very queer work of the unfamiliar accents; and then, so far as practical purposes are concerned the name ceased to be. How can a busy household, with milk to set and milk to skim, and pans to scald, and butter to make, and pigs to feed, find time for a name like that? "Baby" the little girl was called till she was well settled on her feet and had the use of her little tongue. Then she became "Brie," and Brie Dorset she remained to the end. Few people recollected that she possessed any other name, unless the marriage, birth and death pages of the Bible happened to be under discussion.

The Dorsets' was one of those picturesque, lonely, outlying farms, past which people drive in summer, saying, "How retired! how peaceful!" but past which almost no one drives in winter. It stood, with its environment of red barns and apple orchards, at the foot of a low granite cliff whose two enormous elm trees met over its roof, and made a checker work of light and shade on its closely blinded front. No sign of life appeared to the city people who drew their horses in to admire the situation, except, perhaps, a hen scratching in the vegetable beds, or a lazy cat basking on the doorstep, and they would drive on, unconscious that behind the slats of the green blinds above a pair of eyes watched them go, and a hungry young heart contrasted their lot with its own.

Hungry! There never was anything like the starvation which goes on sometimes in those shut-up farm houses. Boys and girls feel it alike; but the boys are less to be pitied, for they can usually devise means to get away.

How could Brie get away? She was the only child. Her parents had not married young. When she was nineteen, they seemed almost elderly people, so badly does life on a bleak New England farm deal with human beings. Her mother, a frail little woman, grew year by year less fit for hard labor. The farm was not productive. Poverty, pinch, the inevitable recurrence of the same things to be done day after day, month after month, the same needs followed by the same fatigues—all these Brie had to bear; and all the while the child had that love and longing for the beautiful which is part of the artist's equipment, and the deprivation of which is keen suffering. Sweet sights, sounds, smells—all these she craved, and could get only in such measure as her daily work enabled her to get them from that world of nature which is the satisfaction of eager hearts to whom all other pleasures are denied.

The fir wood on the upper hill was the temple where she worshipped. There she went with her Bibles on Sunday afternoons, with her patching and stocking mending on other days. There she dreamed her dreams and prayed her prayers—and while there she was content. But all too soon would come the sound of the horn blown from below, or a call from the house, "Brie, Brie, the men are coming to supper; make haste!" and she would be forced to hurry back to the workaday world.

Harder times followed. When she was just twenty her father fell from his loaded hay wagon, and fractured his thigh. There was no cure for the hurt, and after six months of hopeless tendance he died. Brie and her mother were left together on the lonely farm, with the added burden of a large bill for doctoring and medicine, which pressed like a heavy weight on their honorable hearts.

The hired man, Reuben Hall, was well-disposed and honest, but before Mr. Dorset's death, he began to talk of going to the West, and Brie foreboded that he might not be willing to stay with them. Mrs. Dorset, broken down by nursing and sorrow, had become an invalid, unable to assist in the lightest ways. The burden was sore for one pair of young shoulders to bear. Brie kept up a brave face by day, but at night horrors of helplessness and apprehension seized her. The heavens seemed as brass, against which her feeble prayers beat in vain; the future was barred as it were with an impassable gate.

What could they do? Sell the farm? That would take time; for no one in particular wanted to buy it. If Reuben would stand by them, they might be able to fight out another year, and, with butter and eggs and the corn crop, make enough for his wages and a bare living. But would Reuben stay?

Our virtues sometimes treat us as investments do, and return a dividend when we least expect it. It was at this hard crisis that certain good deeds of Brie's in the past stood her friend. She had always been good to Reuben, and her sweet ways and consideration for his comfort had gradually won a passage into his rather stolid affection. Now, seeing the emergency she was in, and the courage with which she met it, he could not quite find the heart to "leave the little gal to make out by herself." Fully purposing to go, he stayed, putting off the idea of departure from month to month, and though true to his idea of proper caution, he kept his good intentions to himself so that the relief of having him there was constantly tempered by the dread lest he might go at any time; still it was a relief.

So April passed, and May and June. The crops were planted, the vegetables in. Brie strained every nerve. She petted her hens and coaxed every possible egg out of them; she studied the tastes of the two cows, she maintained a brave show for her ailing mother, but all the time she was sick at heart. Everything seemed closing in. How long could she keep it up?

The balsam firs of the hill grove could have told tales in those days. They were Brie's sole confidants. The consolation they gave, the counsel they communicated, were mute indeed, but none the less real to the anxious girl who sat beneath them, or laid her cheek on their rough stems. June passed, and with early July came the answer to Brie's many prayers. It came, as answers to prayers often do, in a shape of which she had never dreamed.

Miss Mary Morgan, teacher in Grammar school No. 3, Ward 19, of the good city of Boston, came, tired out from her winter's work, to spend a few days with Farmer Allen's wife, her second cousin, stopping one day at the Dorset's door, while driving, to ask for a drink of water, took a fancy to the old house and to Brie, and next day came over to propose herself as a boarder for three months.

"I can only afford to pay seven dollars a week," she said; "but on the other hand, I will try not to make much trouble, if you will take me."

"Seven dollars a week; only think!" cried Brie, gleefully, to her mother, after the bargain was completed, and Miss Morgan gone. "Doesn't it seem like a fortune? It'll pay Reuben's wages, and leave ever so much over! And she doesn't eat much meat, she says, and she likes baked potatoes and cream and sweet baked apples better than anything. And there's the keeping room chamber all cleaned and ready. Doesn't it seem as if she was sent to us, mother?"

"Your poor father never felt like keeping boarders," said Mrs. Dorset. "I used to kind of like the idea of it, but he wasn't willin'. I thought it would be company to have one in the house, if they was nice folks. It does seem as if this was the Lord's will for us; her coming is so unexpected and all."

Two days later Miss Morgan with a hammock and a folding canvas chair and a trunk full of light reading arrived, and took possession of her new quarters. For the first week or two she did nothing but rest, sleeping for hours at a time in the hammock swung beneath the shadowing elms. Then, as the color came back to her thin face and the light to her eyes, she began to walk a little, to sit with Brie in the fir grove, or read aloud to her on the doorstep while she mended, shelled peas or picked over berries, and all life seemed to grow easier and pleasanter for the dwellers in the solitary farmhouse. The guest gave little trouble, she paid her weekly dues punctually, and the steady income, small as it was, made all the difference in the world to Brie.

As the summer went by and she grew at home with her friend, she found much relief in confiding to her the perplexities of her position.

"I see," Miss Morgan said, "it is the winter that is the puzzle. I will engage to come back next summer as I have this, and that will help along; but the time between now and then is the difficulty."

"Yes," replied Brie; "the winter is the puzzle, and Reuben's money. We have plenty of potatoes and corn and vegetables to take us through, and there's the pig to kill, and the chickens will lay some; if only there were any way in which I could make enough for Reuben's wages, we could manage."

"I must think it over," said Miss Morgan.

She pulled a long branch of the balsam fir nearer as she spoke, and buried her nose in it. It was the first week of September, and she and Brie were sitting in the hill grove.

"I love this smell so," she said. It is delicious. It makes me dream."

Brie broke off a bough.

"I shall hang it over your bed," she said, "and you will smell it all night."

So the fir bough hung upon the wall till it gradually yellowed and the needles began to drop.

"Why they are as sweet as ever—sweeter," declared Brie, smelling a handful which she had swept from the floor. Then an idea came into her head.

She gathered a great fagot of the branches and laid them to dry in the sun on the floor of a little-used piazza. When partly dried, she stripped off the needles, stuffed with them a square cotton bag, and made for that a cover of soft sage green silk, with an odd shot pattern over it. It was a piece of what had been her grandmother's wedding gown.

Voila! Do you realize the situation, reader? Brie had made the first of the many balsam pillows. It was meant for a good-bye gift to Miss Morgan.

"Your cushion is the joy of my life," wrote that lady to her a month after she went home. "Every one who sees it, falls in love with it. Half a dozen people have asked me how they could get one like it. And, Brie, this has given me an idea. Why should you not make them for sale? I will send you up some pretty silk for the covers, and you might cross-stitch a little motto if you liked. I will copy some for you. Two people have given me an order already. They will pay four dollars apiece if you like to try."

This suggestion was the small wedge of the new industry. Brie lost no time in making the two pillows, grandmother's gown fortunately holding out for their covers. Then came some pretty red silk from Miss Morgan, with yellow filoselle for the mottoes, and more orders. Brie worked busily that winter, for her balsam pillows had to be made in spare moments when other work permitted. The grove on the hill was her unfailing treasury of supply. The thick-set twigs bent them to her will; the upper branches seemed to rustle as with satisfaction at the aid they were giving. In the spring the old trees renewed their foliage with vigorous will, as if resolved not to balk her in her purpose.

The fir grove paid Reuben's wages that winter. Miss Morgan came back the following June, and by that time balsam pillows were established as articles of commerce, and Brie had a munificent offer from a recently established Decorative Art Society for a supply of needles, at three dollars a pound. It was hard, dirty work to prepare such a quantity, but she did not mind that.

As I said, this was some years since. Brie no longer lives in her old home. Her mother died the third year after Miss Morgan came to them, the farm is sold, and Brie married. She lives now on a ranch in Colorado, but she has never forgotten the fir grove, and the memory of it is a help often in the desponding moments that come at times to all lives.

"I could not be worse off than I was then," she says to herself. "There seemed no help or hope anywhere. I felt as if God didn't care and didn't hear my prayers, and yet, all the time, there was dear Miss Morgan coming to help us, and there were the trees, great, beautiful things, nodding their heads, and trying to show me what could be made out of them. No, I never will be faithless again, nor let myself doubt, however dark things may look, but remember my balsam pillows, and trust in God."—Congregationalist.

NEW DESIGNS IN TABLE WARE.—In milk and water pitchers a pleasing design is in the shape of a powder horn.

A leaf of Roman lettuce, in which lies a cherry, makes an appropriate olive dish.

A unique design in dessert plates of royal Worcester ware represents a folded napkin.

Bowls, plates and dishes in Novo ware, beautifully figured, promise to become popular.

Bread and milk sets, consisting of a bowl and cup with two mouths, like those of a pitcher, are recent additions to supper services.—Jeweller's Weekly.

In this age of progress, girls, as well as boys, have the opportunity of developing their muscular as well as their mental faculties. The following athletic sports for ladies could hardly offend even Mrs. Grundy:—

Jumping at conclusions.
Walking round a subject.
Running through a novel.
Skipping dull descriptions.
Throwing the hatchet; and, during the holidays,
Boxing the ears of troublesome younger brothers.—Irish Cyclist.

A Boston Sunday-school teacher was endeavoring to impress upon the minds of her little pupils the necessity of good behavior. "You must be very careful how you act," said she, "for if you act badly you will be punished, while if you act good you will be rewarded. Now, my dears, can any one tell me what he will get if he acts well?" A bright little fellow, whose father was an actor, replied: "Det talled before de turtain, I dess."—Budget.

Mother—My little girl goes to sleep so nicely every night when I sing to her! Isn't that so, Mamie?

Mamie—Yes, that's so, ma. The mother leaves the room for a moment, and Mamie says to the visitor: Don't tell ma, but I only make out that I am asleep to get her to stop singing; she sings so awful bad.—Texas Siftings.

A merchant at Allegan, Mich., keeps a "thief account," wherein every thing missed is recorded, and the first person caught stealing goods is required to pay for the whole to escape prosecution. Recently a woman caught nabbing a 50-cent pair of leggins was called on to square the account, which amounted to $5.

"Why don't you hold up your head as I do?" asked an aristocratic lawyer of a sterling old farmer.

"Squire," said the farmer, "look at that field of grain. You see that all the valuable heads are bowed down, while those that have nothing in them stand upright."

Reversed.—Young Planty—"I did order them with high collars, Biles, but these are weally too beastly high, y' knaw." Biles—"My dear sir, you've got the shirt on upside down."—Tid Bits.

Summer Ended.

Ah, soon the waves will wash away
The footprints on the shining sand,
And soon the autumn winds will stray
In sadness o'er the silent strand.
The sea will mourn the absent fair
Who tossed its hoary locks in glee,
But I shall ever with me bear
The picture of that summer sea.

The sea that brings the laden ships
With sheeny silks and spice and gold
Hath left all gifts in sad eclipse
That may be valued, bought or sold.
The sea, true to her mystic past,
As taught in grave mythology,
From out her breast in rapture cast
My queen of love from out the sea.

What fate allured my truant feet
To wander by the restless wave,
As Venus rose, so dazzling, sweet,
To hold me as a willing slave?
A thousand other paths diverged—
To walk in them my soul was free;
What blessed impulse kindly urged
My fateful path beside the sea?

Let Neptune and his tritons rave;
Their queen of love hath crossed the sand
And left for aye the rolling wave
To walk beside me hand in hand.
And when the autumn time of age
Shall merge into eternity,
Still bright shall be on memory's page
That summer time beside the sea.

MRS. BIBBINS'S SOCIAL POSITION.

Wal, the minute I sot down, before I begun my business or anything' Mis' Pettingill took me to do about puttin' in Mis' Bibbins president of our missionary society for the relief of indignant heathen. The Bibbinses are good, very good, but poor. Says Mis' Pettingill: "It seems to me as if there might be some other woman put in, that would have had more influence on the church."

Says I, "Hain't Mis' Bibbins a good Christian, sister, and a great worker?"

"Why yes, she wuz good, good, good in her place. "But," she said, "the Pettingills hadn't never associated with the Bibbinses."

And I asked her if she s'posed that would make any difference with the heathen; if the heathen would be apt to think less of Mis' Bibbins because she hadn't associated with the Pettingills?

And she said, "she didn't suppose the heathens would ever know it; it might make some difference to 'em if they did," she thought, "for it couldn't be denied," she said, "that Mis' Bibbins did not move in the first circles of Jonesville."

It had been my doin's a puttin' Mis' Bibbins in, and I took it right to home, she meant to have me, and I asked her if she thought the Lord would condemn Mis' Bibbins on the last day, because she hadn't moved in the first circles of Jonesville?"

And Mis' Pettingill tossed her head a little, but had to own up that she thought "he wouldn't."

"Wall then," sez I, "do you s'pose the Lord has any objections to her workin' for Him now?"

"Why, no, I don't know as the Lord would object."

"Wall," says I, "we call this work the Lord's work, and if he is satisfied with Mis' Bibbins, we ort to be.—From "Samantha at Saratoga.

A KIND VOICE.

There is no power of love so hard to get and keep as a kind voice. A kind hand is deaf and dumb. It may be rough in flesh and blood, yet do the work of a soft heart, and do it with a soft touch. But there is no one thing than love so much needs as a sweet voice to tell what it means and feels; and it is hard to get and keep it in the right tone. One must start in youth, and be on the watch night and day, at work and play, to get and keep a voice that shall speak at all times the thoughts of a kind heart. But this is a time when a sharp voice is apt to be got. You often hear boys and girls say words at play with a sharp, quick tone, as if it were the snap of a whip. When one of them gets vexed you will hear a voice that sounds as if it were made up of a snarl, a whine and a bark. It is often in youth that one gets a voice or a tone that is sharp, and sticks to him through life, and stirs up ill will and grief, and falls like a drop of gall on the sweet joys of home. Watch it day by day as a pearl of great price, for it will be worth more to you in days to come than the best pearl hid in the sea. A kind voice is to the heart what light is to the eye. It is a light that sings as well as shines. Train it to sweet tones now, and it will keep its tone through life. —Elihu Burritt.

Young Wife—O, Mr. Jones, I'm sorry Tom brought you home to dinner to-day. If he had told me you were coming I'd have had something nice, and I haven't a thing in the house fit to eat. Mr. Jones—Now, please don't say a word about it, my dear madam. You needn't worry yourself a particle. I take the most of my meals at home myself.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Pocket warmers are a new device for keeping the hands warm. A warmer is composed of a tin box an inch in diameter and six inches long, holding a fuse of slow burning material which burns for more than an hour without smoke or gas. The warmer is put in a pocket or carried in a muff.

Germany expends three times as much for purposes of war as for instruction; England four times as much; France eleven, and Russia thirty-one. Of all the countries in the world America is the only one which expends more for instruction than for war.

"Ma," said an inquisitive little girl, "will rich and poor folks live together when they go to Heaven?" "Yes, my dear, they will be all alike there." "Then, ma, why don't rich and poor associate together here?" The mother did not answer.

A foolish friend does more harm than a wise enemy.

SHE KNEW HIS HABITS.

"Seen anything of my husband?" demanded a Sioux Falls woman, one day last week, of an officer in front of the post office.

"No, ma'am; has he mysteriously disappeared?"

"Naw! he came down town the same as usual this morning, but dinner has been ready an hour and its getting cold and he isn't back yet."

"You have been to his office, I suppose?"

"No, sir, I haven't. I've no time to fool away looking for him there. Say, is there a sick horse at any of the livery stables?"

"Not that I know of."

"Been any dog fights around lately?"

"Haven't heard of any."

"Any ten-cent show or targret gun in town?"

"All gone, madam."

Any man in a wagon around town selling brass jewelry?"

"Guess not."

"No fire anywhere in town?"

"No."

"No pools being sold anywhere on some horse race, or trial going on in a justice court?"

"Not any."

"No man selling medicine on the street, no circus bills just posted up anywhere, no woman walking a tight rope?"

"Not a one."

"Well, that's peculiar—I can't see where John can be."

"There's a couple of Frenchmen with a tame cinnamon bear down on Phillips avenue, madam."

"That's it, that's it—I didn't think to ask about tame bears! While the potatoes are getting cold as stone, he is down there making up a purse of seventy-five cents to see the bear climb a telegraph pole! I'll go right down—you watch and see if he is not up to the house inside of ten minutes!" —Dakota Bell.

BILLY FLORENCE'S TEMPERANCE SERMON.

Oliver Lucas, the clerk of the board of aldermen of Louisville, has recently received the following communication from his friend the actor:

MY DEAR OLL:—One gallon of whisky costs about $3 and contains about 65 fifteen cent drinks. Now, if you must drink buy a gallon and make your wife the barkeeper. When you are dry give your wife 15 cents for a drink, and when the whisky is gone she will have, after paying for it, $6.75 left, and every gallon thereafter will yield the same profit. This money she should put away, so that when you have become an inebriate, unable to support yourself and shunned by every respectable man, your wife may have money enough to keep you until your time comes to fill a drunkard's grave.

A WOEFUL HISTORY.—Two friends are walking along the street. One of them, pointing to a house, says:

"There's a beautiful place, but it's enough to make a man sad to look at it."

"Why so?"

"On account of its history; for, despite its calm and serene surroundings, it was built upon the groans, tears, wailings and blood of widows, orphans, old men and struggling women."

"You don't say so. Was it built by a railroad monopolist?"

"Oh, no; by a dentist."—Arkansaw Traveller.

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 21, 1887.

THE ways of Providence become all the more inscrutable as we are again forced to realize that during another long and dreary winter the national game must be suspended, and life thus robbed of one of its most delightful charms.

MAYOR MAYNARD of Springfield has signified his desire to retire from office at the end of the present term. He has given such general satisfaction that there is evidently a strong feeling that his services should be secured, if possible, for another year.

H. C. BLISS of Springfield, who has been appointed assistant attorney-general by Mr. Waterman, is known as a capable, studious young lawyer, and he will be sure to discharge the duties of his office with credit, and in a manner that will fully justify the confidence of his friends.

THE new law officer of the commonwealth takes to club dinners and speech-making as naturally as a Prohibitionist takes to water. He proves to be a fairly good talker, and evidently appreciates the importance to the state (and himself) of Republican success at the approaching election.

THE importance of averting the dire disaster predicted by Senator Hoar in the event the differences which exist among the Worcester county Republicans are not speedily harmonized, must be readily conceded. When compared, however, with the alternative of Senator Hoar, ex-Congressman Rice and Judge Thayer falling down and worshipping the arrogant boss which the rank and file are determined to set up, it may be regarded with a reasonable degree of complacency.

IN selecting Lawyer Lathrop to succeed Col. Phillips as senator from the 1st Hampden district, the Republicans have made no mistake. Mr. Lathrop has already seen service in both branches of the Legislature, and consequently is not without experience in the duties he will be called upon to discharge. He is a good lawyer, a graceful and fluent speaker, and in point of ability will be sure to rank above the average of Western Massachusetts senators. His popularity with both parties will insure his election beyond any question.

NO new facts of any importance have come to light in the investigations which the Stafford banks are now undergoing. The National bank has gone into the hands of a receiver, and it is quite clear that its capital stock has been entirely wiped out. It seems improbable, however, that an assessment will be required to meet any losses for which the bank could be held responsible. So far as at present appears the Savings bank is not seriously involved, and the loss there is not likely to be so great as to affect the depositors to any considerable extent.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND is still on his pilgrimage through the Western and Southern states. Wherever he has stopped large crowds have turned out to see him, the greetings have been hearty, and the enthusiasm almost unbounded. In most of the cities he has visited he has favored the people with a little speech in which his peculiar knowledge of their early history has been utilized to good advantage. It can hardly be claimed that the attention which is shown the President is due in any large degree to his personal popularity. A considerable share of it results from the great respect that is everywhere felt for the office which he holds, while for a still greater share idle curiosity alone is amply sufficient to account.

WHATEVER mystery has surrounded the Dexter bank tragedy has by no means been entirely cleared up by the recent disclosures of Charles F. Stain. There is something very remarkable about the story of this young man, and the inconsistencies which have thus far been pointed out are hardly sufficient to prove that it was manufactured out of whole cloth. His statements tend very strongly to show that the men whom he charges with Barron's murder are familiar with the place, and were actually seen there at the time the murder was committed. This new sensation will doubtless lead to a thorough investigation, and, it is hoped, to a discovery of some important facts bearing upon this strange case.

THE simple faith and patience of the Massachusetts Democracy cannot fail to challenge admiration. Its enthusiasm is perenial. Defeat never dampens its ardor or darkens the glowing sunlight which fills its cheerful heart. After each repulse it rallies with renewed vigor, and marches from one disaster to another with a firm step and a courage that can never be subdued. Having made its nominations for the fall campaign, the big meeting was regarded as the next thing in order, and the eloquence of its orators, with the aid of martial music, have again been called into service to encourage the faithful, and inspire an abiding confidence among the new recruits. On the eve of election the bosom of every true Democrat is filled with hope and expectation. It is only when the returns come in that he is able to realize the full import of what the wise man said upon the subject of vanity.

AT the Republican convention at Chester on Wednesday, James R. Dunbar of Westfield was handsomely nominated for the office of district attorney for the western district. Mr. Dunbar recently served two terms in the state Senate, and made quite a reputation as a level-headed, able young man. He already holds the office for which he has just been nominated, having been appointed by the governor to fill out Mr. Waterman's unexpired term. He is a good lawyer and possesses excellent qualifications for the delicate duties of his new office. W. H. Brooks of Holyoke, who was Mr. Dunbar's only competitor in the convention, would doubtless have developed more strength than was indicated by the vote had it not been generally understood by the delegates that the latter was certain to secure the nomination. There was at least one obstacle in the way of Mr. Brooks's success which in the nature of things it was quite impossible to overcome. Holyoke was not within the limits of Congressman Rockwell's district.
